MISS CRUIKSHANK CHARMING BRIDE

CEREMONY AT HOME

Rev. Drs. E. L. Stoddard and J. S. Zelie Officiate—In Presence of 100 Guests—Couple to Live at Brookline.

Miss Helen Moore Cruikshank, daughter of Simeon Ayres Cruikshank, of this city, and John Nelson Jewett, son of Mrs. Edward R. Jewett, of Cherryfield, Maine, were married at 6 o'clock last night at the home of the bride's father. Rev. Dr. E. L. Stoddard, former rector of St. John's Episcopal church, Jersey City, performed the ceremony, assisted by Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, an uncle of the bridegroom. There were about one hundred guests at the wedding and the reception which followed.

The bride wore a gown of white crepe de chine, embroidered and heavily trimmed with rose point lace, and a veil of tulle with rose point lace and orange blossoms. She carried a large bouquet of lilies of the valley and white roses, so arranged that as she passed through an aisle formed by ten young women, school friends, she presented each one with a rose, as well as Mary Elizabeth Stockton, the flower girl, and her sister, Mrs. H. Reeve Stockton. Roger Vreeland, a cousin of the bride, was a page. The flower girl was dressed in white and carried flowers, and six of the young women attendants were gowned in white and the other four wore their wedding gowns. They held roping of smilax as they formed an aisle.

The ten attendants were Miss Helen Lancaster, of New York; Miss Helen C. Jewett, of Cherryfield, Maine; Mrs. Douglas C. Anderson, Mrs. Frederick T. VanAuken, Miss Marguerite Carpenter, of this city; Miss Louise Gillette, of Minneapolis, Minn.; Miss Grace Battles, of Philadelphia; Miss Catherine Cushing, of Chicago; Mrs. Joseph H. Clark, of Flushing, L. I., and Mrs. Joseph Francis Weller, of Rochester, N. Y. H. Reeve Stockton, brother-in-law of the bride, was the best man.

The wedding marches and the music for the reception which followed was furnished by a string orchestra. After the ceremony congratulations were offered and an elaborate wedding supper was served. The bride was the recipient of a large collection of costly gifts. The bridegroom's gift to the bride was a diamond pin.

During the evening the couple left on a wedding trip. They will reside in Brookline, Mass. Mr. Jewett is a graduate of the University of Maine, Class '09, and is now associated with the Boston firm of Fisher & Bryant, foresters. Mrs. Jewett during her residence here has been prominent in the younger society set, is fond of athletics and is especially clever as a horsewoman.

COURT GIVES YOUTH ONE MORE CHANCE

Edward Murphy, Jr., Violated Parole—A Short Weight Man is Fined $10.

Somerville, March 1.—Edward Murphy, Jr., of North Plainfield, arrested about a year ago for breaking, entering and larceny, and who at that time was sentenced to pay a fine of $25 and to remain under probation for two years, was surrendered yesterday by the probation officer. Murphy had failed to live up to his promise to abstain from drinking, cigarette smoking, etc., and he had only paid $3.25 on his fine. After giving the youth a severe lecture Judge Case decided to give him another chance and again placed him in charge of the probation officer, with the understanding that if he was brought before him again he would either send him to State prison or the Reform School.

Joseph Massler, of Raritan, was fined $10 and costs yesterday in the Somerset county courts, at Somerville, by Judge Case for using a pair of scales which had been condemned by the county superintendent of weights and measures.

MAY DEFER ACTION ON BOROUGH BUDGET

Special Finance Committee Wants Nothing Done Until its Work is Completed.

The Borough's Special Finance Committee met last night in the Somerset school building to discuss results of its investigation of North Plainfield's finances, and although the various sub-committees all reported progress none had completed its work.

A resolution offered by S. St. John McCutchen, one of the members of the committee representing the citizens, was adopted requesting the Board of Education and the Council to defer action on their budgets for the ensuing year until the final report of the finance committee had been submitted. Mr. McCutchen also suggested that members of the board and Council advise the citizens' committee of any economies which could be successfully practised.

On motion of Assistant State Commissioner of Education J. B. Betts, a resolution was adopted authorizing George T. Rogers, chairman of the joint committee, to appoint three citizens to whom the reports of other members of the committee may be submitted and joined into one general statement. Mr. Rogers appointed Mr. Betts, C. W. McCutchen and S. St. John McCutchen.

The next meeting of the committee will be subject to the call of the chairman.

ALL DOGS MUST BE KEPT TIED UP NOW

Mayor's Order Prompted by Fact Dr. R. W. Meeker's Canine Had Rabies.

Learning that an Irish terrier belonging to Dr. Robert W. Meeker, of 527 Belvidere avenue, had been afflicted with rabies, Mayor Percy H. Stewart, this morning issued a proclamation against allowing dogs to run at large. Dr. Meeker's canine had been bitten by a dog about a week ago and its owner, noticing that he was frothing at the mouth, yesterday, summoned Dr. H. E. Winters, a veterinary surgeon, who chloroformed the animal.

According to a statement made to a Daily Press reporter at the Meeker home this morning, the dog was in a fight with some other dogs about a week ago and his ear was badly bitten. The owner immediately took the precaution of tying the animal in the cellar, where he remained until put to death.

That another dog in the Netherwood section is possessed of the deadly disease is probable, and therefore Mayor Stewart ordered all owners of dogs to tie their animals and keep them under watch to see if rabies develop.

The Mayor's order in part says: "No dog shall leave the premises of its owner or custodian unless securely confined upon a leash and accompanied by a person over the age of twelve years." The order will remain in effect until November 1.

FOR ELECTRICAL INSPECTOR HERE

Councilmanic Fire Committee Considers Plan to Create Another Office.

DISCUSS AUTO-ENGINE

Decide to Purchase More Hose—Applicants for Two "Movies" Theatre Building Permits Appear and Present Their Arguments.

The advisability of the municipality employing an electrical inspector whose duty it shall be to inspect all electric wiring and electric appliances of every description throughout the city was discussed last night at a meeting of the Councilmanic fire committee. There is sufficient work of this character, the councilmen consider, to require the services of one man, independent of the building inspector, who, owing to his many other duties, cannot find time to attend to all of this particular work. No definite decision was reached, but it is likely that the committee may make some recommendation to the Common Council in the near future.

There was also some discussion about the purchase of a powerful automobile engine, but at present it cannot be determined whether a sufficient appropriation can be secured for this purpose. It was decided to purchase an additional 1,000 feet of new hose.

Harry Dreier, representing promoters for a moving picture theatre on West Front street, and William H. Abbott, who is interested in a similar proposition on East Front street, appeared before the committee and discussed at considerable length their plans, but no decision was reached in this matter.

As previously stated, both Mr. Dreier and Mr. Abbott want changes made in the building code to cover their respective plans, which, in their opinion, at present is too drastic. It has been proposed to offer a supplement to the code which would cover the construction and operation of moving picture theatres, but this is still in the hands of the committee.

The Councilmanic finance committee also met last night and discussed matters pertaining to the budget. The various committees of the Council are trying to decide upon the amount of money needed for their departments and these are reported to the finance committee, whose duty it is to make the appropriation fair and equitable. Mayor Percy H. Stewart met with the committee last night.

There were many beautiful floral tributes from relatives and friends. The burial was in Hillside cemetery and the honorary pall-bearers were George H. Batchelor, L. W. Randolph, E. L. Bonny, W. H. P. KIDNAPPING CASE COMES TO AN END

WIFE WON'T PROSECUTE

End of a Struggle Between Couple Which Was Waged in Two States for Custody of Their Child Now Dead.

Gyunla de Festetics, of this city, who was indicted on August 20, 1907, for kidnapping his eight-year-old son, Dwight de Festetics, was released from the obligation of his $1,000 bail bond by Judge Mulqueen in Part I, of the Court of General Sessions in New York yesterday. The bail discharge was but a preliminary to a dismissal of the case against the count. The step was recommended by Assistant District Attorney Perkins, with the approval and consent of District Attorney Whitman. The child has died since the memorable flight with his father, and, according to the written recommendations of Mr. Perkins filed yesterday, the wife, who calls herself a countess, no longer wishes to prosecute the case against her husband.

The boy was with his mother in New York when he disappeared. He was subsequently found in New Jersey, but the Governor of this State refused to honor extradition papers made out at the instance of the authorities of New York. According to the paper filed by the Assistant District Attorney in New York yesterday, the husband took his son to New Jersey to procure treatment for haemophilea, with which the lad was afflicted. It was alleged that the mother of the boy was a Christian Scientist and the father did not think that the treatment of this cult was adequate for the boy's affliction.

After the death of the child, Mr. de Festetics went back to New York and surrendered himself to the authorities. He was released on a bond of $1,000 signed by the National Surety Company.

Yesterday's discharge of the bail bond was construed to be the beginning of the end of the count's troubles over the recovery of his child.

Mr. de Festetics said today that the agreement to withdraw the kidnapping charge had been reached over a month ago.

YOUTHFUL JOY RIDER IS AGAIN HELD IN BAIL

Arraigned before City Judge De Meza this morning, charged by Andrew McCardell, of 816 West Seventh street, with using his automobile without permission on Wednesday, February 13, when he caused two accidents on the Warrenville road, injuring five persons and reducing the machine to wreckage, Bradford Blauvelt, seventeen years old, of 108 Central avenue, pleaded guilty and was held in $300 bail to await the action of the grand jury. Bonds were furnished by Mrs. Emma Johnson, with whom he lives. Blauvelt is now held under bonds of $1,000 on various charges as the result of the accidents he is said to have caused.

The youthful offender will be arraigned again tonight in the Watchung court before Justice of the Peace Hughes on the charges of assault preferred by Mr. and Mrs. Drummond, of Springdale, who, with their seven-year-old daughter, Helen, were occupants of the first carriage the auto which Blauvelt was driving struck on the Warrenville road on the night of his wild ride.

ELOPING HUSBAND WAIVES INDICTMENT

Wife Forgives Foley Who Will Be Sentenced by Judge Connolly Next Friday.

Frank B. Foley, who deserted his wife in Poughkeepsie, N. Y., eloping with a widow, Mrs. Etta Wood, and was arrested Friday, January 8, at 17 Grove street, waived indictment when arraigned before Judge Connolly in the County Court, Elizabeth, yesterday afternoon. He will be sentenced on Friday, March 7. With Foley and Mrs. Wood when arrested, was the former's seven-year-old son, Kenneth, who told the police tales of cruelty. The little fellow said he was compelled to call Mrs. Wood, "mother."

Mrs. Foley, who came to this city to assist in the prosecution of her husband, has been making her home in Elizabeth and has been visiting her spouse whenever permitted. Her bitterness toward him has entirely disappeared and she is now doing everything in her power to have him liberated on a suspended sentence, the police say. She has appealed to Probation Officer Major Charles Irwin for assistance in accomplishing her purpose and both pleaded with Judge Connolly yesterday to show leniency.

It is considered probable, however, that their urgings will be in vain.

WANT TUTTLE FOR THE GOVERNORSHIP

Elizabeth Democratic Assn. Would Have Him Enter Race for Nomination.

Elizabeth, March 1.—The Jeremiah P. McNamara Association, a downtown Democratic club, has adopted resolutions calling on Congressman William E. Tuttle, Jr., of Westfield, to declare himself in the race for Governor. A committee has been appointed to see Mr. Tuttle.

There was some sentiment among the members for Senator Fielder, but it has not materialized sufficiently to lead to formal action.

The club's leaders are not in accord regarding the Gubernatorial situation, hence the action on Tuttle is believed to be no more than a temporary expedient.

Resolutions calling on the Legislature to purchase Washington Rock, in Somerset county, for historic purposes have been adopted by the club.

The resolutions are:

"Whereas, At the next general election the voters of this State will elect a Governor; and

"Whereas, Several Democratic candidates have announced their candidacy and many other worthy Democrats are being prominently spoken of as fitted to uphold Democratic principles and to fill the position with honor to themselves and credit to Democracy; and

"Whereas, We believe that due consideration should be given to the several candidates, that the one selected as the choice of this association may be, as was his predecessor, the Honorable Woodrow Wilson, of Presidential size; and

"Whereas, We feel that the honor to furnish the candidate of the Democracy in the coming election rightfully belongs to Union county; therefore be it

"Resolved, That this association withhold for the present its endorsement of any Democratic candidate for the office of Governor; and be it further

"Resolved, That a committee of three be appointed by the president of this society to wait on the Honorable William E. Tuttle, Jr., and to urge and request him to consent to become a candidate for the nomination of Governor."

HOOD DEMANDS PERSONAL GOODS

Wife, Who Asks Divorce, He Says Retains $50,000 of His Personalty.

HEARING DATE IS SET

Complainant, Who is Trying to Get Estate Deeded Back, Says Wife Refuses to Give up Articles—She is Summoned.

Another chapter has been added to the story of the marital troubles of wealthy Richard Haden Hood, whose wife, Mrs. Frances Sparks Hood, is now seeking a divorce, by the filing of papers in the Court of Chancery at Trenton in a suit to recover all of his personal goods in the Hood mansion on Stelle avenue, which he claims as his property. In his bill Mr. Hood fixes the value of these goods at $50,000. They include valuable paintings, rugs, furniture, a large library, shades, curtains, draperies, kitchen, laundry, bath room and gymnasium outfits, jewelry, two automobiles, three carriages, sleighs, harness, saddles, and countless other articles.

The bill was filed in the Court of Chancery this week by Mr. Hood's counsel, Chauncey G. Parker, and Chancellor E. R. Walker also issued an order directing Mrs. Hood to appear in court at Trenton on Tuesday morning, March 4, at 10 o'clock, to show cause why the complainant should not get possession of his personal property as set forth in the bill. The order further acts as a restraint, preventing Mrs. Hood from making any disposition of the goods claimed by Mr. Hood pending the settlement of the suit.

The bill relates at some length that Mr. Hood made a demand for his personal goods through McCarter & English, of counsel for Mrs. Hood, that the firm took the matter up with the latter and that she refused to give up only certain things, which she enumerates in her answer and which she admits belong to her husband. The articles named by Mrs. Hood are only a small fraction of those claimed by her husband. Mr. Hood further states in his bill that the defendant in the action claims that most of the articles belong to her, and he expresses the fear that they may be disposed of or injured in some way. He says that "many of the articles are of a perishable character; that the automobiles are delicate pieces of machinery which must be kept free from rust and must have constant attention and the same are not getting any attention from the defendant; that the rugs are liable to be injured by moth, dirt and dust and by the sun and light; that the household furniture is liable to injury from use."

Mr. Hood declares that all of the articles named were purchased by him during a period of four years, and he denies his wife's allegation that they were given to her outright. The bill also recalls the fact that the couple was married on or about July 31, 1901, and that during 1912 during a temporary absence on the part of the husband Mrs. Hood instituted a suit for divorce from him, which suit is still pending in the Court of Chancery. He recites the fact that his wife refuses to allow him to enter his home, and asks for the return of his personal property.

WILLIAM WINGES IS FOUND GUILTY

Aged Dunellenite Who Would Not Allow Use of Walk Has Sentence Suspended.

ERECTED A SPITE FENCE

Justice of the Peace Orders Him to Report to Probation Office for Six Months — A Neighborhood Squabble.

William Winges, an aged and wealthy resident of Dunellen who was given a hearing before Justice of the Peace Rene P. F. vonMinden at that place yesterday afternoon on a charge of disorderly conduct preferred by Mrs. Lydia Vail and Mrs. Louis Schneider, was given a six months' probational sentence by the court, with the understanding that if the offense of refusing persons to pass over the sidewalk in front of his house should be repeated, a jail sentence would be imposed.

Justice vonMinden in passing sentence said that it was within his power to impose a fine of from $1 to $175 and a jail term from one day to one year, but in consideration of the age of the defendant and the fact that he could well afford to pay a considerable fine, he had decided to put Mr. Winges on probation. He will be required to report to Probation Officer McWilliams, of New Brunswick, upon notice from the latter.

Frederick J. Pope, prosecutor of Somerset county, appeared as counsel for Mrs. Vail and Mrs. Schneider, while Francis J. Blatz was counsel for Mr. Winges. Among the witnesses who testified were Mrs. Vail, Mrs. Schneider, Miss Schneider, Madison Vail, Mrs. Henry Kirchner, Frederick Kirchner, Willard Apgar, Charles Tinsman, Edward Schively, William Winges and Mrs. William Winges.

Mr. Winges testifying in his own defense said that his reasons for refusing people the use of his sidewalk were that they had damaged it. He admitted having discharged a gun inside his front door; that he had chased the boys off his walk. When Mrs. Winges took the stand, however, she declared that she was responsible for the action against the boys, that it was she and not her husband who put Madison Vail off the walk.

In answer to questions, Mr. Winges explained as his reason for erecting the high board fence which he denied was a "spite fence," that it obstructed an undesirable view from the second story windows of the house opposite his home. He alleged that at times nude women appeared at these windows which was very objectionable to him.

Both Mrs. Vail and Mrs. Schneider, as well as Madison Vail, told a straightforward story as to what had occurred and apparently convinced Justice vonMinden who stated that Mr. and Mrs. Winges had a wrong idea as to the use of a sidewalk. He declared they had no right to say who should and who should not use the walk, in fact there was no law forbidding children to roller skate on the walk, and he therefore declared the defendant guilty of the charge preferred.

Mr. Blatz made a strong defense for his client, in which he sought to show how the latter had been subject to all sorts of annoyances and laid emphasis on the fact that the whole trouble was nothing more than "neighbors' squabble," in which Mr. Winges was not the aggressor.

FINE ENTERTAINMENT AT SCOTCH PLAINS

"Follies and Fancies From Here and There" Proves Enjoyable.

"Follies and Fancies from Here and There," a delightful program of entertainment in two parts, was presented before a large audience last night in the Scotch Plains Parish House. The talent was composed entirely of members of the Scotch Plains Memorial Parish House.

Part one consisted of a varied program of recitations, singing and pantomime representations of fairyland in which the smaller children showed to advantage. The North Elizabeth Quartet, singing "Little Orphant Annie," was encored repeatedly. The electrical effects arranged and executed by Harry Paff in "A Little Maid's Dream of Goblins and Fairies" was a feature.

Concluding the evening's entertainment was a one act farce entitled "The Mouse Trap." Taken from the viewpoint of applause it was one of the most favored numbers on the program. The acting was excellent. The various parts were handled without a flaw. The comedy kept the audience in a tumult of laughter and was indeed a fitting climax to the first entertainment given under the auspices of the Parish House.

Much credit for the success of the affair is due Mrs. Frank B. Urner, of Fanwood, who coached the members of the cast and attended to many of the arrangements. She was assisted by Mrs. Charles Vincent and Miss F. E. Doe. William Ward proved himself adapt in the role of musical director and the electrical effects, the handiwork of Harry Paff, added a pleasing feature.

The program:

Part I—(a) "A Corner of a Studio," Mrs. Howe, Misses Katherine Brown, Joyce Thompson, Katheryn McAneny, Mariette McAneny, Claire Hall, and Oscar R. Graham, Jr.; (b) North Elizabeth Quartet—"Little Orphant Annie," by E. K. Taylor, F. A. Urner, C. A. Urner and H. Happenings, Due Next Week

Washington, D. C., March 1.—The Presidential inauguration will be the big event of the week, overshadowing all else in interest and importance so far as the American public is concerned. The national capital is counting upon 150,000 visitors next Tuesday, when Woodrow Wilson, Democrat, will succeed William H. Taft, Republican, as President of the United States and Thomas R. Marshall will take the office of Vice President.

The program arranged for the pageant and ceremony is virtually the same as that of other inaugurations of recent years. The two big features of the day will be the induction of the President and the Vice President into office at the Capitol and the parade that will follow these ceremonies.

The program for the ceremonies that are to accompany the swearing in of the President and Vice President starts the day's ceremonies with the inauguration of the Vice President, in the Senate chamber. Immediately after Mr. Marshall takes on the title of Vice President, the persons admitted to the Senate chamber will proceed to the outdoor stand on the east front of the Capitol, where Mr. Wilson will take the oath of office and from which he will deliver his inaugural address. Then the marchers will fall in line and the parade up Pennsylvania avenue will begin.

Rivaling in public interest the inauguration parade of Tuesday will be "Suffrage" parade and pageant on the preceding day. Committees that have been at work for weeks on arrangements for the suffrage parade believe that the demonstration will be the most remarkable ever seen in any country in advancement of a cause. The parade down Pennsylvania avenue will be in five divisions and will include representatives of equal suffrage organizations in every State. Many floats and picturesque features will be included. While the parade is passing there will be given an elaborate pageant on the steps of the Treasury building, illustrating the birth and progress of the battle of women for the franchise.

At the call of Chairman McCombs the members of the Democratic National Committee will hold a special meeting in Washington on Wednesdy to discuss general questions of organization.

In the Federal court in Chicago Albert C. Frost and eight associates will be placed on trial Monday on a charge of conspiracy to defraud the United States Government out of Alaska coal lands valued at $10,000,000. The case has been pending five years.

A special Federal grand jury will convene in Chicago Wednesday to investigate alleged oleomargarine frauds. Several of the big packing companies are said to be involved in the alleged frauds, which have resulted in the loss of millions of dollars to the Federal Government.

NEW YORK AMUSEMENTS

At Proctor's 5th Avenue theatre, a mi-Careme bill of holiday dimensions will be presented next week, the quality of the attractions grading about twenty-five per cent. stronger than those of previous all star 12 act programs. The place of honor is again awarded to Edison's Talking-Moving Pictures, the mechanism of which is well nigh perfection. Robert T. Haines and company will appear in George Broadhurst's powerful one act incident of army life, "The Coward;" Frank Fogerty, the Dublin Minstrel with a collection of new and irresistible Irish witticisms; Maude Lambert and Ernest Ball, in singing and playing renditions of Mr. Ball's semi-classic popular ballads; Amy Butler and her boys, a new blood act with a $10,000 challenge quartet to accompany the vivacious soubrette; The Bracks, Risley acrobats direct from the New York Hippodrome; James Leonard and company in the screaming travesty, "Ham-Let's Her;" Muriel and Francis, two clever girls; Three Keatons in knockabout memriment and DuCalion, the talkative Englishman on the tottering ladder.

MEDAL FOR CAPT. ROSTRON.

Washington, D. C., March 1.—After having received substantial money gifts and other tokens of esteem and gratitude from the people of the United States and Great Britain, Captain Arthur H. Rostron, of the Cunnard liner Carpathia today received the official testimonial of the United States government. In the East Room of the White House at 2 o'clock this afternoon President Taft presented to the heroic Captain the gold medal awarded to him by Congress for distinguished conduct in the rescue of the survivors of the Titanic disaster. The presentation was made in the presence of a distinguished gathering that included diplomats, senators and others.

MRS. LILLIAN ANDERSON.

A decree of divorce has been granted to Mrs. Lillian M. Ray-Brown-Cox-Anderson from Werner Anderson, who happened to be her third husband and who lives in Brooklyn, N. Y. Thus ends a romance begun in Switzerland in the fall of 1911, when Mrs. Cox's automobile broke down and Mr. Werner fixed it. That was their first meeting, and when they returned to this country they were married in Hoboken, N. J.

Mrs. Anderson was the daughter of the late William H. Ray, a Brooklyn manufacturer, from whose estate she receives $7,000 annually. Her first husband was George Brown, of Brooklyn, whom she divorced in Buffalo. The second was a Mr. Cox, who died soon after their marriage and left her a large fortune.

"I told her I had no money when we were married," Mr. Anderson said at that time, "and her leaving me now in this manner leaves me penniless."

PLAINFIELD, NEW JERSEY, MARCH 1, 1913.

The editorial columns of this paper are conducted on Saturdays by representative citizens who are free to express their own views. A. V. D. Honeyman, editor of the New Jersey Law Journal and other publications, author and traveler, is the contributing editor today.

TWO DESIRABLE THINGS FOR OUR CITY.

The Board of Trade recently offered a prize for the best contribution to the question of how to advertise Plainfield successfully; how to show the outside world that this city has some special advantages over others; how to secure an influx of newcomers of the right stamp.

To whatever can be done in the direction of proper advertising no one can object. Advertising, if of the right sort, is the sign of present as well as forerunner of future prosperity. Preposterous claims and extraordinary "inducements" have no place in honest advertising, but the truth, set forth happily and repeated in different forms constantly, will draw patronage, whether to business houses or city sites.

The advantages of our means of communication with New York is probably our strongest argument with those doing business daily in that city. No railroad running out of New York compares in attention to suburban business with the Central Railway of New Jersey; no town on any other road at a similar distance from New York has the direct express trains or number of trains as Plainfield. This and other matters, like our pure water and splendid schools, well advertised, should not be without fruit.

But there is more to be done than merely to advertise what we now possess if Plainfield is to have the kind of growth everybody hopes for. People cannot come here to live without suitable homes, and, as most newcomers would come at first as renters, those suitable homes must be provided. The essential thing is proper, attractive accommodations for housing people; other matters are more or less secondary. As a matter of fact those secondary things are so excellent—schools, societies, clubs, fire and health departments, etc.—that they are self-advertising; the whole State now knows of them. But even they will not bring to us heads of families unless the latter find what they want in the shape of well-located, attractive houses of the right models and especially of moderate rent.

Rents of good single houses in Plainfield, if those houses contain modern improvements and are in proper repair, are high, just as they are in other places similarly situated. Whether too high considering the cost of lot and building it is not for me to say, but too high for the desired average newcomer. Young men who marry and begin families, and to whom we must look for the future greatness of Plainfield more than to the older men who must pass away, find it extremely difficult to locate with us because of high rents. I know many who have gone elsewhere to live because of rent conditions here. Others of moderate means, who are in business in New York City and are now looking for suburban homes, find advantages in rents and styles of houses and bungalows elsewhere, and so do not come.

I look upon the supply of desirable homes of moderate rents for people of limited income to be the one crucial point in connection with the healthy growth of this city; and the same in North Plainfield, but there also the sewerage system.

Advertise as we may, we must advertise something immediately appealing to the necessities of families, and that something is the house itself, in which they and their children are to be made comfortable and happy. A great list of vacant houses is not what attracts the stranger, but a smaller list of the right kind of houses at the right rent.

If some investment or building company would go into the project of erecting, of substantial material, preferably stone, the kind of houses that in my judgment would best fill the pressing need of the times, namely, both double and two-family houses, with front and back yards, locating them on streets accessible to the trolley, and even some of them on vacant lots within five or six minutes of the railway station, the success would be inevitable. Object to the two-family house as some may, it is the best form of suburban home yet devised to reduce rent to a minimum without the sacrifice of either comfort or the aesthetic quality of a good-looking residence. Two-family houses can be just as beautiful on the exterior as single houses, and, of necessity, they will take one-third, at least, off the tenant's rent. Double houses come next in the matter of lessening rent. More flats are not desired; they are no "home" for growing families. Children must have yards in which to play under their mother's eye instead of on the street.

In certain suburbs of Philadelphia years ago the two-family and double houses were made the attractive feature of that part of the city. The two-family house spread to many cities in Connecticut and New York, and to Jersey City, and to some extent in Essex county in this State. Some of these buildings are, of course, plain and "cheap." We do not want such. Unfortunately no law can compel a builder to practice liberality or study art in putting up a house. But there are homes of this character as beautiful as any other homes; just as charming in environment; just as comfortable within. Such are the only kind Plainfield needs, and it does need them. It wants "houses to let" in which the necessary six or seven rooms can be had for from $25 to $35 per month at the most; houses in good situations, with church and school easily accessible; houses that externally, as well as internally, command respect, and can become in every sense of loyal attachment to it a home. We are suffering enough now from indifferent and even ugly architecture in the various new houses "for sale or to let" that have been put up during the past decade; it is time to beautify a little in plannings for the future. Let the merely mercenary give way to what is lovely and wholesome for the eyes.

I wish the Board of Trade or some local capitalists would go thoroughly into this subject of the supply of good, artistic homes, both for rent and to be offered for sale; the rents to be as low as possible; it would "boom" Plainfield above every other advertisement.

And I also wish the City Fathers could see their way clear to really take up, in intelligent fashion and with a view to prompt action, the subject of increasing our open-air facilities of enjoyment and rest. Like all Americans we are a pushing people; we are under constant strain, and so are our wives and sisters. Even the little ones are too much indoors, and too much pressed and depressed with school tasks. We want, we need, a place, handy by, to go out and stroll in; to sit and read in the open; to have the little tots with their mothers, sisters or nurses taken to, every sunny afternoon. A safe place it must be, and a place of some charm, so it will attract the weary, and the ill and the stranger. I have not in mind simply a large wooded park, on the outskirts, however desirable it may be to have that now, so as to hold it for future years. What has been said about that it all true and wise. But I am thinking of the possibilities of the brook between the city and borough, and its banks, now so unsightly, if not unsanitary; what it can be made by stone walls, paths, flowers and trees beckons to the imagination and I know it can be a reality. There are so many instances of just this kind of development of the bed of a crooked stream running through a town into a public promenade and pleasure-ground that it seems as if no one should question the practicability of it. And just as soon as the matter begins to be studied, the problems co-related to the chief problem will begin to disappear. We may not have as beautiful a river promenade as has been made of the banks of the stream running through Baden-Baden, but we can have on a smaller scale what is enjoyed in many a German city and Swiss village. If this promenade, perhaps culminating in a large park at the western terminus of the narrower portion were here now, and low-rent houses and cottages, of superior quality and tone, who shall say Plainfield, with its other advantages, would need any paid-for advertising in the newspapers? Both things must come; why may they not come now?

CAMPAIGNING FOR 1,000 SUNDAY SCHOOL PUPILS

The pastor of the First Baptist church, Rev. Dr. Philip B. Strong, has organized a Christmas Bible School Club for the purpose of doubling the enrollment and attendance of the Bible School by Christmas with the slogan "1,000 by Christmas" as a watchword, to incite to earnest and persistent effort to that end. The school, the pastor says, already feels the impetus of this movement in greatly increased enthusiasm and in several cases large increases to classes. The principle on which the campaign is being conducted is the "Win One" idea, every scholar from the oldest to the youngest being asked to bring one permanent addition to the school. Outside of this "Win One" plan the pastor asks every member of the church, who for any sufficient reason is not an active member of the Bible school, to contribute to the success of the campaign by personal appeal, written note and prayer, since the success of the effort will mean more to the church than anything in all its previous history.

The pastor says he is confident that every department of the church will be vastly strengthened and all admit that such increased enrollment will necessitate immediate action upon the long cherished purpose of the church to erect an appropriate up-to-date Sunday-school chapel on the lot adjoining that on which the church itself stands. This would give the First Baptist church one of the finest church and Bible school plants in New Jersey, or indeed anywhere, and would enable the organization to conduct work on greatly enlarged plans.

ENTERTAINMENT GIVEN AT WILSON MEMORIAL

An entertainment appropriate to Washington's Birthday was given to the Temple Builders at the Mary E. Wilson Memorial chapel, Watchung, last night, under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society. The affair was in the nature of a birthday social. The program was an interesting one, the features of which were a flag and cherry contest.

Other features were readings by Mrs. George Hughes; recitations by Miss Harris and Francis Bodni, together with extracts from some of the addresses by George Washington. During the entertainment the audience sang "America," and "The Star Spangled Banner." A considerable sum was realized for the benefit of the chapel through the birthday offerings.

The celebration of the bi-monthly communion will be held at Grace M. E. church tomorrow morning. The baptismal and the reception of a large class of members will also take place. The other services of the day will be as usual.

CHARLES R. BOSTWICK TALKS ON SCOUTCRAFT

Charles R. Bostwick was the speaker at the Y. M. C. A. boys' rally meeting held in the association auditorium this morning and told his 300 juvenile listeners the essentials of scoutcraft. Mr. Bostwick is one of the local scout masters and is therefore well qualified to deal with that subject. He told the boys the requirements in a scout's life, how to become a scout, the relation of the scout to the community and described different phases of the organization's activities.

Following Mr. Bostwick's talk the boys were treated to a film of motion pictures appropriate to the talk. Since the boy scout idea was first introduced in this city a number of different patrols have been organized and the scout master said this morning that plans are now underway in charge of the commission to expand the organization even further.

Gen Grant Starting for his Second Inauguration, March 4 1873 (From a Newspaper of that Day)

THE ceremonies attending the inaugurations of the present day form a striking contrast to those in the early days of the Republic and even those preceding the Civil War. In former times the simplicity of the display was in keeping with our democratic institutions, but now every succeeding inauguration tries in some way to exceed the preceding one until the installation of a new President to his high office and great responsibilities is almost lost sight of in the elaborate and ofttimes gorgeous show of military, political and social clubs. It is now an affair of pomp and pageantry rather than a mere change in the personality of the Chief Executive. This departure from the custom and practice of bygone days is not in accord with the views of many of our citizens, and the desire of President-elect Wilson to return to the plain ceremonies of former times finds a responsive chord in the breasts of those who long for a return to the methods in keeping with the spirit of the common people of our country.

The taking of the oath of office by a man who has been chosen by the vote of the people to direct the destinies of a country so great as our own is a solemn occasion, for in no other land are the duties of the Chief Executive so arduous. The United States is rapidly becoming the melting pot of European nations for the immigration to our shores is rapidly increasing and with it comes new problems, and no man realizes this more fully than President-elect Wilson. In these days of strikes and labor agitation when anarchy seizes upon every display of wealth or lavish expenditure of money as an excuse for inflammatory speeches to excite the passions of the weaker minds these displays do more harm than good. From the time of the inauguration of George Washington on April 30th, 1789, up to the present day the desire of the incoming President as to the ceremonies has been followed more or less, and from the records of the inaugurations it seems clear that no two have been alike in their tastes. Naturally, the first ladies of the land have been consulted by their husbands and their wishes in the matter have been respected.

In the early days traveling was a difficult proposition and the crowds were not large. The inauguration of the first President of the new born Republic was spectacular in the extreme owing to the fact that the capital of the country was at that time located in New York and the entrance of the President was made from the river. Traveling was slow and Washington arrived on April 29th, which resulted in the festivities covering a period of two days. His entrance to New York was made on a barge which was decorated with flags and flowers and manned by thirteen masters of vessels representing the thirteen States. As the vessel neared Bedloes Island a large sloop sailed close to the barge and moved with it toward the shore. Twenty ladies and gentlemen who were on board the sloop sang an original ode of praise to Washington, the words being set to the tune of "God Save the King." Just as the singers finished their ode a school of porpoises appeared in the midst of the little fleet which was following the barge and began bobbing up and down as though inquiring the reason for so much commotion in the quiet waters of the harbor. As the barge neared the shore salutes were fired. Washington stepped ashore and was greeted by Governor Clinton and his staff, many of whom had been [illegible] under Washington. A dinner [illegible] Governor Clinton followed, after which Washington retired to the President's house on Cherry Street for the [illegible]. At nine o'clock on the morning of the thirtieth the bells of all the churches in the city were rung in honor of the crowning scene of the new Republic. Great throngs of people poured into New York, and before ten o'clock the old Federal Building was crowded. While the populace was gathering the Senate was in session discussing a very weighty question—that of how they should act when Washington appeared—whether they should sit or stand. Parliamentary precedent was sought in vain, and John Adams was finally left without instructions as to how to act when Washington arrived. Then came another hitch in the proceedings, for at the last moment Chancellor Livingston discovered that there was no Bible in the Federal Building and he hastily sent to a nearby Masonic Lodge and begged the loan of one. Washington was then conducted to an open gallery in front of the Senate Chamber with the Chancellor—he came to the front and the oath was read to him. The open Bible was lifted up, and the first President bowed his head and reverently kissed the Holy Book. Chancellor Livingston then cried out, "Long live George Washington, President of the United States!" The crowd took up the cry and the greatest enthusiasm prevailed. The President then returned to the Senate Chamber where he delivered his inaugural address. When he entered the members arose and remained standing during the reading of the address, which consisted of only thirteen hundred words. Later the President went to St. Paul's Church, where prayers were said and the Te Deum sung, and at the close of the services retired to his official residence. At night there was an illumination and general rejoicing among the citizens. On the occasion of his inauguration Washington was attired in a suit of dark brown cloth with metal buttons on which eagles were embossed. His hair was dressed and powdered after the fashion of the day. His shoes were decorated with silver buckles and at his side was a sword.

When the second inauguration of Washington took place on March 4th, 1793, the capital had been moved to Philadelphia, and there in old Independence Hall he took the oath for a second time and delivered the shortest inaugural address on record, speaking only one hundred and thirty-two words in all. There was little display at this inauguration—Washington, however, was a picturesque figure and his arrival at the Hall in a coach drawn by six white horses created the wildest enthusiasm. On this occasion the President was dressed in a full suit of black velvet, the short trousers being ornamented with diamond knee-buckles. He wore black silk stockings and shoes decorated with silver buckles. In his hand he carried a plain cocked hat decorated with an American cockade, and his hair was powdered and gathered into a black silk bag on which was a bow of black ribbon. He wore a light dress sword with a green scabbard and a richly ornamented hilt.

John Adams became the Chief Executive in the old State House at Philadelphia on March 4th, 1797. This was one of the quiet inaugurations as there was no parade of any importance. The hall was filled with a brilliant assemblage of officials and society but the great mass of people seemed to take little interest in the affair. During the administration of Adams the capital was moved to Washington, where Thomas Jefferson took the oath of office on March 4th, 1801. Jefferson was a man of simple habits, with a strong dislike for ostentation, and accounts recorded of the ceremonies of his inauguration are meager. One eye-witness says, "His dress was of plain cloth, and he rode on horseback to the Capitol without a single guard or even a servant at his side, dismounted without assistance and hitched the bridle of his horse to the palisades." President Adams had left the city during the previous night. Jeffersonian simplicity prevailed in everything pertaining to this, the simplest inauguration on record. Little is to be found in reference to his second inauguration on March 4th, 1805, for Jefferson still sought to avoid display.

James Madison came to the Presidential chair on March 4th, 1809. The Madisons evidently liked display for history tells us that fully ten thousand people failed to get into the Capitol. There was a parade of the militia and booming of cannon. President Madison appeared in a suit of cloth of American manufacture made from the wool of merinoes raised in this country. The suit was the gift of Colonel Humphries and Chancellor Livingston. He was escorted to the Capitol by a company of militiamen, whom he afterward reviewed, and thus began the precedent of a military escort for the President on Inauguration Day and a review of the parade after the oath of office was taken. The first inaugural ball, too, was held when Madison came into office. It was given at Long's Hotel and is said to have been the most brilliant entertainment Washington society had ever seen. The ball opened at seven in the evening and at eight o'clock the President arrived accompanied by his wife, the famous Dolly Madison. Mrs. Madison entered the ballroom leaning upon the arm of one of the Inauguration Managers, while the President followed escorting her sister. The crowd became so great after the arrival of the Presidential party that several ladies fainted from the overheated room. It was found that the windows could not be opened and it became necessary to break the panes of glass to let in air. From this it will be seen that the curiosity of an inauguration crowd was just as keen a hundred years ago as it is today. At Madison's second inauguration in 1813 the brilliant scenes of the first one were repeated, and the ball held in the evening was especially select for President Madison's administration had been gay socially and his beautiful and gracious wife had formed an exclusive social set of educated, refined people.

James Monroe's inauguration in 1817 was witnessed by great crowds. The day was delightful and the parade a brilliant military display accompanied by the booming of cannon. It is estimated that over eight thousand people were present at the inaugural ceremonies. In the evening there was a grand ball at Davis' Hotel. President Monroe was re-elected, but his second inauguration, which occurred on March 5th, 1821, the fourth being Sunday, was far less propitious than the first for it rained and snowed, ruining the decorations. However, a large crowd was present and the Marine Band enlivened the occasion with music.

John Quincy Adams came next as the Chief Executive, and was inaugurated in what is known as Statuary Hall in the Capitol. There was a procession and a ball held in the Assembly Rooms. History again records that the President wore a suit of cloth of American manufacture and of American wool.

Andrew Jackson, one of the picturesque figures of American history, became President in 1829. The friends of President Adams had agreed not to participate in the inaugural ceremonies, and the only uniformed company of infantry in the District of Columbia had declined to offer its escort for the occasion. A company of Revolutionary officers and soldiers then tendered their services to General Jackson, and he rode in an open carriage surrounded by these gallant veterans. Crowds filled the streets, many of the spectators having journeyed miles on foot. As the procession passed to the Capitol the crowd went wild with enthusiasm and shouted "Hurrah for Jackson!" again and again. After the oath had been taken President Jackson came to the portico and delivered his inaugural address. At its close the crowd surged forward to greet him and had it not been that a ship's cable had been stretched across the steps Jackson would have been carried through the streets by his admirers. As it was, he was compelled to shake hands with hundreds, and it was with the greatest difficulty that he escaped to his carriage. The crowd followed to the White House where barrels of punch were consumed in drinking to the health of the new President. There was no inaugural ball on this occasion. His second inauguration was less notable though a large crowd was present and a ball was held at the Central Masonic Hall. It was during Jackson's administration that the beautiful Mrs. Eaton, wife of General Eaton, came upon the scene and by her wiles created no end of political trouble, for she caused several resignations in the Cabinet and continually kept the Presidential set in "hot water."

Martin Van Buren became President in 1837, and was the first President born after the Declaration of Independence. Every other President had been born a British subject. President Van Buren from the time of his election declared that the sun would shine on the day of his inauguration, and his prediction was fulfilled, for the day was superb—not a cloud in the sky. Great crowds had come to the city and sleeping accommodations were at a premium. People were satisfied to sleep anywhere and the newspapers of the day were filled with humorous drawings showing the various places where people were huddled in sleeping quarters, an especially interesting one being entitled "Camping in a Barber Shop." President Jackson and President-elect Van Buren rode to the Capitol in an elegant phaeton constructed of oak from the original timber of the frigate "Constitution." The vehicle was made at Amherst, Massachusetts, and was presented to the President-elect by sixty of his admirers. It had one seat holding two persons and a high box for the driver in front. The unpainted wood was highly polished and varnished, and on either side was a painted panel showing "Old Ironsides" under full sail. It was drawn by President Jackson's four carriage horses decorated with elaborate gold-mounted harness. The ceremonies proceeded in the usual order. There was friction among the members of the Inaugural Ball Committee which resulted in two balls being held. The President attended the one held at Carusi's.

William Henry Harrison was the next in line, and became Chief Executive in 1841. The campaign had been a stormy one and the inaugural display in honor of the Tippecanoe hero was unique. The President-elect refused a carriage and rode down Pennsylvania Avenue on horseback, making a picturesque figure on his snow-white horse. The whole procession was highly interesting and imposing for it was both military and civic, and this, by the way, marked the beginning of the processions of political clubs on Inauguration Day. There were floats such as log cabins on wheels decked with suitable inscriptions, cider barrels, coon skins, etc. A power loom from a factory at Laurel, Maryland, with the loom at work was hauled through the streets, and students from the Jesuit College at Georgetown appeared in uniform carrying banners. Three inaugural balls were held, the President visiting each of them for a time. While at the ball at the Assembly Rooms the President danced with Mrs. Gales, wife of the editor of the National Intelligence. President Harrison lived but one month, and Vice-President John Tyler then became President.

A cold, rainy inaugural day fell to the lot of James K. Polk in 1845. Although the city was crowded with people the ceremonies attending the inauguration were dismal and many people were made ill by the inclement weather. The two inaugural balls were the real shows of the inauguration—the one at Carusi's being attended by society. Mrs. Polk was a strict Presbyterian and was opposed to dancing. She, however, went to the ball and her plain clothing and stiff manner formed a striking contrast to the other guests. The ball held at the National Theatre seemed to have turned into what in the present day would be termed a "rough-house." There was a wild scramble for supper and in the melee many of the ladies had their gowns ruined. When the guests began to leave it was discovered that coats, hats and canes had been stolen and Commodore Elliott had his pocket picked of a wallet which contained several valuable relics.

There was no particular excitement or incident over the inauguration of Zachary Taylor, which occurred on March 5th, 1849, except that there must have been unusual friction in the Inaugural Committee for three balls were held. President Taylor died in office and Millard Fillmore filled out the unexpired term. He was succeeded by Franklin Pierce on March 4th, 1853. The weather was cold and a light snow had fallen. Washington had between seventy and eighty thousand visitors and there was much discussion among them as to whether it would not be wise to change the date of Inauguration Day, but up to the present this change of date has ended as it did at that time—in talk.

President James Buchanan took the oath of office on March 4th, 1857. His arrival in the city the day before was a signal for the beginning of festivities and a throng of people met him at the old Baltimore & Ohio depot. There was nothing out of the ordinary in the inaugural ceremonies except that among those present was George Washington Park Custis, the grandson of Mrs. George Washington, he having attended the inauguration of each President from Washington to Buchanan. There was the usual parade and public reception afterward. Tickets for the inaugural ball were in such demand that no building could be found which would be large enough to accommodate the crowd, so a temporary structure was erected for the purpose. The newspapers of the day made special comments on the elaborate decorations of the ball room and gave glowing accounts of the ceiling which was covered with white cloth and dotted with golden stars. Towards the close of Buchanan's administration signs of a civil war became evident and sectional feeling was intense, consequently when Abraham Lincoln came to be Chief Executive in 1861 there were grave fears for the incoming President's life. A plot to assassinate him while he was on his way from Springfield to Washington had been unearthed, and this, together with the great crowd which had assembled on the streets caused those in charge to place an extra guard about the President and his carriage was surrounded on all sides by soldiers. Squads of riflemen were stationed on houses along the route ready to quell any attempt at a riot, and although the procession was a most imposing one there was a certain nervousness among the people which marred the pleasure of the whole affair. President Lincoln was always eloquent but especially so on this occasion, and the closing words of his address will stand until the end of time as a masterpiece of oratory:

"The mystic chords of memory stretching from every battlefield and patriot grave to every heart and hearthstone all over this broad land will yet swell the chorus of the Union when again touched as surely they will be by the better angels of our Nature."

Chief Justice Taney administered the oath of office, after which Lincoln in the presence of thirty thousand spectators kissed the thirty-four young ladies representing the thirty-four States. There was an inaugural ball in the evening but the President did not attend—the only time on record that the Chief Executive has been absent. His second inauguration in 1865 was after the country had been plunged into a civil war and a pall of gloom was over the land. The residents of Washington decorated their houses and there was a grand parade with thousands of spectators, but somehow it seemed that the coming event had cast its shadow before. As usual Lincoln's address was a remarkable one, but very short, containing only five hundred and eighty-five words. Then followed his assassination in April, and Andrew Johnson served out the unexpired term.

General Ulysses S. Grant was the next President and his inauguration occurred on March 4th, 1869. The procession was the grandest that had ever been seen in Washington up to that time and windows along the route were easily rented for fifty dollars each. The inaugural ball was held in the north wing of the Treasury and was a brilliant affair. Four years later he was re-elected and inaugurated during a raging snow storm. There was a display of fireworks in the evening and an inaugural ball, held in a temporary building erected for the purpose. As there was no heat in the building the dancers were compelled to wear heavy wraps throughout the evening and by midnight the majority of the people were frozen out and the ball came to an end. Tickets on this occasion sold for twenty dollars each.

The inaugurations of Hayes, Garfield, Cleveland, Harrison, McKinley, Roosevelt and Taft might be classed among the present day inaugurals and the scenes attending these are too well known to need repetition here.

With the many thousands, aye, even millions, who have gathered on these various occasions, differing in politics—some filled with rejoicing over the new Executive and others disappointed or even disgruntled, there is the one common feeling of confidence in the stability of our institutions, and when Inauguration Day has passed they have returned to their respective walks in life loyal to their country and yielding gracefully to the will of the American people as expressed at the ballot box.

FREEHOLDERS HAVE PROBLEM TO SOLVE

To Improve Road From Somerville to Manville Would Cost at Least $100,000.

Somerville, March 1.—The Somerset County Board of Freeholders is facing a perplexing problem regarding the improvement of the road leading from Union avenue across the meadow to the plant of the Johns-Manville Company at Manville, formerly Finderne. Heavy rains of the past few days have made the approach to the works almost impassable and employes have been unable to cross the meadows. These facts were laid before the Board yesterday by Clarence E. Case, who appeared in the interest of the Johns-Manville Company. It was urged that the Board build a road to the plant that would be passable at all times. It was pointed out that the company is now employing 700 men and later the number will be increased to 3,000.

According to the plan proposed by State Road Commissioner of Roads Stevens, under date of February 25, it will cost the county from $100,000 to $150,000 to build this piece of roadway. A majority of the freeholders are opposed to the kind of a road demanded by the State supervisor, but are willing to build a road similar to those in use, even without State aid.

Bernard Meyer, who owns considerable property in the vicinity, recalled that the Johns-Manville company has erected a $2,000,000 plant and that the increased tax ratables should warrant the building of a suitable road. He cited several recent sales of property at advanced figures to show how the taxables have jumped. Runyon Field, of Bound Brook, representing the Board of Trade of that place, also urged the improvement. He said he did not object to paying more taxes, in fact was willing to donate $200 or $300 toward the work.

The question of building a causeway across the meadows was discussed, but no satisfactory conclusion reached. It was stated that the Public Service Corporation contemplates running a spur from its main line to the Johns-Manville plant, and Freeholder Frank Remsen offered a motion that the officials of the trolley company be interviewed to see if they would be willing to stand a portion of the expense of building the road. Freeholders Everett, Remsen and Smith were appointed to wait on the trolley officials.

A communication was received from the North Plainfield Council asking the Board to build a new bridge over Stony brook on Rockview terrace, the present structure being too narrow. The matter will be acted upon later. The Bedminster Water Company was given permission to lay pipes in Bedminster and Bernards townships, the franchise being for fifty years. Free hydrants will be installed. The Board will hold a special meeting Friday, March 21, to let bridge contdacts.

FEATURED NEW SPRING HATS.

Brilliant colorings and small shapes predominate in the new millinery. It is said that the wars in the East have had the effect of making the price of the better quality of straws rather high, but they have also turned the attention of the creators of fashions to the attractiveness of Oriental colorings. The result is a demand for bright colors in silks and flowers used for millinery purposes. Perhaps the most favored of all straws at the moment is Milan, and there is really something very attractive in a good Milan straw. For one thing, there is scarcely an end to the wear of a good Milan. It can be cleaned, dyed and reblocked an endless number of times. An attractive variety of Milan and other hats is displayed by John Daniell Sons & Sons on Broadway and Ninth Street. All the new shades are represented, and the newest trimming conceits.

The new Spring millinery is characterized by high trimming, the use of bright colored ribbons and flowers, small silk fruit clusters, and the use of Numidi or Paradise plumes. One attractive French model displayed by this house has a cluster of Zinnias at the side which perfectly simulates the real flower. Another has a tiny spray of apple-blossoms on the brim where it is caught up to show the satin facing. The new colors are Coque de Roche, which is on the old rose shade, Besnard, a delicate shade suggesting Egyptian red, though lighter, Dorothy blue, and of course the popular Nell Rose. All of these shades will be found charmingly used in the millinery display at this store.

Another of the features of Spring millinery is the use of charmeuse satin and crepe for the tops of hats. Here and there one will find the vividly colored flowered silks although the conservative woman is hesitating about using these. In many cases the crown of the hat is covered with ribbon which is brought to the back into three or four loops which project smartly over the brim. One very lovely French leghorn had a crown of maline over shadow lace. Leghorn, by the way, is another leading straw for the Spring and Summer. The leghorn hats shown at Daniell's are remarkably attractive. Hemp promises to be the most popular straw, and hemp braid is also used to a great extent. Tagal is the choice of many smart women, and horse-hair hats, or Neopolitan straws, are putting in their appearance. The flowers used on the hats at this house are charming and the harmonious blending of the various colors reveals the touch of the true artist. Altogether it will be a mistake not to visit the millinery display here for nowhere will be found smarter, newer or more charming styles, or more moderate prices.

FASHION HINT

By JUDIC CHOLLET

Every form of draped skirt is to be smart throughout the spring. The one illustrated is distinctly novel and the simplest possible garment to make.

There are two pieces in the skirt proper, and the drapery makes the third piece. It is included in the right seam and lapped over the front of the skirt, to be held in position by buttons or other ornaments.

This model is an extremely fashionable one, desirable both for the street suit and for the gown. As it can be finished at the high waist line or at the natural line, it can be made becoming to all figures. When the waist line is used the skirt can be dart fitted at both the front and back or gathered at the back, as liked.

For the medium size the skirt will require four and five-eighths yards of material twenty-seven inches wide. The width of the skirt at the lower edge is two yards.

This May Manton pattern is cut in sizes from 22 to 30 inches waist measure. Send 10 cents to this office, giving number, 7746, and it will be promptly forwarded to you by mail. If in haste send an additional two cent stamp for letter postage. When ordering use coupon.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

PINEAPPLES FOR DESSERT.

FRESH pineapples are abundant and inexpensive and make delicious desserts. Where fresh fruit cannot be bought the canned pineapple is available, so that, no matter how far one may be from city markets, this tempting fruit may be enjoyed.

Pineapple Baskets.—Wash the fruit, take off the leaves and save them to garnish with. Without paring cut the pineapple in three or four sections, according to its size. Scoop out the pulp, leaving a thin layer to form a bottom to the center cuts, thus forming baskets or cases to which the pulp is returned after shredding.

A Fruit Mold.

Pineapple Cream.—Take the pulp of a large fresh pineapple or a can of the fruit and chop it up. Dissolve a box of gelatin in a pint of cold water, add the juice of the pineapple, place in a saucepan on the fire and let it boil. Take two cups of sugar and beat with the juice of two lemons. Pour the hot gelatin over the sugar and stir well; then add the pineapple. Set in a cold place until it begins to thicken; then stir in the stiffly beaten whites of two eggs. Beat the whole for ten minutes, place in a mold and let cool. Serve with whipped cream.

Pineapple Fritters With Sauce.—Dip slices of pineapple in fritter batter and fry to golden brown in hot fat. Drain on soft paper and serve at once with the following sauce:

Sauce.—Take the juice from the pineapple and add to it three-quarters of a cup of sugar, place on the fire and boil. Mix a level teaspoonful of arrowroot until smooth with three or four tablespoonfuls of cold water. Stir the arrowroot in boiling sirup and let simmer five or six minutes. When ready to serve add one-fourth of a teaspoonful of salt, a tablespoonful of lemon juice to taste.

Refreshing Dishes.

Pineapple Cocktail.—Cut a pineapple into quarters, remove a small portion of the core and grate on a coarse grater. Serve in cocktail glasses, with small pieces of ice.

Pineapple Pudding.—Take a cupful of sugar, a half cupful of butter, a cupful of cream, four eggs and a grated pineapple. Beat butter and sugar to a cream, add to this the beaten yolks of the eggs. Stir in the grated pineapple and the cream, then the whipped whites of eggs. Line a baking dish with a layer of puff paste, pour in the pineapple and bake with an under crust.

Cookery Points

Steak and Mushroom Pudding.

Steak and mushroom pudding is a good winter dish and is both appetizing and satisfying. Cut tender rump steak into thin slices, and these again into medium sized squares. Cut thin slices of ham or bacon into still smaller squares. Spread the steak out on a floured board, place a piece of the ham or bacon on each square and sprinkle with a spiced seasoning made of two small teaspoonfuls of salt, one-half teaspoonful of black pepper and a saltspoonful of mixed spice; then roll up tightly. Line a buttered baking dish with pie crust and fill with alternate layers of meat rolls and mushrooms which have been peeled and cut in pieces. Pour in some good brown stock well flavored with vegetables. Cover with pie crust, pressing the edges firmly together after having moistened them with cold water. Place a piece of buttered paper over the pudding, then put on the cloth and steam steadily for four hours.

A New Fudge.

Marshmallowed fudge is sure to be liked by children, so for your little party make this confection at home. Place one cupful of cream and two cupfuls of powdered sugar in a saucepan and stir gently to avoid sticking or burning until the mixture begins to boil. At this point add one-quarter pound of chocolate and keep stirring until all is melted. Allow all to boil for about ten minutes, or until the soft boil stage is reached. Then put in a bit of butter (about one and one-half inch cube) and stir until thoroughly mixed.

Take the pan from the fire and beat quickly for six minutes longer, then pour into a buttered pan containing marshmallows, nuts and candied citron.

These are scattered through the fudge. Some prefer candied cherries cut into halves to the citron, but it is all a matter of taste.

A Novel Soup.

Almond and celery soup makes a delicious luncheon dish. You must cut a bunch of celery into small pieces and put over the fire with one quart of cold water, six peppercorns, two bay leaves, a little onion juice, a slice of lemon, salt to taste, and a stick of cinnamon.

Cook all together for an hour, strain and put over the stove again.

When heated stir in a cupful of cream or rich milk and a teaspoonful each of flour and batter, blended. Mix smoothly and then add about one-quarter of a cupful of blanched almonds pounded to a paste. Allow the whole to boil just for a second and then serve.

Chocolate Whipped Cream Pie.

Beat separately whites and yolks of four eggs, pour yolks into whites, add one cupful sugar, one-half cupful potato flour, one-half teaspoonful soda and one teaspoonful cream of tartar, fold the dry ingredients into eggs very carefully. Bake in two Washington pie tins.

Cream.—Make sirup of one tablespoonful cocoa, two of sugar, two of water by cooking until smooth. Let cool slightly and pour into one cupful heavy cream. When thoroughly cold whip as plain cream. Flavor with vanilla and put in middle and on top of pie.

Making Buttermilk Cakes.

One quart of buttermilk, one level teaspoonful of salt, two eggs, flour to make a thin batter and one teaspoonful of baking soda. Beat up the eggs well, add to them the buttermilk, then add the salt and mix thoroughly. Dissolve the soda in two tablespoonfuls of boiling water, then stir it into the buttermilk. Now gradually add the flour, stirring all the time, until you have a batter that will pour smoothly from a spoon. Give a good beating and bake quickly on a hot, well greased griddle.

Irish Moss Lemonade.

This is an excellent drink for those suffering from cold or sore throat.

Soak one-quarter cupful of Irish moss over night and pick over very carefully before cooking. Wash in several waters and when quite free from sand put in a double boiler and pour two cupfuls of boiling water over it. Let it simmer until the moss is dissolved, then strain through cheesecloth and add the juice of two lemons with sugar to taste. This drink is served very hot.

Maitre d'Hotel Butter.

For use with beefsteak try preparing this famous butter in the following way: Have ready two large tablespoonfuls of butter, one scant tablespoonful of lemon juice, a little sprig of minced parsley and a seasoning of salt and pepper. If one likes it quite acid half as much lemon as butter or as much as the butter will hold can be used. Beat thoroughly and serve.

Egg With Coffee.

When a raw egg is distasteful to a patient, but coffee is very much relished and also allowed, the two can be served together by beating together one egg with one tablespoonful of sugar. Add gradually half to one cupful of boiling coffee, stirring continually, and fill up with hot milk or cream.

WOMEN TO PLAY BIG PART IN WILSON INAUGURATION

Suffragists' Parade on March 3 to Be Wonderful Event.

Will Represent History of Woman's Progress—Hike Under Way.

By JAMES A. EDGERTON.

"VOTES for women!" will be the slogan heard on the streets of Washington on March 3. It will not only be heard, but seen, people along Pennsylvania avenue, Seventeenth street and other thoroughfares traversed by the suffragist parade being given a chance to see little else. It will be the battlecry of the marchers, will shine from banners, transparencies and floats and will greet the eye and the ear in every way that can be devised by the army of thousands of suffragists that will invade the capital from practically every state in the Union. It is designed even to go up in the air with it, a suffragist aeroplane carrying the magic legend above the heads of the marchers.

The parade will represent the progress of women through the ages, sections of it being in the costumes of the middle ages and others representing successive centuries from that time to the present. At one time it was designed to go back even farther and garb some of the marchers in the flowing robes of ancient Greece and Rome, but the plan was abandoned when those in charge reflected with a shiver on the usual brand of weather pulled off in Washington on inauguration days. The women workers will also be represented. It is asserted that there are now 6,000,000 of these in the nation who have invaded the occupations of men and are earning their own living. Women lawyers, doctors, ministers, teachers, actresses, newspaper workers, stenographers, clerks, business women, mill workers and other feminine toilers will be represented. Other sections of the parade will show the number of countries that have granted women the vote in whole or in part; also the nine American states in which suffrage has triumphed. It was planned to have one float present in a striking way to the eyes of beholders the ones from whom the vote is withheld—a baby, an imbecile, a convict and a woman.

The Hike to Washington.

One section of the suffragist pageant will be given up to "General" Rosalie Jones and her fellow hikers from New York to Washington. It was the intrepid "General" Jones who led "Colonel" Ida Craft, "Surgeon General" Dock and one or two others in the march from New York to Albany to present a suffrage petition to Governor Sulzer. After this stunt was pulled off with due publicity the grander design dawned on the mind of the dashing leader that still wider publicity could be gained by a hike to Washington to present a similar petition to President Elect Wilson.

It was on Lincoln's birthday, Feb. 12, that the marchers got under way. At the start off there were "General" Jones, "Colonel" Craft, two captains and eleven privates. One of the fair recruits had given up her job to join the glad procession. It being rather damp marching across the North river and the Jersey meadows, the hikers compromised by riding in a tube train to Newark. Colonel Craft did not think this was entirely right and tried to ease her conscience by marching back and forth through the train, much to the disgust of other passengers, who shivered as she opened the doors. Colonel Craft concluded that, as she could not march as fast as the train ran, even this method smacked of fraud, so she reluctantly subsided. The actual march started at Newark. An attempt is being made to convert everybody en route; also to take on recruits. Trenton, Philadelphia, Baltimore and various intervening towns lie along the line of march, and if any "antis" are left therein it will be because they would not hear. At Philadelphia a lone man has promised to join the procession, and at Baltimore a whole company of suffragists are to fall in line and hike across the state of Maryland.

The "Petticoat Cavalry."

About eight days after the departure of "General" Rosalie Jones from New York Mrs. Gus Ruhlin is to lead a body of suffragists from the same town, but these are to go on horseback. In the militant terminology that the suffragists are adopting this is to be the cavalry, the hikers constituting the infantry. It is not stated whether Mrs. Ruhlin is to be a general or only a colonel, but anyway she will be the feminine edition of the "man on horseback." She will not follow the same route as General Jones, seeking to convert a different strip of territory.

This cavalry idea is to be quite the thing in the parade. Mrs. Richard Burleson of Texas, wife of a United States army officer, who is also a cousin of Representative A. S. Burleson, is to be the grand marshal of the parade and is to be acompanied by a cavalry squad of about fifty. At one time it was reported that Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, daughter of Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, was to be one of this fair company. There will also be cavalrymen—beg pardon, cavalrywomen—from Virginia. The official announcements of the affair call them "petticoat cavalry."

One of the humors of the situation is furnished by the march stolen on the regular inaugural committees by the suffragists. It is the custom to reserve all the rooms at hotels and boarding houses in advance for those attending the inauguration. This year the women went about early reserving all the choice rooms in Washington for their followers so that when the regular inauguration committees began their canvass no desirable quarters were left.

The object of the pageant is boldly announced. It is the beginning of a nation wide campaign for an amendment to the federal constitution assuring women the ballot throughout the United States. Heretofore the suffragists have confined their attention to the states. Now they are going after the nation. March 3 is chosen because at that time Washington will be full of people attending the inauguration, and the suffragists can thus impress the incoming administration.

Noted Women Enlisted.

Advance notices from suffragist headquarters present some glowing promises for the parade, from which the following points are taken:

In preparation for the procession the suffragists for the last few weeks have been carrying on an active campaign which will be gradually increased in excitement until the climax of endeavor is reached on March 3. An average of six meetings a day, including at least one street meeting, are being held, with such well known women as Mrs. John Rodgers, Jr., of New York, sister-in-law of Secretary of War Stimson, doing the speaking.

Those who are making the active preparations include some of the best known women in the country. Mrs. Robert M. La Follette, wife of the progressive senator from Wisconsin, has been actively at work, and her daughter, Miss Fola La Follette, is chairman of the committee on actresses. Miss Flora Wilson, daughter of the secretary of agriculture, is chairman of the committee on musicians, and Mrs. F. T. Dubois, wife of former Senator Dubois, is in charge of women's clubs.

Miss Alice Paul of Philadelphia is in active charge of all plans, and Mrs. Glenna Smith Tinnin of Washington and Miss Hazel MacKaye will direct the pageant feature.

Nordica Will Help.

While the procession and pageant is marching along Pennsylvania avenue a series of tableaux will be in progress on the treasury steps. Mme. Nordica, impersonating Columbia, will be the central figure of the tableaux, and with her will be Justice, Hope, Liberty, Peace, Charity, the virtues with which woman is supposed to be endowed. Florence Fleming Noyes, the classical dancer, will take the part of Liberty, and equally well known women will take the other parts. Scores of boys and girls in fancy costumes will fill out the scenes, and an orchestra will accompany all movements.

As Miss Inez Millholland of New York, herald of the procession, approaches the treasury building riding horseback and dressed in yellow the five Virtues will form a semicircle about Columbia, with their attendants back of them in wedge form, all making Columbia's crown.

A giant mass meeting is to be held at Memorial Continental hall, the home of the D. A. R., at the conclusion of the procession. Here Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt and equally well known women will deliver addresses.

The suffrage speakers who have been addressing meetings in Washington have been having some difficulty about their appeals, because in the District of Columbia neither men nor women vote. Speakers from other sections, not always realizing this fact, have been unable to appeal directly to the men for justice, for the men themselves here have no more political rights than the women.

two issues have been met with the diplomatic response that "we want equal suffrage, and you have it."

From Baltimore will go a string of golden chariots, drawn by milk white steeds and driven by suffragists dressed in Roman costumes. The forty miles from Baltimore to Washington are to be covered in one day, and a squadron of petticoat cavalry is to ride as an escort of honor. The Baltimore chariots have become famous in suffrage processions in the east.

Suffragist Pioneers Honored.

One section of the parade will represent the early efforts for the cause in America, beginning with the first convention in 1848. Descendants of Mrs. Elizabeth Cady Stanton and others of the early leaders are to participate, dressed in the costumes of the period.

The workers in behalf of the pageant have not had all clear sailing. At first the Washington society leaders were cold, but when they discovered it was all the rage they fell over each other in the rush to secure prominent places in the pageant. Perhaps the squelching of the inaugural ball also helped the suffragists, some of the modistes and others enlisting in a spirit of revenge and also with the idea of getting rid of some of their accumulated millinery and dress fabrics.

Major Sylvester, chief of the Washington police, at first said that the fair marchers could not appear on Pennsylvania avenue, but after ducking the resultant storm the major sang small and discreetly lost himself in the background. The boys who threatened to turn loose mice and rats along the parade route have also been properly squelched.

Representative J. Thomas Heflin of Alabama, who advised the women of Virginia not to march in the procession on the ground that woman suffrage breaks up the home, brought down the displeasure of the suffragist leaders on his head. Mrs. Champ Clark, wife of the speaker of the house, and Mrs. Helen H. Gardener, one of the active leaders in the procession plans, issued statements denying the claims of the gentleman from Alabama.

Mrs. Gardener called Mr. Heflin "the Beau Brummel of the house" and said that thirty-three years before he was born Abraham Lincoln wrote a letter in which he said, "I go for all sharing the privileges of the government who assist in bearing its burdens, by no means excluding women."

From all of which it doth appear that woman—lovely woman—is amply able to take care of herself; likewise that if the American suffragette does not break windows like her English sister she at least breaks into print.

HOPE CHAPEL-AJAX CHAMPIONSHIP GAME

Fast Game Expected When These Rivals Meet at Saengerbund Tonight.

Saengerbund Hall will be the scene of another championship basketball game tonight when the Hope Chapel and Y. M. C. A. Ajax representatives meet for their third game of a championhsip series. To date each aggregation has won a contest and the game tonight will be the third and with it goes a cup and seven medals. Rivalry has always been keen between these two aggregations and the game tonight will probably bring out a large band of lusty rooters.

Past performances during the season seem to give Hope chapel the benefit of the odds, but the Ajax can be relied upon to put up a sterling exhibition at any time and will no doubt give the Chapelites the run of their life to keep things evened up. Each team's victory was won on its own court and the game tonight will be played on a neutral floor, neither team ever having played a contest on it.

Hope Chapel has lost but one contest during the whole season and that one was won by the Ajax Thanksgiving Day at the Y. M. C. A. While the Association boys' record is not such a sensational one as far as wins and losses are concerned, they have played consistent ball all season and their opponents have been combinations that were faster than those encountered by Hope. The two teams will take the floor tonight as follows:

Y. M. C. A.	Hope Chapel.
Peacock, forward	T. Heron
McNamee, forward	J. Heron
Glover, center	Doig
Bryanariski, guard	Leighs
Nash, guard	A. Snyder

LAST BATCH OF MEN OFF TO JOIN CHANCE

Jack Martin, of This City, Among Those on Their Way to Warmer Climate.

When the Royal Mail steamer Arcadian sailed for Bermuda at 1 o'clock this morning seventeen New York American League ball players who will report to Frank LeRoy Chance on Monday, among them Jack Martin, of this city, looked worried. All last evening they were aboard the ship hearing tales of rough seas and seasickness. Their friends told of mountainous waves and cyclones in the Gulf Stream until the players looked as though they wanted to go ashore. But when the gangplank was hauled in the players decided to make the best of it and grinned sadly as the Arcadian backed into the North River. If they have a smooth voyage down and back they will have many bones to pick with the alarmists when they return on April 3. When the men that left today arrive at Bermuda the Yankees' roster will be complete.

The New York "Sun" says of Jack Martin:

"Jack Martin, the boy shortstop, has taken on so much weight that he looks like a fighter. He was at headquarters early with his grips and told Farrell that he would compel Chance to assign a regular place in the infield to him."

PLAINFIELD GIRLS DEFEATED TRENTON AND ESTABLISH CLAIM TO STATE TITLE

Although playing their first game as a team on the Saengerbund Hall court, the Nonpareil girls' basketball team, of this city, evened matters up with the Trenton Y. W. C. A. maidens in the second game of the State feminine basketball championship race last night by a score of 22 to 9. The capitol city aggregation was the victor in the initial contest by a margin of one field goal and each team has now won a contest, a third to decide the title being necessary. This playoff will probably be arranged on some neutral court although the Saengerbund Hall floor was new to both contenders last night.

Trenton was never in the race for victor's honors after the first few minutes of play when Miss Helen Hummel, the winner's captain, chalked up the first of her collection of eight out of nine tries from the foul line and began her consistent scoring fight which she never relinquished until the final whistle blew. During the initial administration Miss Helen scored ten points against Trenton's two and the first half ended with this count. The Nonpariels increased their lead to 13 points before the contest ended and a more decisive victory could hardly be established. For the first time in her basketball career, the wonderful and much talked of Miss "Dot" Hayes was held without even the semblance of a field goal, being over shadowed during the whole contest by Miss Clara Smith, the versatile Nonpareil guard. Miss Hayes demonstrated her shooting ability, however, when given free opportunities from the fifteen foot mark, making a quartet of foul points, three of which came in the second period. The only two field goals made by the visitors were credited to Miss Ryan, the other forward.

Although most of the scoring in the opening period was done by the Plainfield captain, Miss Ida Hummel got in some of her sensational basketcaging in the final half, getting a trio of spectacular field goals. One of her goals came from the extreme corner of the floor and was executed with an overhead one hand shot, characteristic of her playing. Miss Douglas and Miss Debele both put up sterling games at center and guard respectively for the winners and their guarding prevented many shots from being registered as points.

No date has as yet been set for the playoff but negotiations were entered into last night and the arrangements will likely be completed by the first part of next week. The contest was witnessed by one of the largest crowds of basketball enthusiasts that ever attended a feminine struggle in this city or the borough and Trenton's large band of cohorts rivaled the local team's followers' enthusiasm.

MOST OF 1912 VETERANS WILL RETURN TO REPRESENT PLAINFILED IN LEAGUE

In anticipation of the reorganization of the Central New Jersey baseball league, Manager Ernest Dorflinger, of the Plainfield team, is beginning to think about getting his players together for the coming season. Many of last year's veterans will be back in the fold and these will present a fine nucleus around which an aggregation can be formed that will be strong enough to compete with any in this vicinity, but the local manager is hot on the trail of local talent. He wants to get a line on all available diamond material in this city worthy of a tryout and he will give preference to Queen City talent if it is of the calibre his aggregation calls for. Ever since Dorflinger took up the managerial reins in this city it has been his object to cater to local players and what stars have cropped out here in recent years have at one time or another come under his guidance.

Dorflinger expects to have a number of players back in the fold who were with his team. The team won the league championship during its first year of existence in 1911, winning the bunting after a playoff with Somerville. Nelson will be back with the champions at his backstop position and this fact in itself is one that Plainfielders can begin building their hopes on. Frederickson will go to Winston-Salem along with Slocum, so he will be among the missing in this year's group. Steel will be back in the managerial game with Dorflinger and the rest of the team will be practically intact. One that will be sadly missing is that of Benjamin Mulford, Sr., who died a short time after the 1912 season came to a close. Mulford was commonly referred to as a thirty-second degree fan and always had the welfare of Plainfield baseball performers at heart through thick and thin.

Nothing would suit the local pilot better than to have local men performing on his aggregation at the oval this year and any player who has shown ability in amateur circles during the past couple of years will be given an opportunity to show the kind of stuff that is in him playing with a semi-professional aggregation such as the Plainfield one is.

It is likely that a number of preliminary games will be booked by Manager Dorflinger before he starts on the league circuit and it will be in these contests that local talent will be accorded a tryout. Sometime during the early part of the league season the 1911 bunting awarded to the champions of the New Jersey league that year will be raised by the Plainfielders and it is not unlikely that the Somerville nine will be the Queen City representatives' opponent on that date, they having been vanquished by Plainfield for the pennant after these two contenders had finished the season's schedule deadlocked for the top berth.

P. H. S. TROUNCED FAST NEW YORKERS

When Plainfield High School basketball players scored a 38 to 19 victory over the Yonkers High School five on the Y. M. C. A. court last night they did something that no P. H. S. quintet has ever accomplished as long as athletic relations have existed between Plainfield and Yonkers. Heretofore when these two rivals have met the score has always resulted in an overwhelming victory for the New Yorkers but the local schoolboys took a hand in the winning this trip, annexing one of the prettiest games of the season.

Individualism played a prominent part in the Plainfield victory, Peacock, the P. H. S. guard, getting a quintet of field goals in the final period that practically sewed up the contest. Close guarding was a feature of the contest and because of this condition the guards on both aggregations were compelled to do whatever scoring that was to be done. Wallace, the tall Yonkers' center, who is known throughout New York State as one of the best schoolboy players, was held to a quartet of field goals by Monroe Good, who got a trio himself. Woodhull, as usual, came in for foul shooting honors, annexing a half dozen from the penalty line that materially boosted the count. Bryanriski, Barnes and Engles played exceptionally strong guarding games and also did their share of the basket caging.

SIDELIGHTS ON THE NATIONAL PASTIME BY PLAINFIELD'S BIG LEAGUE PLAYER

By "Jack" Martin
(Yankee shortstop)

Some days ago I was requested to write an article on baseball for the Plainfield Daily Press and take this opportunity to make a few suggestive points in regard to the National game and America's greatest pastime. There are a lot of things in baseball, referred to by those higher up as "inside facts," that many people know nothing about but think they know a good deal about. They think that all there is to baseball is to hit, run, throw and catch. They agree that a man who is proficient along all of these lines is a ball player, but those known as the "wise ones" say that some of the worst diamond failures have coveted the same idea.

Baseball is a business, and a mighty complicated one, at that. You have to start at the bottom and climb, not by leaps and bounds, but by steady, consistent plugging, and if you reach the heighth of your endeavor you have something to look back on that covers your ambition with glory. I think that baseball is just a little harder than shop or office work and those who have tried it around the big circuit vouch for the same fact. If anything goes wrong in the performance of your office or shop duties you receive a "rake over" or "calling down" from the department boss or foreman and that generally puts an end to the matter. In the game of baseball things are altogether different. The ball players of today has to please the fans, club officials, manager and above all, the press of the country. If he boots a grounder or fails to line one out when the sacks are occupied and a single needed to win the game or tie the score, he is criticised and roasted on every hand. The papers take up the subject from the winning standpoint, his team's averages are figured out, and an account of just where the team would have been if he had made that hit or made good on the fielding chance, published.

A ball player is placed in many critical positions where an error on his part or a little nervousness exhibited at the precise moment, would mean not only the loss of the game to his club, but a financial leakage of probably thousands of dollars. He might throw up an opportunity to toss a runner out at home plate when that player was bringing in the winning run, or miss a long spiral fly ball that seemed to take a year to reach the earth, and there might be all the excuse in the world for his failure. Would the fans look on the optimistic side? Never. Baseball fans are pessimists in the greatest sense of the word and they roast a fellow trying to make good until the youngster is really led to believe that he is not of big league calibre and ought to go back to the farm or the semi-professional aggregation where he made his "rep."

The sporting editor of this paper has asked me to tell what I know about the Plainfield High School baseball outlook for the coming season. Personally, I think they will have a better team than they had last year. The outfield is far superior to that of 1912 and the infielders are numerous and look good. There is an abundance of material working out for both the infield and garden berths and a nucleus of veteran stock is available for the 1913 lineup.

There are a number of followers of scholastic baseball in this city who think Plainfield High School is weak in the pitching and catching departments, but these two important parts of the team's repertoire are admirably looked after. Nothing gives me more pleasure than to work out with the schoolboys and I get a vast amount of enjoyment out of coaching the P. H. S. team. The High School boys are a clean lot through and through and this adds to my pleasure in working with them. Monroe Good, captain of the P. H. S. team for this year, is a leader of no mean ability and will make a strong pilot for the team on the field. He is well liked by his fellow students and harmony will prevail in the schoolboys' camp as long as he is at the head.

The fact that I have confined my coaching to the Plainfield High School team does not mean that I am not interested in any other class or group of ball players. If I can do anything toward helping any Plainfield boy along baseball lines I am only too glad to do it and to be of service to him in his ambitions. Of course, a fellow's future rests, to the largest degree, in himself, and if he does not control himself morally, no coach, no matter how experienced or how well known he is, can make a baseball player out of him. Because a fellow works in an office or shop, it does not mean that he cannot be made into a real ball player. There are just as good ball players earning a living in shops and offices today as there are running loose around the fields doing nothing but playing the game to their heart's content. In order for a fellow to become a successful diamond artist or a successful athlete along any other line of athletic endeavor, he should abstain from drinking intoxicating liquors and should not smoke or chew. He should keep reasonable hours, for sleeping is one of the most necessary assets to success athletically.

Martin left this morning for Bermuda, where he will enter the New York American League baseball club's training camp under Manager Frank Chance. During the coming season the Plainfield representative in the big league will keep his friends in this city posted on his movements through the columns of this paper and frequent letters will be published from the popular shortstop.

BASEBALL NOTES

In Pitcher Ray (Jack) Frost, who stands 6 feet, 5 inches, the Cincinnati Reds have the tallest player in the National League.

Danny Shay, the former big leaguer, and more recently manager of the Kansas City team, has signed to manage the Helena Union Association team.

Manager McGraw has given Jim Thorpe permission to go to Denver, where the Indian champ will take part in the big athletic carnival to be held in that city this month.

The Chicago White Sox are going to be pretty swell guys during their stay in California. Instead of carrying only two sets of uniforms, as is the custom, Callahan's men will have four.

Pitchers James and Noyes, the two leading twirlers in the Northwestern League last season, have signed with the Boston Nationals. James comes from the Seattle team and Noyes from Spokane.

Mike Balenti, formerly of the Carlisle Indian ball team, will be given a trial in the infield by the St. Louis Browns.

Bart Tooley, whom the Brooklyn Superbas turned over to the Newark Club, is the only member of the Newark Indians who has not sent in his signed contract.

The veteran pitcher, Tom Hughes, says that he is in tip-top condition and ready to do his share in helping the Washington team cop the American League muslin.

"MAC" SAYS

In defeating the Yonkers High School aggregation on the Y. M. C. A. court last night, the Plainfield High School did something that every other P. H. S. aggregation has fell far short of accomplishing. And they did it with a goodly margin to spare at that.

A more decisive drubbing in girls' rules could hardly be handed out than the one administered by the Nonpareils over the Trenton Y. W. C. A. maidens last night. 22 to 9 is a wide enough gap to decide any title.

These two feminine quintets are now tied in the race for the State championship and a third game will be necessary. This contest will be played on another neutral floor, Saengerbund Hall being new to both teams last night.

In holding the wonderful little Dot Hayes to no field goals, Miss Clara Smith, the local guard, established a precedent in goal prevention. Never before has the Trenton forward gone through a contest without annexing a neat string of the field variety.

All of the ten points established by the Plainfielders in the first half were made by Miss Helen Hummel, the captain, she getting three field goals and a quartet of fouls. Just as an exhibition of her foul shooting prowess the local forward registered tallies on eight out of nine throws from the penalty line.

If season's records can be offset by the neutral court on which the game will be played, the Ajax-Hope chapel deciding battle carded for tonight will be a hummer. The chapelites have a far superior record as far as won and lost games are concerned but the association boys' opponents have been, for the most part, heavier and faster.

Plainfield High School baseball candidates will have to get along without the services of Jack Martin from now on in the coaching department. The local ball player is now on his way to the Yankees' camp.

Both High School teams appear to be resting up for that third and deciding game of the interscholastic league. The big contest is scheduled for next Saturday at Saengerbund Hall.

Although the local High Schools claim to promote every line of sport there is one of the finest games for the development of the young man left out. This is lacrosse and there are only a few teams in this State that pay any attention to it. Why not investigate the game?

Football practice at Princeton and Pennsylvania. And they say baseball is becoming a "twelve month" sport.

Some rabid fans are now figuring what harm the Central New Jersey League teams will do to the major and minor league organizations with stations in this section. None whatever, the big leagues are certainly "close corporations in the restraint of trade."

Johnny Evers evidently believes that baseball players should be retiring persons. 'Tis said he works his men in shifts. Any player working in a night shift would naturally want to retire.

Someoe has said "Baseball is no longer a sport, it is a business, and should be recognized as such by the A. A. U." The A. A. U., as a body is apparently ignorant of the fact that baseball is one of the biggest of big businesses, and that it would be quite as reasonable to declare an athlete a professional for washing dishes as to ban him from playing summer baseball.

Hans Kolehmainen receives no money for his amateur services in this country at the various big athletic meets. He's so poor that he is supported by his masseur or rubber, acording to a dispatch from the Swede's camp. But said rubber draws $10 per rub for his work. To a man without a beam in his eye, does this seem to resemble the dark meat in the woodpile, or the joke in the amateur standing? Aye, there's the rub—at $10 per.

Where do most of the big ball players come from? It is hard to tell but the big cities certainly do not produce many of the major league variety.

Aching Kidneys Cured in Plainfield

If Your Back Aches and Your Kidneys are Weak, Get the Kidney Remedy That Has Been Proved GOOD Again and Again Right Here in Plainfield.

Plainfield People Tell It:

East Third Street

C. L. Treat, painter and paperhanger, 411 E. Third St., Plainfield, N. J., says: "I suffered for a long time from kidney trouble and for years could not find anything that would give me relief. My back ached constantly and there was pain across my kidneys. My kidneys were in bad shape and I became all run down, in fact, was almost a physical wreck. Hearing of Doan's Kidney Pills, I got a supply and they made a different man out of me. I got this remedy at Randolph's Drug Store and my experience was so satisfactory that I cannot make my endorsement of it too strong. I simply would not be without a supply of Doan's Kidney Pills on hand."

Manning Avenue

Mrs. O. C. Moore, 57 Manning Ave., Plainfield, N. J., says: "You may continue to publish my former endorsement of Doan's Kidney Pills. I endured much misery from backache, caused by my kidneys. Many nights I was unable to rest at all, and when I arose in the morning, my limbs were so stiff and sore that I could hardly get out of bed. Whenever I caught the least cold, it settled on my kidneys and any strain on my back always made my aches and pains worse. I was treated by physicians, but their medicine did not help me and it was not until I got Doan's Kidney Pills at Randolph's Drug Store, that I had any hope of getting rid of the trouble. They made me feel like a different person and I have never had any serious trouble since. I use Doan's Kidney Pills once in a while, however, and they keep my kidneys in good working order."

Elm Place

A. C. Lazzi, 44 Elm Place, Plainfield, N. J., says: "I still endorse Doan's Kidney Pills at every opportunity and I confirm all I said in their praise when I publicly recommended them some years ago. You are at liberty to continue using my statement, for this excellent medicine cannot be given too much praise. For several years I was annoyed by a distressing backache, together with pains through my kidneys. My head also ached severely and the kidney secretions were in bad shape. I went to several physicians and also took so-called kidney cures, but it did not seem as though I could get relief. As time passed and I did not improve, I became discouraged. When suffering intensely, I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised and I got a supply at Randolph's Drug Store. As if by magic, the pains and aches left and I improved in every way. Doan's Kidney Pills deserve the entire credit for restoring me to good health."

Clinton Avenue

Mrs. Ernest Dorflinger, 400 Clinton Ave., Plainfield, N. J., says: "I hold just as high an opinion of Doan's Kidney Pills today as I have for years. The cure they made in my case has been permanent and consequently I am glad to confirm my former testimonial. The first symptom of kidney trouble in my case was a dull, heavy pain in my back and head. This was followed by a tired, languid feeling and I knew that my kidneys were gradually giving out. I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised and getting a box at Randolph's Drug Store, I began their use. Before long my condition improved and I continued taking Doan's Kidney Pills until I was cured."

West Fourth Street

A. K. Mattis, 127 W. Fourth St., Plainfield, N. J., says. "I gave Doan's Kidney Pills my endorsement five years ago after receiving a cure through their use and today I confirm all I then said in their favor. The cure has been permanent. I was troubled for years by a dull backache and pains in my head. I believe that the trouble was due in a great measure, to a bad fall I had. Nothing seemed to help me and when I read of the good work Doan's Kidney Pills were doing in similar cases, I got a supply at Randolph's Drug Store. Their use drove away my aches and pains and my experience gave proof of their merit."

Watchung Avenue

Mrs. Cecelia Rosseter, 127 Watchung Ave., Plainfield, N. J., says: "I am only too pleased to again recommend Doan's Kidney Pills and I hope that all kidney sufferers who read my statement will profit by my experience. I have received a world of good from this remedy, backache, headache, dizzy spells and trouble with the kidney secretions being corrected by its use. I do not know what I would have done without Doan's Kidney Pills and I am certain that there is no kidney medicine that can be compared with them."

Are YOUR Kidneys Weak?

HOW TO TELL—First read the testimony and learn what Doan's Kidney Pills have done for others.

Then if your back aches, if sharp pains strike you when stooping or lifting; if you are lame in the morning, tire too easily; if you have dizzy spells and are nervous, despondent and inclined to worry over trifles; if the kidney secretions are highly colored and full of sediment, if passages are too frequent, scanty, painful or scalding, it is likely that your kidneys need quick attention.

Take a sample of the urine and let it stand for 24 hours. If a sandy, brick-dust like sediment settles to the bottom of the receptacle, there is evidence enough to suspect the kidneys.

PRINCETON'S GRIDIRON SCHEDULE FOR 1913

Princeton, Mar. 1.—The completed schedule for Princeton's 1913 football team includes eight games, starting on September 27 and closing November 15, with the Yale game at New Haven. There will be no midweek games at all.

Three new opponents will be taken on in place of some of the teams that were met last year. Fordham will replace Lehigh on account of the breaking of all athletic relations between Lehigh and the Tigers, brought on by the playing of a professional. Bucknell will again appear on the Princeton gridiron after a lapse of several seasons of no games. Holy Cross is the third new opponent to be added to the list. Stevens eleven of Hoboken has also been dropped.

The schedule is as follows:

September 27—Rutgers at Princeton.
October 4—Fordham at Princeton.
October 11—Bucknell at Princeton.
October 18—Syracuse at Princeton.
October 25—Dartmouth at Princeton.
November 1—Holy Cross at Princeton.
November 8—Harvard at Princeton.
November 15—Yale at New Haven.

HONOR MAN AT PRINCETON.

Alan Fitz Randolph, of this city, a senior at Princeton University, is fifth in the scholastic standing in the class. One-twelfth of the members of the class are usually elected to membership in the Phi Beta Kappa fraternity, membership in which is based almost solely upon scholastic attainments. Mr. Randolph is therefore eligible to election in the fraternity.

LOCAL SCOUTS EXHIBIT SKILL

ROPE CAST FEATURES

Interest in the Sportsmen's Show at Madison Square Garden was kept very much alive yesterday by the presence, among others, of more than 500 boy scouts who gave demonstrations of their skill in their special lines of activity under the command of A. R. Forbush, Deputy Field Scout Commissioner, with the result that there were many inquiries by adults in the crowd of over 4,000 onlookers, as to the best ways and means of organizing troops.

Twenty-five members of the Wetumpka Sentinels, Troop 5, of the First Presbyterian church patrols, of this city, under the leadership of Scout Master Allen E. Beals, showed their cleverness at wall scaling and gave a great exhibition of speed at clearing a ten foot wall with the complete detachment of twenty-five scouts. The local patrol was extender courtesies during the trip by the officials at Madison Square Garden. The boys arrived in time to attend the wall scaling competition in which they took a conspicuous part. Mr. Beals brought his scouts into the Garden in solid formation and those who witnessed the demonstration said afterwards that no other troop in attendance could approach the Queen City representatives in keeping marching formation, and the Plainfield boys were complimented on every hand.

A wall scaling contest had been arranged by the Deputy Field Commissioner in which the Plainfield troop, a Chinese troop and two other troops were entered to compete. The Chinese boys have been heralded about the country as unapproachable in wall scaling competition and naturally the Wetumpka contingent expected a stiff fight to make a creditable showing against the scouts of foreign birth. Great was their surprise, however, when the announcement of the withdrawal of the Chinese wall scalers was made and many and varied were the reasons advocated for their sudden action, among the latter being one to the effect that the Plainfielders marching order when coming on the field had so astonished the Chinese that they decided that if the Plainfielders could scale walls as well as they could march there was little hope of overcoming them.

The local boys brought their barrier on the field in running order and in scaling the wall established a new record that the officials refuse to devulge for the time being. An incident occurred during the competition that displayed the qualities of one of the Plainfielders, William Thompson, a first-class scout. Without any warning the barrier which the Wetumpka boys were scaling snapped and John Causbrook slipped nearly losing his hold on the obstacle. Thompson, with rare presence of mind and sheer grit, held Causbrook by his clothing and pulled him over the wall in safety while the large garden crowd held its breath expecting to see the officers and scout masters make a rush for Causbrook and help him out of the difficulty. Nothing of this nature was attempted, however, and the scouts received a great ovation when they completed the stunt unassisted.

The Plainfielders exhibited their scoutcraft skill by constructing a ten foot barrier for one of the troops that had come to the show, unprepared, in the marvelous time of twenty minutes. Mr. Beals said this morning that he was astonnded at the smoothness with which the task was accomplished, no signals being given at any time and the scouts exhibited no nervousness, although watched by over 4,000 people.

John Causbrook, of the First Presbyterian Troop, gave an exhibition of rope casting that is seldom equalled by man or boy. The local youngster threw the twisted hemp so that it fell in almost a straight line the entire length of Madison Square Garden, or a New York city block. This was a stunt that was never before witnessed by promoters of scoutcraft and the Plainfielder received a round of applause that rocked the Garden.

After the scout demonstration the boys were shown around the show by the officials in charge and met James E. West, National Chief Scout and Dan Beard, Chief Ranger, both of whom were cheered by the scouts and responded with short congratulatory speeches. The Plainfield boys were accorded the use of the Central Railroad's platform in Jersey City to form their line of march and the railroad company provided a special train for the return trip. The Wetumpka Sentinels were represented by twenty-two scouts and three officers and were accompanied by delegations from the Crescent Avenue church and Netherwood patrols.

East Orange made two baskets in the five minutes, but was charged with two fouls, making the final score 29 to 27. Each team has won three and lost one in the championship series. Arrangements for the final game have yet to be made.

HELEN SACHAR PHYSICIAN'S BRIDE

TWO RABBIS OFFICIATE

Revs. Levinson and Miller Perform the Ceremony at the Synagogue of the Children of Isreal—A Reception Follows.

Miss Helen Sachar, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Sachar, of West Third street, and Dr. Bernard Levinson, also of this city, were married at 6 o'clock last night in the Synagogue of the Children of Israel, on New street, in the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends, including many out of town guests. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Jacob Levinson, of Albany, N. Y., brother of the bridegroom, assisted by Rev. Mr. Miller, rabbi of the local synagogue.

Mrs. Bernard Levinson

The ceremony, an elaborate one, was very impressive. A boy choir of thirty voices sang hymns and the responses, assisted by a string orchestra from New York. The decorations were elaborate, comprising a bank of ferns, varied colored ribbons, studded with incandescent lights.

The bride wore a gown of ivory white Canton crepe, with light blue brocaded velvet, pannier, and a veil caught up with lilies of the valley and she carried a bouquet of bride roses. The maid of honor was Miss Marian Sachar, sister of the bride. She wore a gown of ivory white Canton crepe, with crystal trimmings, green pannier and carried white and pink carnations. The bridemaids were Miss May Sachar, of Brooklyn; Miss Estelle Levinson, of New York; Miss Rose Siegel and Miss Ida Sachar, of this city. Their gowns were of white, pink, and gold crepe de chine, en train, and they carried white and pink carnations. The flower girl was Charlotte Sachar, the ten-year-old sister of the bride. She was dressed in white and carried roses, tulips and carnations, which were strewn in the path of the bridal party as they entered the synagogue.

The best man was Louis Sachar, of New York, a cousin of the bride, and the ushers were Howard Holder, of Newark; Benjamin Moril and Harry Siegel, of this city, and Abe Levinson, of Albany, N. Y.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents on West Third street, which was attended by a large number of relatives and friends. Dr. and Mrs. Max Levinson, of Boston, the former a brother of the bridegroom, arrived here early this morning, first attending the wedding of Mrs. Levinson's brother, David Parshish, in New York, and they joined in a family reunion. Included among the guests were many physicians, friends and classmates of the bridegroom.

The bride is a graduate of the Plainfield High School, Class '08, and the Newark Normal School, Class '10, and until recently was a teacher in the Public Schools of Newark. Among the costly gifts received by the bride was the new house, completely furnished, at West Front street and Giraud avenue, the deed for which was given to her yesterday by her father.

Dr. Levinson is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Morris Levinson, of New York. He is a graduate of the Baltimore Medical School, Class '08, after which he spent two years at St. Mark's Hospital, New York. After two years' practice in Brooklyn, he came to Plainfield a year ago, where he has secured a large practice. The couple have taken possession of their new home on West Front street.

JOS. ANGERBAUER, SR., SUCCUMBS TO HURTS

Thrown From a Cart Oct. 9, Aged Man Sustained Internal Injuries.

Joseph Angerbauer, Sr., aged 74 years, one of the best known German citizens of Plainfield, died yesterday afternoon at Muhlenberg Hospital, the result of injuries received on October 9 last, by falling off a cart while in the employ of the street department of the city. He was driving along West Front street, near Giraud avenue, when the horse slipped and fell, and Mr. Angerbauer was thrown off the cart, receiving internal injuries.

Mr. Angerbauer was born in Wetenburg, Germany, December 21, 1838. He came to this country at the age of ten years with his parents and settled on Long Island. He had lived in Plainfield since 1879 and for the past twenty years was a faithful employe of the city street department. He was married to Miss Frances Wendel, of Warren county, this State, February 15, 1863, and last month he and Mrs. Angerbauer observed the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding, although Mr. Angerbauer was still a patient at the hospital. He was a member of Trinity Reformed church, and prior to his illness, was a regular attendant at the services.

Surviving are his wife and seven children, Mrs. John Driscoll, John C. Angerbauer, of Winnipeg, David C. Angerbauer, Mrs. Willard V. Sutton, Joseph H. Angerbauer, of this city; Adam Angerbauer, of Jersey City; Henry Angerbauer, of Bayonne, and twenty-one grandchildren and three great-grandchildren. The notice of the funeral will be given later.

CODINGTON AND BLATZ FORM LAW PARTNERSHIP

Announcement was made today that Councilman Francis J. Blatz had associated himself with William R. Codington, in the practice of law, under the firm name of Codington & Blatz. Mr. Blatz will give up his offices in the First National Bank building and remove to those of Mr. Codington at Park avenue and West Second street.

Mr. Blatz is the son of Mrs. Joseph A. Blatz, of North Plainfield. He attended the Noth Plainfield Public Schools and was graduated from the New York University in 1897, which year he was admitted to the New Jersey Bar. Last fall he was elected a member of the Common Council from the Fourth ward, succeeding John E. Dunn. He is a member of Plainfield Lodge, No. 885, B. P. O. QUARTER-METER THIEF WAS BUSY SATURDAY

That a former employe of the Public Service Gas Company is responsible for the quarter-meter robberies which have been reported to the police recently in alarming numbers, is the opinion of the authorities as well as the officials of the corporation. Two cases were reported to the police Saturday night in which the meters were torn loose from their connections, the gas turned off, and the coins stolen. The liability of asphyxiation of members of the families where these offenses are committed has aroused the police to prompt action and it is expected that arrests will be made today.

When Mrs. Nora Smith, of 706 West Fourth street, returned home Saturday night she smelled the dor of illuminating gas and when she applied a lighted match to a jet no service was to be had. An investigation revealed that the quarters were stolen from the meter and the gas turned off.

A similar case was reported to Chief Kiely on Saturday by John Naylor, of 322 Lee place. He said his cellar had been entered by forcing the outer door.

WHAT THE SCOT HAS DONE FOR RELIGION

Theme of Rev. Dr. Chas. E. Herring's Sermon to Clan Mackenzie.

Recalling some of the important things which the Scots have done for the cause of religion, Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring, of the First Presbyterian church, delivered a sermon of special interest to the members of Clan MacKenzie, No. 204, Order of Scottish Clans, last night. The members attended in a body.

Dr. Herring took for his text the words, "There was a man sent from God whose name was John." "The allusion of the text is to John the Baptist," said Dr. Herring, "but I love to think of every man having a particular place in God's plan, that every man is sent from God for some particular mission in the world.

"The men I have in mind at the present moment is the man that Carlyle called the 'most Scottish of the Scots,' John Knox. The historian Froude has said of him, 'No grander figure can be found in the entire history of the reformation in this island than that of Knox.' One of the great gifts then of Scotland to the religious light of the world is the life and teachings of this 'light of Scotland.'

"I am well aware that another has called him a 'holy savage.' Yes, he was intolerant, but he lived in an intolerant time. He was intolerant to the intolerant. He lived among a fierce people and because of the stern, inflexible nature of his method the Presbyterian church of Scotland was launched in 1560.

"In his day the religious condition of the world was in convulsions and Scotland revered a man of the Knox pattern who feared God so much that he feared nothing else and who dared to think for himself. Scotland and the world ever since have been blessed for the strength and the enforcement of his convictions."

FIRE AT NEW MARKET DOES $2,200 DAMAGE

A fire that did a large amount of damage during the short time it lasted, was discovered at noon today in a house on Edwards avenue, New Market, occupied by Robert De Hart. The blaze was started in the attic by a defective flue and the shingled roof burned rapidly, getting big headway before the New Market firemen arrived on the scene. They were hampered by the low water pressure.

The property of Harry Piddington, the New Market fire chief, which is located next door, caught fire from sparks but the blaze was extinguished before any damage was done. The loss at the De Hart residence was $500 to the property and $700 to the furniture. The building is owned by Day & VonMinden, of New Market.

ASSAULTED CONDUCTOR; HELD FOR GRAND JURY

Arraigned before City Judge DeMeza this morning charged with assaulting Harry Simpson, a conductor on a Main Line trolley, Charles P. Lyons, of West Fourth street, was held in $200 bail to await the action of the grand jury. In default of bail he will be committed to the county jail.

Lyons pleaded guilty and said he was intoxicated when he committed the offense. His attack upon the Public Service employe was the outcome of a quarrel which followed when Simpson remonstrated with Lyons for causing annoyance to other passengers. He was arrested by Patrolman Sweeney.

ENGINE CREW INJURED WHEN BOILER EXPLODED

(By Telegraph to The Daily Press.)

Philadelphia, March 3.—An explosion of the boiler of a locomotive, hauling a passenger train, this morning, was responsible for the serious injury of the engineer and fireman.

The accident occurred at 9:25 o'clock. The engine was attached to a special train carrying the mass volunteer militia bound for Washington.

None of the passengers was injured. The accident happened as the train was passing East Rahway.

TEN HOURS' DAY AT POST OFFICE

Many Changes Will Take Effect Tomorrow in the Local Mail Service.

MR. BIRD ANNOUNCES

Three More Clerks, Three Carriers, One of the Latter Being a Colored Citizen—No Collections on Sunday.

With the change in the national administration tomorrow, when Woodrow Wilson becomes President of the United States, there will be changes in the local postoffice, the most important of which probably will be the introduction of the ten consecutive hour working day for all employes of the department. While this will prove of benefit to the employes, and Postmaster Bird has been able to secure additional help, there will be no improvement over the present service. In fact, Mr. Bird believes that it will interfere to some extent with the carriers who make two trips a day.

Under the new rule the carriers will begin work at 6:30 o'clock in the morning and quit at 4:30 o'clock in the afternoon. Some of the clerks will begin work at 5:30 o'clock in the morning and will quit at 3:30 o'clock in the afternoon. The men must work ten consecutive hours and they must stop work when their time is up.

Another important change in which the public will be interested will be the closing of the carriers' window for the 5:30 o'clock afternoon mail. This window will not be opened in the future and Postmaster Bird says that it will be useless for anyone to try and get his mail there. If it is found possible the window may be opened at 7 o'clock in the evening for not more than a half-hour.

In connection with these changes, Mr. Bird has been given three additional letter-carriers and three extra clerks, and there will be two substitutes, one of whom, George Lockette, is the first colored man to enter the regular service. He passed the examination for carrier with a high percentage. He is 30 years of age and formerly worked for Joseph Harrigan, of South avenue. The other substitute is James F. Martin, who formerly worked at Pond's.

The three additional carriers are William F. Summers, Frank Stodd and Alvah B. Dunham, and the additional clerks are Daniel Shea, who resigned as carrier; Charles Weaver, formerly a local trolley conductor, who lost his leg as the result of an accident at Front and Somerset streets, and Roy Hann.

Mr. Shea will alternate with William Thorn at the stamp window; Mr. Weaver will be the night distributing clerk and Mr. Hann will be assigned to the mailing division. Clarence Rittenhouse, whose place is taken by Mr. Shea, will be assigned to the city distributing and registry divisions.

As Mr. Bird will be obliged to use his entire force, there will be no other substitutes available for the present in case extra work is necessary. It is expected that Carrier Lockette will be assigned to handling the parcel-post packages for the present.

Beginning next Sunday there will be no general collection of mail from the letter-boxes on Sunday. Mr. Bird is now preparing a list of boxes from which collections will be made in the business section, but the residential section will be entirely cut out of collections on Sunday.

WANTS TWO MORE JUDGES ON U. S. SUPREME COURT

(By Telegraph to The Daily Press.)

Washington, March 3.—In line with the well understood program of the incoming administration for progressive and reform legislation comes a revival of the announcement from authoritative sources that President Wilson will seek to increase the membership of the United States Supreme Court by asking Congress to provide for the appointment of two additional justices. Naturally, he is expected, in conformity with the frequent declarations of intention to put only progressives on guard, to appoint men who he can trust to construe the constitutionality of the reform legislation affirmatively so that the people may have their reform laws upheld.

There is no mistaking the determined attitude of the incoming president and those working with him towards progressive legislation.

MAYOR GIVES PRAISE TO POLISH AMERICANS

With an object of arousing a patriotic spirit among the Polish populace in this and surrounding towns, a mass meeting of representatives of this nationality was held in John Sobieski Hall on East Second street, yesterday afternoon and more than 250 were present. The demonstration was held by the United Order of Polish lodges and the prime object in getting together was to enlighten the people of foreign birth as to their rights and duties as American citizens and to learn of the situation in Poland.

Mayor Stewart spoke briefly on the subject of good government lauding the local population of that nationality for their public spirited inclinations and incidently saying that the Polish people are a set of the best law-abiders in the country. Edmund Szydlowski, president of the Polish National Alliance of the United States, outlined the present condition of affairs in the European countries and urged financial backing for Poland in its struggle to regain its independence. He said that the situation is threatening and if the struggle does begin all Polish people in America would be expected to return to the mother country and take up arms against the foe. About $75 was subscribed at the mass meeting yesterday afternoon to be turned in to the general fund which is being kept as an emergency in case of war.

DEMEZA UNPERTURBED BY COURT'S RULING

City Judge Will Continue to Inflict Punishment on Speakeasy Men.

When City Judge William G. DeMeza was asked what course he would pursue regarding sentences in "speak-easy" cases now that Judge Connolly, in the Union county court, has set aside the conviction of Louie Davigo, whom he sentenced to pay a fine of $100 and to undergo thirty days in jail, he stated that he would not deviate from the position he has taken from the day he first became city judge.

"As I understand it," said the Judge, "Judge Connolly set aside the sentence on the ground that the complaint was imperfect. All along I have considered that it is wrong to hold 'speak-easy' men for the grand Jury for it entails much expense to our taxpayers as the city has to pay the expenses of the witnesses and the time of the police is taken in going to court to testify. Furthermore, convictions are hard to get in such cases in the county courts and that is the fault of the juries, not the judges.

"I think it better for the ends of justice and for the taxpayers' pecuniary interests to impose sentence myself. In this way the fines go into the city treasury, not to the county. Then, too, I see to it that the guilty parties go to jail.

"I believe that most citizens will support me in this stand which I shall continue to take unless the courts give an opinion that it is illegal for me to punish these culprits and that I must hold them for the grand jury. I hope that such a decision will never be made."

CHAUFFEUR IS AGAIN HELD FOR GRAND JURY

Bradford Blauvelt, the chauffeur who was responsible for two accidents on the Warrenville road on Wednesday night, February 13, was arraigned before Justice of the Peace Hughes in the Watchung court Saturday night on the charge of assault preferred by Charles Drummond, of Springdale, who with his wife and seven-year-old daughter, Helen, were thrown from the carriage in which they were seated, when the machine the defendant was driving crashed into them. Blauvelt was held in $200 bail to await the action of the grand jury.

In summing up, J. Henry Crane, who represented Blauvelt, claimed that no intent of assault had been shown by testimony, which he said was the only ground upon which an assault charge could be sustained, and therefore asked that the complaint be dismissed.

Mr. Crane was indignant over the disposition of the case and declared after the hearing that prosecution of Blauvelt was being made persecution.

REPAYS KINDNESS WITH HUGE CHECK

When Daughter is Born N. P. Twp. Man Receives Gift of $25,000 for Child.

FROM A COAL BARON

Fourteen years ago a promising coal mine owner of Pittsburgh, Pa., said to Charles Hodges, manager of the railroad ticket office at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, New York:

"Mr. Hodges, you have been very good to me—and granted me many favors, when I get to be a rich man, I'll repay you."

During the ensuing years Mr. Hodges married a daughter of Frank Probst, proprietor of the Washington House, North Plainfield Township, and two weeks ago a baby girl was born to the couple, and was named Josephine. And the mine owner is a multi-millionaire and a prominent factor in big business affairs.

Visiting New York frequently on business the millionaire always stopped at the Waldorf-Astoria and the friendship between himself and Hodges increased. Last Wednesday when the financier entered the New York hotel the usual cordial greeting followed and Hodges told his friend that he was now the proud father of a baby girl. The millionaire accused Hodges of joshing him, but accepted an invitation to come and see the child and paid the visit yesterday afternoon.

He brought with him his personal check for $25,000, made payable to the two-week-old Josephine, which he stipulated was to be held in trust for the child by its parents until she became of age.

Seen at the Washington House today, Mrs. Hodges told of the millionaire's kindness and said she was sorry that he had abstracted a promise from her to keep his name a secret. And the $25,000-baby in perfect health laughed and cooed, ignorant that she is the recipient of such good fortune.

Mrs. Clara Berry is Located in Morristown by the Police.

Mrs. Clara Berry, of Leland avenue, was reported to the police as missing from home yesterday morning and the local authorities were asked by her husband to institute a search. She went to Elizabeth on Saturday morning on a shopping tour, purchasing numerous household articles which she charged to her husband, having them delivered to the house. At noon-time she entered a restaurant in Elizabeth, it is known and ordered a meal for which she lacked funds to pay.

Mrs. Berry returned home Saturday night and upon arising yesterday morning informed her husband that she was going downstairs to prepare his breakfast. The husband says he went down to his morning meal as usual, but his wife was gone, having taken a sudden notion, he says, to visit friends in Morristown. The police of that city found her this morning and communicated with her husband, who sent for her.

The woman has apparently been suffering some mental trouble since she left home Saturday morning on her shopping trip and cannot account for anything she has done since that time.

Getting the Collar On.

A prosperous farmer has gained the reputation of being the stingiest man in his town and consequently is not a general favorite with his neighbors. He owns an old horse which, to put it mildly, is very thin. As if to make up for the lack of flesh on its body, however, the animal has a head many sizes too large for it. Of course people talk about the horse, and the owner doesn't like it. Last week, for instance, he went to the expense of a new collar for the animal. A very few minutes after the delivery he was back at the saddler's with the collar.

"Don't you know nothin'?" he blurted out. "You've made it too small. I can't get it over his head."

"Over his head!" reiterated the saddler. "Man alive, it wasn't made to go over his head! Back him into it!"—Everybody's.

A Nice Distinction There.

A noted journalist and author, whose name we cannot mention because he is on our paper, is constantly importuned by a celebrated New York portrait painter to sit for him.

"I'd do it, too," the author told a friend, "only I'm not quite clear just when to tell George I will. When he has imbibed a bit too much he wants to paint my portrait, and when he hasn't he wants me to come and have my portrait painted."—New York World.

His Hard Luck Day.

It was School Superintendent Buster's unfortunate day. A bucket had been left standing in the dimly lighted corridor of No. 19, and on the way to Miss Dexter's classroom he stumbled over it. Fortunately none of the children heard what he said there in the dark, so the chief harm done was to his shin. He entered Miss Dexter's class sadly ruffled in dignity and temper and slammed the door. Miss Dexter was at the blackboard, with her back to the class.

"If that bad mannered little boy," she commented, without turning, "will go out of the room again and come in again, closing the door properly behind him, I shall overlook his lack of breeding this time." Then she turned.

Miss Dexter was abject in her apologies, but who can minister to wounded dignity, especially of the pedagogical type? In a vain effort to regain his customary poise, Superintendent Buster forced a sickly smile and addressed himself to the class of small children.

"Now, children," he began unctuously, rocking back and forth on his heels and with hands deep in pockets, "I wonder whether you know who I am?"

For a moment there was expectant silence, then a small hand was raised.

"Well," said the superintendent encouragingly, "who am I?"

"You're no gentleman," was the pitilessly logical reply, "or you wouldn't have your hands in your pockets!"—Chicago Record-Herald.

Their Welcome.

On the arrival of the Duke and Duchess of Connaught in Khartum three years ago it was thought by the troops, says the Egyptian Gazette, that it would be right to decorate the place as much as possible. Accordingly, with infinite pains, a triumphal arch was erected, to the great satisfaction of all concerned.

A picture of the queen and the Prince of Wales graced the arch, but no pictures of the duke and duchess were to be obtained for love or money. Advice was therefore sought from one of the English sergeants, and he advised placing a notice between the two portraits referred to bearing the inscription, "Let 'em all come."

This was accordingly done, much to the amusement of the duchess, who insisted on taking a snapshot of the arch.

Economy And Inspiration

We all have inspiration—you'll grant that. Even the spendthrift has it. His is to spend more money.

But how many men and youths who buy their own clothing and furnishings have the inspiration to be economical?

Have you? Do you get the best possible merchandise for the lowest possible price? If not, why not?

It surely can't be lack of opportunity. It's the want of inspiration to be economical.

Then why not come to Rothberg's and take a look at the Suits, Top Coats and men furnishing fixings—see how low I price the better kinds of "Things That Men Wear."

The evidence is convincing. You'll be inspired. You'll vote the "Economical Ticket" ever afterwards.

ELECTRICITY KILLS A DUKE EMPLOYEE

Melick Touched Live Wire in Basement of His Home and Was Found Dead.

Somerville, March 3.—William R. Melick, aged 34 years, employed for some time at the Raritan country estate of James B. Duke, head of the Tobacco trust, was found dead in the basement of his home by his wife Saturday night, death having been caused by an electric shock. Melick had charge of the dairy of the Duke farm, and the machinery for the milk separator, churn, etc., was located in the basement of his home. It is thought that in working about the motor he had touched some of the wiring, and received a shock, causing instant death. Melick failed to appear for supper at the usual time and his wife went to look for him about 6:30, when she discovered his dead body. The only evidence of the electric shock was a small burn in the palm of one of his hands. He was considered a very careful workman. Dr. T. H. Flynn, of Somerville, was called but his services were not needed.

Besides his wife, Melick is survived by a seven-year-old daughter. The funeral services will be held from the house on Wednesday afternoon, the Rev. J. J. Hoffman, pastor of the Reformed church, at Raritan, officiating. Interment will be at Lebanon.

BAMBERGER'S

"THE ALWAYS BUSY STORE"

MARKET, HALSEY & WASHINGTON STS.

SALE C. T. SHIPMAN Stock of CHINA, HOUSEWARES

Mr. C. T. Shipman, who for many years has conducted a high-class housefurnishing and china store at 477 Broad Street, recently decided to embark in another line of business. Mr. Shipman took much pride in his business, which was natural enough after the years of effort he had expended in its development. He was particular TO WHOM HE SOLD HIS STOCK. He figured that he would rather dispose of it at a low figure to a reputable concern like Bamberger's than sell it to unknown parties at an advanced price. We concluded a deal with Mr. Shipman which was infinitely more advantageous to us and to you than it is to him. We bought this stock at a VERY LOW price and we are going to turn it over to YOU at the same ratio of saving. This is, by all odds, the most important purchase of its kind ever consummated in Newark, and we urge you strongly to take advantage of the opportunity. YOU know the character of merchandise Mr. Shipman handled and YOU know that the Bamberger store would not invite you to this sale if the values were not all that we claim for them and MOOE.

1-4 to 1-2 off

We have devoted much additional space in our basement to this great purchase and have increased our salesforce to take care of the crowds. Not a single article in the Shipman stock has been witheld, and the savings positively range from one-fourth to one-half. The great sale began promptly at 8:30 this morning and will continue as long as the various lots held out. We mention a FEW of the many lines involved in this purchase:

KAREL VAN DER VEER BECOMES A BENEDICT

Somerville, March 3.—Miss Ethel Van Fleet, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Abram T. Van Fleet, was married on Saturday evening to Karel V. D. Van-Der Veer, son of Mr. and Mrs. George V. Van Der Veer, of Dunellen, formerly of this place. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Frederick J. Soule. Mrs. Charles H. Mathews, a sister of the bride, was matron of honor. The bride wore a gown of white embroidered Canton and carried a bridal bouquet of roses and lilies of the valley. The couple will make their future home at Syracuse, where the groom holds a responsible position with the J. P. Miller Company, which he assumed about a month ago, after an employment of several years with J. S. Frelinghuysen Company, of New York.

DAMAGE VERDICT UPHELD.

Trenton, March 3.—The Supreme Court, in an opinion by Justice Kalisch, has sustained a verdict for $3,300 damages obtained by the Peerless Plush Manufacturing Company against the New York, Susquehanna and Western Railroad. The litigation resulted from an accident, May 20, 1911, when a Susquehanna train ran into and demolished an auto truck of the Peerless company at Lafayette street, Paterson. The Peerless company alleged negligence on the part of the railroad in failing to give the required statutory signals. The railroad, on the contrary, contended that the verdict was against the weight of evidence, that the chauffeur was guilty of contributory negligence, which was responsible for the accident. The Supreme Court has also affirmed a judgment for $265, obtained in the Second District Court of Newark, by Joseph Centanni against Joseph D'Alessio. The claim was for wages due to Centanni.

BAYONNE HAS OFFICIAL FLAG.

Bayonne, March 3.—Bayonne has adopted an official flag. The field is of blue and white. There are two wide vertical stripes of the former color and a stripe of white in the centre. The official seal of the city in red and white, appears in the centre. Below the seal in red letters is the word "Bayonne," while the motto, "Industry and Progress," is printed around the seal.

FOOD FOR REFLECTION.

Some people have a very queer idea of public utility corporations, imagining that the owners are a few plutocrats who grind down the masses and wax wealthy. They do not seem to realize that these giant concerns are really composed of the people and themselves and that the officers and managers are not arrogant lords of finance but are simply servants of the many, many people who go to make up the real ownership. These are the ones whose incomes are affected when demagogic or irresponsible lawmakers enact unwarranted legislation detrimental to the utility concerns interest. Thousands of good citizens whose earnings are invested in this way, as a matter of fact, are the ones to suffer.

The Pennsylvania Railroad affords a good illustration of what the ownership of a public utility corporation really is for it has 79,432 shareholders. Of this number, 36,457, or 48.29 per cent., are women.

Illustrative of the wide distribution of this stock is the fact that of those who receive dividends, 12,634 own less than ten shares each. The average holding of Pennsylvania stock is 120 shares. Nearly all of the shareholders are individuals, only 564 corporations being numbered among the holders of stock.

Nearly one-third, or 23,968, of the shareholders, live in the State of Pennsylvania. In New England there are 15,584 shareholders, and in New York 122,966. There are 10,646 foreign stockholders.

THE TRUTH ABOUT 'CHANGE.

Not only the men directly interested in Wall street, but every investor in the country is naturally aroused over the radical position taken by Governor Sulzer as to the New York Stock Exchange. The drastic action the chief executive of the Empire State promises to take is the cause of all the excitement. The situation, it is agreed, is serious and should it come to pass that the Sulzer legislation be enacted a terrible blow would be dealt tens and tens of thousands of business men who would naturally be harmed by anything that adversely affects the Stock Exchange.

The members of the Exchange, therefore have already begun what might be called a campaign of education, the purpose being to enlighten the multitudes regarding the true workings and purposes of this great institution. For the benefit of the local public, George P. Mellick has very kindly written an article along these lines for the Plainfield Daily Press and it will appear in these columns tomorrow. Mr. Mellick was one of the small and distinguished committee appointed by the Exchange to confer with Governor Sulzer and he is also a member of the special committee whose important duty it will be to bring about an organized effort on the part of New York's civic bodies and business men generally to put a stop to the indefensible assault on the New York Stock Exchange.

According to the Short Ballot Bulletin there are 222 municipalities in this country whose affairs are administered under the commission form of government. Probably in half as many cities at the present time organized campaigns are being waged for its adoption and in the opinion of the Trenton True American, the number may be doubled within the next twelve months. It would not be surprising to see that prediction come true. Only recently Denver, Colo., and Spartanburg, S. C., adopted the plan and Racine and other towns in Wisconsin are getting ready to vote on it. Within the last few months half a dozen States have enacted laws permitting municipalities to adopt the new system, and the outlook as a whole is most encouraging.

It is not to be wondered at that a goodly sized boom has been started for Representative William E. Tuttle for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination. Any man who has come in contact with him or who has watched his political career, cannot help but admire the Westfielder, who, however, says he is not a candidate.

AN ACUTE ABSCESS.

The Way It Forms and the Way It Should Be Treated.

An abscess is a swelling that contains pus. It may be either acute or chronic, and it may either be deeply seated in the body or it may appear upon the surface. The chronic or "cold abscess" is generally of tuberculous origin, whereas the acute or "hot abscess" is the result of an infection by the pus microbes.

The acute abscess comes on suddenly with all the signs of severe inflammation—heat, redness, swelling and presently, as the pus forms, a throbbing pain. The sufferer often feels ill and has a slight degree of fever. In three or four days the abscess begins to soften, and the pain diminishes because the surface skin is being destroyed and the tension upon the sore spot is not so great. By and by there is only one layer left, through which the pus can be seen. This thin layer soon ruptures, and the pus escapes. Relief is immediate, and healing soon begins.

When the inflammation is deeply seated the affair is more serious. In such cases the pus may burrow until it invades some vital structure—the peritoneum or the brain, for instance—and a fatal result is not impossible.

The treatment of abscesses has changed much in late years. Formerly the acute abscess was allowed to form and break without surgical interference unless it threatened life or caused too much distress. Now the physician does not wait for it to pass through the natural stages. As soon as it appears he makes an incision and releases the poison before it has a chance to cause the formation of pus. He cleans the cavity thoroughly and keeps it continually moistened with an antiseptic solution. It must be allowed to drain freely, and moist antiseptic dressings should be applied while the wound is healing.—Youth's Companion.

PUDDLES OF SILVER.

Crude Methods That Are Used at the Mines In Mexico.

It was at Pachuca, Mexico, that the patio system of separating silver had its origin. This system is still followed extensively at the silver mines throughout Mexico. The ore is crushed and worked down to a state of puddle. It is then spread out to a depth of two or three feet over the paved floor of the courtyard, or patio. To this mass sulphate of copper is added in powder, about fifteen pounds of sulphate to 3,000 pounds of puddle. This is trodden into the puddle by horses. Several gangs of old, worn out horses or mules about twelve in a gang, are seen in various parts of the patio, being driven round in circles to tread in the sulphate.

On the next day 6 per cent of common salt is added and in two more days 100 per cent of pure quicksilver or as much as the assay of the ore shows is required. This mass is then trodden up by horses for fifteen days. It is then wheeled to a large tank through which passes a rapid stream of water. This washes away the clay, leaving the silver and quicksilver. This residuum is poured into cone shaped canvas bags through which most of the quicksilver runs out, and what remains with the silver is passed off with the vapor by means of heated retorts.

None of the quicksilver is lost, and even the vapor is brought by cold water to its original state and used again and again. The quicksilver soon rots the hoofs of the horses and the mules, but the Mexicans themselves do not seem to be much the worse for it, even though they wade around in the puddle for days at a time.—Harper's Weekly.

A Cinder In the Eye.

Who hasn't had difficulty in dislodging a cinder from the eye? Sometimes one can succeed with a corner of a handkerchief, but frequently the cinder is too deeply imbedded to be got out in that way. It would be hard to find a more sticky substance than chewing gum. The next time you see any one with a cinder in his eye just chew a piece of gum till it becomes soft and pliant, twist it to a fine point and you will find as soon as you touch the cinder with it out the cinder will come.—Leslie's.

READING DREAMS TO CURE INSANE

Unique System of Healing Tried In New York.

INTERPRET QUEER VISIONS.

Sufferers at Ward's Island and Other Points Now Receiving Strange Treatment—They Are Told Real Cause of Trouble, and Ills Then Vanish, According to Report.

New York is experimenting at Ward's island with the Freud system of curing the insane, and the treatment will be extended to the asylums at Kings Park and Central Islip, N. Y., and to other institutions if the experience justifies. There are at present more than 20,000 cases of insanity under observation and treatment within 100 miles of New York city.

The experiments are under the direction of Dr. August Hoch, and they are being carried on in the Psychiatric institute. Only selected cases, mostly of the neurasthenic types, are admitted.

The so called Freud system was originated by Professor Freud of the University of Vienna. He was in this country in 1910, when he delivered a course of lectures at Clark university, Worcester, Mass. His system, it is said, is limited to neuropathic or neurasthenic patients. The method is called "psychoanalysis."

The usual course of treatment is as follows: The patient lies on his back on a lounge, the physician sitting behind his head. In this way, according to a recent article by Dr. A. A. Brill, chief assistant of psychiatry at Columbia university, the patient remains free from all external influences and impressions. The main object is to avoid all muscular exertion and distraction, thus allowing thorough concentration of attention on his psychic activities.

Patient Questioned.

The patient is then asked to give a detailed account of his troubles, having been urged before this to tell everything that comes into his mind, even things that may cause embarrassment or mortification. In listening to such a history the doctor is apt to notice many gaps of memory both as to time and casual relations. The patient is then asked to fill in those gaps by concentration of attention, but the unintentional thoughts which originate in that connection are pushed back with the greatest resistance, and when the actual recollection comes back it is accompanied by distinct pain or discomfort.

During the treatment the doctor or operator has to "interpret" for symbolic action mistakes in speech, etc., by the patient, and the chief task of the operator is in interpreting or "reading" dreams, inasmuch as dreams, according to Professor Freud, give the most direct access to the unconscious. This interpretation of the patient's dream will overcome the patient's resistance and will "give the unconscious access to the conscious."

Dream Analyzers Needed.

Not only are expert dream analyzers and thought searchers required for the successful application of Professor Freud's ideas, but the process is a long one, requiring from six months to three years. But cures have been effected in the most refractory cases. The Freud enthusiasts say it is the best treatment for all chronic cases of "psychoneuroses," such as obsessions and hysterias in which physical disturbances are present.

Hysterical symptoms, according to Freud, come out of the intentional repressing out of consciousness the memory of a painful experience. Though in time this painful experience may be forgotten, some slight event is likely to recall the pain or the emotion, even while its cause remains subconscious.

In hysterically predisposed patients this awakening of emotion causes hysterical symptoms, though the patient does not recall the painful experience.

It has been found, according to Freud and his disciples, that when the operation succeeds in thoroughly awakening in the patient the memories connected with the first appearance of the symptoms and shows the patient the cause of them, then, if the patient has given full expression to his emotion, the symptoms disappear without returning.

It is all up to the patient. If he cooperates he may be cured of his hysteria or his obsession. He must be in his normal state—that is, he must be able to answer questions and to realize what the operator seeks. There is in ordinary cases no hypnosis, no "passes" nor suggestions, no laying on of hands nor other such performances.

Controlled by Dreams.

Dreams, so the Freud school of alienists aver, are divided into three classes—first, those in which the wish is fulfilled; second, those which represent a repressed wish as concealed and, third, those which represent a repressed but not sufficiently hidden wish, so that, though human beings regard themselves as free agents, they are actually "bossed" by their dreams.

But, while the ordinary neurotics are treated in the Freud system while in a normal state, hypnotism is fully recognized as an adjunct and is often resorted to.

S. P. C. A. AGT. ISSUES A TIMELY WARNING

Mrs. Van Hoesen Wants Stop Put to Practice of Selling Chicks for Easter Gifts.

Complaints have reached Mrs. S. G. Van Hoesen, the S. P. C. A. agent, in previous years, that very small, newly-hatched, incubator chickens are placed on sale at various stores and by various people throughout the country, such chickens being intended for use as Easter favors, presents, etc. Mrs. Van Hoesen says she wishes to serve notice on every storekeeper handling or selling small, newly-hatched chickens, under the conditions set forth, that is, to persons intending to make presents of them or to use as gifts or Easter favors, or to be turned over to children or other persons not having proper facilities for the care, keep and feeding of the chickens, that the act of keeping or selling under these conditions pre-supposes a violation of the laws relating to cruelty tto animals.

The society takes the view that these newly-hatched chickens are sold to persons who intend to make gifts or presents of them to children or other persons who have no place or means of caring for them. The chickens are consequently purchased and turned over to irresponsible persons who regard them as only playthings for a day and not as living, breathing birds or animals and who in the majority of instances do not take into consideration the proper housing or feeding of the birds. As a result of which in a day or two the birds die through rough handling, thirst or starvation. The S. P. C. A. is desirous of putting a stop to this practice and therefore the agent notifies everyone engaged in the traffic that if sales under such conditions are continued, the society will take necessary steps to prevent it by legal action, namely arrest and prosecution.

Mrs. VanHoesen says that the American Society in New York city started a crusade against this practice in 1908, and in the case of People vs. Faivre, the court's opinion was that the defendant in selling a young chicken to a boy who had no means of raising or keeping a bird, i. e., mother hen, incubator or brooder, was guilty of furthering an act of cruelty to animals, by tending to produce such cruelty and was liable even after birds left his possession. The custom is to sell these incubator chickens in a weak and hungry state to women and children as a reminder of the Easter-tide and most of them are quickly allowed to die of hunger, cold and starvation. This action is not intended to interfere with the legal or proper sale of young chickens.

WOMEN WHOSE PRESENCE WILL LEND CHARM TO THE WHITE HOUSE FESTIVITIES.

MRS THOMAS R. MARSHALL

The greatest honor that can be bestowed upon a woman in the United States is that of mistress of the White House. There are few, if any, who do not crave that honor, and when a woman is so privileged she well deserves the title "First Lady of the Land."

Mrs. Woodrow Wilson through her experience in the Governor's mansion at Trenton, N. J., has become well accustomed to the many duties that confront the wife of a man of affairs.

To Mrs. Wilson New Jersey's former Governor owes much of his success today. She is a devoted wife, a splendid housekeeper and a remarkable hostess.

The three daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Wilson are all talented. Although all have some musical education, Miss Margaret Woodrow Wilson, who is twenty-six years old, excels in this branch, having an unusually fine voice.

Miss Eleanor Randolph Wilson, inheriting her mother's artistic gifts, has become a student of fine arts.

Miss Jessie, who is blonde, is interested in sociology and spends much of her time working among the poor. The five members of the Wilson family have similar domestic tastes and spend much of their time at home.

Washington is now naturally wondering whether there will be great social activity in the White House for the next four years. With three attractive and unmarried daughters to assist Mrs. Wilson in entertaining, it is a safe prediction that there will be plenty of activity, even for Washington's social set.

LADY SCOTT AND HER SMALL SON.

Lady Robert F. Scott, widow of the Antarctic explorer, on whom King George recently bestowed "the same rank, style and precedence as if her husband had been nominated a Knight Commander of the Bath, as he would have been had he survived," is greatly affected over the death of her husband.

Lady Scott heard of the terrible fate he had suffered while she was in midocean off Fiji. As soon as she recovered from the first shock she said:—

"I must be brave, as my husband would have wished me to be."

PERSONAL.

Miss Margaret Hale, of Duer street, has taken a position with Rosenthal Brothers.

Howard Firstbrook, of East Second street, has taken a position with the Jersey Central in its Jersey City offices.

John Bremble, of East Seventh street, spent the week-end with friends in Philadelphia.

Miss Edna VanCleef, of West End avenue, is spending several days with Mr. and Mrs. John Emmons, of Jersey City Heights.

John Mellick, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Hartley Mellick, was baptized by Canon Alexander Macnab at the 4:30 o'clock service at Grace church, yesterday afternoon. During his stay in Plainfield Canon Macnab was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. George P. Mellick, of East Seventh street.

Mrs. Jerry Voorhees, of White House, spent the week-end with her cousin, Mrs. Cora Ryno, of Codington avenue.

Mrs. George Felter, of Nyack, N. Y., is visiting her sister, Mrs. William N. Tier, of East Front street.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

The Epworth League of the First M. E. church will give an entertainment in Vincent chapel, Friday night, March 8, at 8 o'clock. Cakes, ice cream and home made candy will be sold. A fine musical program has been arranged.

The Women's Foreign Missionary Society of the First Baptist church will hold its monthly meeting tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock, with Mrs. Martin L. Cooley presiding. This will be the annual meeting. Mrs. Charles H. Smith will lead the devotional service. There will be a social hour in closing.

One member was received by letter at the communion service at the First Baptist church yesterday morning and in the evening the ordinance of baptism was administered.

OCEAN DERELICTS.

Floating Perils That Drift With Winds and Currents.

A MENACE TO EVERY VESSEL.

These Vampires of the Sea, Some of Them Wholly Submerged, Are Dreaded by All Mariners—Methods of Locating and Destroying Them.

Today, according to Popular Electricity, there are about 2,000 derelicts in the waters of the world—floating perils that go where wind and currents bid them. Every sea is made hazardous by their presence. They have crashed into ocean liners and into junks of the China sea. To them all vessels are alike—something to be destroyed. They crash against them in the dead of night, when inky blackness hides their coming. Wrecks themselves, they seem to strive to drag all others to their own fate.

So they go drifting on the seven seas. More particularly they seem to swarm eagerly in the gulf stream.

From Cape Hatteras reaching north to the Grand banks of Newfoundland is the "graveyard of the Atlantic." It is a rolling waste where many ships are buried. It is a place where derelicts borne by the sweep of the gulf stream and the countercurrent of the Labrador current dart about like angry sharks, eager to fasten their maws on the hull of some ship.

In the hydrographic office at some seaport the wireless is sounding. A message is coming through the void. It is a message of peril coming from a steamship. It warns that a derelict has been sighted squarely in the path of ocean travel. For days the men at the station have been waiting for word of this derelict. Its position on the chart that all hydrographic offices keep has not moved for a week. They have lost track of it. Its driftings are as a mystery. The station men have been unable to wire back over the seas warning captains of its whereabouts. Any moment they may hear that it has attacked and wrecked.

But now the derelict has come into the light. The Baltic has sighted it and sent a warning humming over the seas. Now the men at the station are quick to act. At a word from their chief they relay the message to the commander of the revenue cutter Seneca, lying by. The Seneca has been waiting for this message—waiting for the derelict's whereabouts to be revealed. And now, knowing them, it gets up steam and sails forth, a purger of the seas, on destruction bent.

Of derelicts there are two kinds—those that float observed and those that float unobserved. Most people imagine that wrecked ships are ultimately driven ashore and that vessels reported sinking at the time of abandonment go down soon after. That is not true. Abandoned ships breed vampires of the deep. For months they float. Waterlogged, half sunken, pitched and torn by storm, they yet somehow seem to survive. They will live in gales that send the stanchest vessels to the bottom. Only time can destroy them—that is, unless electricity takes a hand.

Too heavy to rise to the surface and yet not water soaked enough to sink to the bottom and remain there, they crawl along just under the riding swells. Their abiding place is nowhere. From the untraveled tracks of the seas they may be carried by a storm directly in the path of navigation. Whither they go no word goes before them. They descend unobserved, quietly, grimly. Not until they have struck is their presence known. Then they take their toll. They destroy a ship, and from it another of their kind is made. It is their way of multiplying and spreading the breed. That is why it is so important that they be destroyed.

But now the Seneca has steamed into the province of the derelict. High in the mast the lookout is casting his eyes on all sides. If he is not alert the derelict may attack those on board the Seneca. Self preservation is strong in a vampire.

But now the tip of a submerged mass rises above a distant swell. Caught in a sudden pitch of the sea, the derelict has revealed itself. From the lookout's nest the cry sounds. The speed of the Seneca is reduced. It moves slowly toward its quarry. And now the work of harnessing electricity for the destruction it must do begins. From the magazines are brought mines charged with sixty pound burdens of guncotton. From the storehouses are brought insulated electric cables and a hand magneto. A small boat is lowered, and the mines are taken on board. Then the boat rides over the sea toward the derelict, a risky ride if the swells are running high.

And the next comes the work of placing the mines where they will create the greatest explosions. If the wreck is submerged the task is more difficult. More mines must be used. Exquisite care must be employed in their placing. Finally the explosive charges are connected by means of the insulated electric cables, and the wrecking party draws off to a safe distance. The man with the hand magneto provides the necessary current, the detonators of fulminate of mercury explode, the primers of dry guncotton are dealt a harsh blow, the explosion is sufficient to loosen all the heavy powers of the masses of wet guncotton, and then the derelict flies apart, its back broken, its sides flying through the air, a scraping and rending of planks, the sodden splash as they hit the water again—the sound of a vampire dying.

Placing His Kick.

On one occasion the professors at a Scotch theological college were made to feel the bitter irony and reckless sarcasm of one of their students. The students residing within the college dined together in the common hall. The fare was mean, consisting generally of rabbits. The students had often grumbled, but as a professor presided at the table none ventured openly to complain. Each student asked the blessing by turns. One rose reverently and said:

For rabbits young and for rabbits old,
For rabbits hot and for rabbits cold,
For rabbits tender and for rabbits tough,
Our thanks we render, for we've had enough!

PLAIN PREACHING A CANON'S PLEA

Stirring Sermon of Very Rev. Alex. Macnab, of St. Alban's Cathedral.

AT GRACE EPISCOPAL

Need of the Churches is Nathan-like Sermonizers—"The Average Sermon is Shot Into the Air," Declares Clergyman.

Plain preaching as one of the greatest needs of the church was the basis of an eloquent sermon delivered at Grace church yesterday afternoon by Canon Alexander Macnab, of St. Alban's Cathedral, Toronto, Can. This scholarly divine also preached at the regular 11 o'clock service in the morning to a large congregation. At the afternoon service, Canon Macnab took his text from II Samuel 12:7, "And Nathan said unto David Thou art the Man." The discourse, in part, follows:

"One of the greatest needs of the church today is plain preaching. We have theological sermons, scientific sermons, exegetical sermons, sociological sermons and homiletical sermons but we need plain straight forward preaching of the Gospel. We need men like Nathan who come to the point. Plain speaking in sermons never does any harm. We need the sermon that comes straight home to each and everyone of us.

"David was a man after God's own heart, successful in every way, with all the luxuries and comforts of life, yet with great burdens and problems and mistakes. David listens to Nathan's story about the rich man who slew the poor man's one little lamb to make a feast for a guest. The king was indignant and said that such a man should be punished and made to restore fourfold. Then came Nathan's retort, 'Thou art the man.' He had not thought of any such charge as this. It was the sad story of David's life which Nathan had told.

"The old prophets, Elijah and Jonah were plain spoken men. There was no misunderstanding them. Samuel told Saul just exactly where he stood in God's eyes. St. John the Baptist set before the Pharisees the shortcomings of their life in no unmistakable terms. We need just such preaching today. There would be no sleeping in the congregation if we had it. We need men to speak out God's message with all boldness, and congregations to take it to themselves.

"There is no real reason why people do not go to church, but there are many excuses offered. They do not stay away from the church where God's word is outspoken and plainly delivered. We need Nathan-like preachers who will tell us that when we are truly penitent 'the blood of Jesus Christ will cleanse us from all sin.' The average sermon is shot into the air. The old story of the Gospel is not told for needy men. Fishes in the caves living in the dark have lost the power of sight, so many people are going on in their shortcomings and are blinded to their faults. They need the plainly spoken sermon to arouse them. We hear the story of the prodical son read and we think it beautiful but we never think of ourselves as the prodigal.

"People often make the mistake of thinking that public worship and a certain respectibility and philanthrophy are sufficient. We need to be warned of the error of this. There are many church people who are content with the outside matter, when what we need is a new heart. Time and again we need to be reminded of these things that we may receive God's merciful pardon. We all think there is a time to gain and a time to lose. A little delay of three hours lost Napoleon the battle of Waterloo. A little delay may lose us time for repentence and mean failure at the last. We need to be told 'Thou art the man.'"

URGES OBSERVANCE OF THE LORD'S DAY

Rev. Wm. S. McCoy's Discourse on the Responsibility of Stewardship.

"The Responsibility of Stewardship," in which the importance of observing the Lord's Day was the principal thought, was the theme of an interesting discourse by Rev. William S. McCoy, rector, at Holy Cross church, yesterday morning. Mr. McCoy spoke in part as follows from the text St. Luke 16:2:

"Christ says, 'Give an account of your use of the Lord's Day.' There was a time when people planned how they could devote Sunday to the Lord's purposes. It was the Lord's Day in every truth and there was something about its observance that marked it off as a time for stopping and thinking about the things of God and of the spirit and of the affections that are higher and stronger and more eternal—the heavenly treasure. This was not so very long ago—and many of you here can remember when Sunday was such a day and when men and women by what they did and thought about marked it off different than the other six days. But it is different today. Church time comes, and instead of pews filled with worshippers the preacher faces but a small part of his congregation. Many people he never sees at all unless he goes to search them out. He is pretty sure that while the choir and a small part of the congregation are chanting "We Praise Thee, O God, We Acknowledge Thee to be the Lord,' that a great number are still in bed, or eating a late breakfast, or reading the Sunday newspaper. And we know how elevating the general tone of the Sunday supplement is.

"My ministry has not been a very long one, but I have had a number of most melancholy and distressing instances of people who have told me during the last few moments of their lives how they regretted that they had not made use of the means of grace afforded by regular Sunday worship. They had fallen into the custom of the time, many of their friends did not attend church, it seemed so much easier to go with the stream, to give the excuse of 'being tired from the hard week, and needing the time to rest up.'

"Sunday is the day of rest, the day devoted to Him who said 'Come unto Me, all ye who labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest.' What infinite peace and comfort He offers to men who are wearied and burdened by the cares and vicissitudes of the world. What calm in the midst of the storm of life's unrest, in the midst of life's fitful fever.

"'Give an account of your use of one Lenten season,' repeats the Master today. What sort of a reckoning is it that you can make? Today our Lenten season is half over. Many opportunities for soul progress have been offered. Have we made any use of them or have we wasted them? Many more will be offered? Will we pass them by? Many opportunities for service offer themselves. Christ puts His own person in the place of the suffering, the needy, one, your wife, your husband, your relative, your friend, who needs your sympathy, your love. You are a steward responsible for what you do towards them. Christ says, no matter how limited our lives' circle may be, 'Inasmuch as ye are patient, kind, generous, just towards these my children, whom I love and for whom I died, ye do these things unto Me.'

"Some there are who have preeminent opportunities for stewardship, like the President of our nation, for instance, who assumes his great office this week. What tremendous responsibility. He can only succeed if he is filled with this spirit of true stewardship. He cannot hope to have it without the illuminating revelation of God Himself. Those have been our greatest Presidents who have received their inspiration at the foot of the Cross—who came supplicating strength from the only sure sources of power, who have been willing to save their lives by losing it. Let us pray to God this day that He may impart to President Wilson the strength of His Grace; that his wisdom may be the divine wisdom; that the light he follows may be the everlasting Light of the Gospel—and that he may at the close of his term of service win that commending word, 'Well done, good and faithful servant.' This we ask in the name of our Saviour Christ, Amen."

IN WOMAN'S REALM

By JUDIC CHOLLET

The pretty shirt waist is a garment of which no woman ever had too many, and consequently every new design finds its place. This one includes a little panel at the front which is well adapted to lace or embroidered banding.

The lines are all exceedingly becoming, and the waist is a pretty, dainty one, yet simple at the same time. It includes regulation shirt waist sleeves that can be finished with either rolled over or straight cuffs.

TAILORED SHIRT WAIST.

For medium size the waist will require three and a half yards of material twenty-seven inches wide, with five-eighths of a yard of insertion three and three-quarter inches wide.

This May Manton pattern is cut in sizes from 34 to 50 inches bust measure. Send 10 cents to this office, giving number, 7753, and it will be promptly forwarded to you by mail. If in haste send an additional two cent stamp for letter postage. When ordering use coupon.

NEW WALKING COAT.

A Touch of Sportiness In This Spring Model.

CHECKED COAT IN THREE QUARTER LENGTH

Silk frocks and tailored street gowns of light weight wool and other seasonable materials will be covered in the street next spring by good looking walking coats in three-quarter lengths.

The coat illustrated is a stunning affair of this genre, made of checked worsted with plain cloth trimmings. It is decidedly smart and snappy.

The Next Mistress of the White House.

With the outgoing of Mrs. William Howard Taft, whom the country has loved and honored, there will go into the White House four most attractive women, the president's wife and his three charming daughters.

It has been said that no more refined, unassuming and considerate leaders of the social set have entered Washington in many days than will be these four.

Mrs. Wilson has never essayed to social leadership. She has been much in social life, both as the wife of a university president and mistress of a gubernatorial mansion, but her home is her life. The social glamour of the White House has no appeal for Mrs. Wilson and her daughters, although they are admirably fitted for the high social position. Mrs. Wilson is democratic in manner and life as well as in politics. Her daughters, it has been said, are not only like their mother, but also resemble their distinguished father.

Simple tastes, simple demands, simple living without frills or pretenses, will be their part. Mrs. Wilson was the daughter of a Presbyterian minister, and she has never departed from her "raising." Her ideals of life are high and religious. She is a wide reader and an entertaining talker and an artist of considerable ability. The charms of the three daughters will readily make for them a place in the hearts of Washington society and of the nation.

Margaret Wilson, the eldest, is twenty-six. She is probably the plainest of the three sisters. She is a short, slender, blond girl, wiry and vivacious. She loves golfing, fishing or a dashing game of tennis or baseball. She dances gracefully, rides horseback, swims, plays basketball and tells stories and converses as delightfully as her father. Miss Margaret is the musician of the family, with ambitions to make her career on the concert stage. The White House will probably not alter her plans, as she is devoted to her art.

Miss Jessie, the second sister, is the beauty of the trio and also the more serious. She is a social settlement worker and the youngest member of the nation board of the Young Women's Christian association.

Eleanor, the "baby," is the only one who bears a nickname. To her family and to her intimates she is "Nell." Tall, dark and attractive, she is often taken for the oldest of the Wilson sisters. For the last two years she has been studying art at the Philadelphia Academy of Fine Arts. Miss Eleanor is as lively as her eldest sister and brimful of fun.

The next second lady of the land, Mrs. Thomas Riley Marshall, wife of the vice-president elect, is not a suffragette, but she is probably one of the cleverest women politicians in the country. She and her husband have never been separated a night through their fifteen years of married life. Mrs. Marshall also enjoys the distinction of being the only woman to accompany her husband as a gubernatorial candidate from one end of Indiana to the other on a speechmaking tour. She is a woman of keen literary appreciation, and the executive mansion at Philadelphia is full of books, but devoid of bookishness. Somebody has said of her home that it is the kind to make you "just want to sit down and stay to supper."

Woman Mayor.

Miss Clara Munson has been elected mayor of Warrenton, Ore., on the citizens' ticket. She is the first woman chosen to such an office in Oregon. She won by a majority of 16 votes.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

COOKING SHAD.

SHAD is a fish that is generally popular. Boiled, baked, broiled or fried, it is an appetizing and nourishing food.

When Broiled or Fried.

Broiled Shad.—Prepare and clean the fish. Split and take out the backbone; then marinate in olive oil seasoned with salt, pepper, minced onion and parsley. Drain and broil. Baste with the olive oil. Serve on a hot platter garnished with watercress. Maitre d'hotel sauce may be served with this.

Maitre d'Hotel Sauce.—Take half a cupful of butter and work into it a teaspoonful of minced parsley and all the lemon juice it will take up.

The sauce may also be made by melting the butter, adding to it a teaspoonful of minced parsley and the juice of half a lemon.

Fried Shad.—Clean and lay the fish in very cold water for a few minutes, dry and split the fish down the back and cut each half into four pieces. Dip in beaten egg and then in cracker dust and set in the icebox for an hour or two. Fry in deep hot fat to golden brown. Drain off the grease and lay on a hot platter. Garnish with parsley and slices of lemon.

Two Ways of Baking.

Baked Shad.—Cut off the head and tail of the shad, split down the back and remove the backbone and the small bones along the edge. Wash, but do not allow the fish to lie in cold water. Dry with a piece of cheesecloth. Brush a shallow pan with a tablespoonful of drippings and lay the shad in, skin side down. Sprinkle with a teaspoonful of salt and one-eighth teaspoonful of white pepper. Melt a tablespoonful of butter and put over the shad. Dust with a little flour and pour over one-half cupful of milk. Put into very hot oven twenty-five to thirty minutes. Bake till light brown. The hotter the oven the better the shad will be.

Planked Shad.—Split the shad as for broiling and place it on a buttered fish plank with the skin side next to the wood. Rub with melted butter, season with salt and pepper, and place in the oven to cook. Baste with melted butter seasoned with walnut ketchup. Serve on the plank, bordered with mashed potatoes and garnished with slices of lemon and sprigs of watercress. Use any sauce preferred.

SUFFRAGE PARADE A MONSTER ONE

Over 5,000 Participate in 'Votes for Women' Demonstration at Washington.

CHEER THE MARCHERS

The Statuesque Miss Milholland Garbed as Herald, Carrying Trumpet and Banner, Leads the Procession.

Washington, D. C., March 3.—In the memories of the 331,000 residents of Washington and the 150,000 or more visitors now in the national capitol today will live as woman's day and as such will be remembered as distinctly as tomorrow will be remembered as Wilson's day. For three hours this afternoon the broad stretch of Pennsylvania avenue between the Capitol and the Treasury building, famous as the route of the presidential inaugural processions, resounded with the tread of 5,000 women—and some hundreds of men—marching under the banner of "Votes for Women." The parade was more than a mere spectacle. As division after division passed down the avenue the tens of thousands of spectators who lined both sides of the historic throughfare were visibly impressed by the profoundly earnest character of the demonstration. When the last section had passed from view more than one spectator was heard to express the opinion that the demonstration was one of the most remarkable ever seen in any country in any cause.

With flags flying, bands playing and crowds cheering, the women made a gallant show as they marched along. Women from every State and women of almost every nationality, society women and working women, women of the stage and women who have distinguished themselves in numerous other professions, all marched shoulder to shoulder in the common cause.

The parade was in five grand divisions. Each division contained fifty sections, and each section was headed by a brass band. Each division was a chapter in the great story which the pageant unfolded—the story of the struggle of woman for liberty and equality throughout the ages.

At the head of the procession rode the statuesque leader, Miss Inez Milholland, garbed as a herald and carrying trumpet and banner. After the herald came musicians, a women's band, then a standard bearer, then a mounted brigade. Following these were fifty ushers dressed in blue and gold.

The first division of the pageant presented the idea that the equal suffrage movement is world wide. The next division showed by a series of four floats the progress of the suffrage movement in the United States. Other divisions comprised delegations of women farmers, nurses, educators, lawyers, physicians, artists, musicians, writers, factory workers and others to show the many professions and occupations in which women engage.

These were followed by the State delegations, some represented by floats and some by marchers. The climax of the division was the big State car celebrating the triumph of the ten States now having equal suffrage and attempting to show the needs of the other States for the same privilege. In this division appeared also a large delegation of men representing the Men's League for woman suffrage.

The firing of the signal gun for the start of the procession was also the signal for the opening of the allegorical pageant on the steps of the Treasury building. As the first music of the approachnig procession was heard, Columbia advanced to the head of the steps. Simultaneously with her advance two gigantic American flags were unfurled on either side of the broad platforms which flank the steps. Columbia then descended to the broad plaza below and, as the pageant marched slowly by, she summoned from the classic shades of the heavy Ionic pillars that support the roof of the Treasury building, figures representing Justice, Liberty, Charity, Peace and Hope—each represented by a woman well known in society or in the professions. As each character came forth she was attended by an imposing train of graces, pages and subordinate figures. As the tableau was gradually built up around the figure of Columbia, the actors in it went through a series of descriptive and classic dances.

The tableaux were artistic and interesting in the extreme, but, after all, it was the procession of marchers that formed the keystone of the demonstration. Long before the procession started Pennsylvania avenue was packed with humanity to a degree which made it almost impossible to move along the sidewalks. The spectators came early, many with chairs and boxes on which to stand, and they brought their lunches. Every window along the profusely decorated avenue was filled and the public grandstands erected for the inaugural parade had no vacant space. Mrs. Taft and a party of friends occupied seats in the official reviewing stand, while other stands were filled with diplomats, representatives of the judiciary, senators, representatives and other persons prominent in official life.

Y. M. C. A. AJAX WON CHAMPIONSHIP IN A WHIRLWIND FINISH DEFEATING HOPE

After being on an even footing in their championship series for over a month with one game a piece to their credit, the Y. M. C. A. Ajax and Hope Chapel basketball teams met on the neutral Saengerbund Hall court, Saturday night, in the play off and the Chapelites relinquished their claim to title honor, going down to a count of 33 to 21. Although the twelve point margin that separated the two contenders at the end looked like a mountain to the winner, the losers fought until the very last minute of play, putting up one of the most heart-breaking and stubborn uphill fights ever witnessed on a local court. The game itself was a whirlwind affair after the first few minutes of play, during which time the players were apparently warming up, for the playing was listless and uninteresting, but once they got started they fought like demons. After Hope Chapel had drawn first blood on a penalty toss the contest resolved itself into a greulling fight in which every individual point was stubbornly fought for. All through the initial period and half way through the second, field goal shooting alternated, and the association boys' win was really annexed in the final minutes of play, when they flashed that identical spurt that has been ever characteristic of their court battles and started a goal bombardment that bewildered the Chapelites and placed them well in the van.

Enthusiasm in this deciding game was of the calibre that is approached only by the annual inter-High School matches and the throng of basketball lovers that packed Saengerbund Hall were kept constantly on their feet and the rival cohorts kept up an incessant din in an endeavor to spur their favorites on to further efforts. In numbers, Hope Chapel rooters were leaders, but in noisily expressed enthusiasm they were closely seconded, if not equaled, by the lusty band of Y. M. C. A. supporters. Every field goal called forth a vocal explosion from the gallery and it was with difficulty that the officials made their rulings understood at times.

Playing with the handsome Ritz loving cup and seven medals as incentives, the respective contenders not only put their strongest lineups on the field but every one of the ten players that took part in the fray was primed to win and to turn the trick by superior basketball. The fact that each team had triumphed over the other while playing on its home court caused much speculation as to which way the battle would sway on the neutral North Plainfield court and the game was decided on playing methods and ability exclusively. Martin, the Westfield High School basketball coach, arbitrated the all important contest, and an more unbiased and efficient referee would be hard to single out. Rimmer, a Hope Chapel official, served in the capacity of umpire and held the teams to the keenest edge of restrictiveness.

Individualism played a prominent part in the Ajax's victory and the Hope loss, the winner's forwards doing all of their team's scoring, and the guards holding the lithe Hope Chapel forwards to a low mark. Peacock monopolized the spotlight from the first shriek of the whistle until the teams left the floor, registering ten field goals besides his usual collection of penalty throws. His work was overshadowed by no other performer and to him belongs the credit of victory. Captain Brynariski, although playing at centre, put up his reliable defensive game, warding off many onslaughts at the Ajax goal. While he failed to annex his usual array of sensational field goals he doubly made up for this deficiency, if it might be termed as such, by his close guarding.

Captain Johnny Heron and his brother, as forwards, were towers of strength to the losing combination but Glover and Nash held them well in check. Allen Snyder did some good basket caging and excellent passing for the Chapelites but made a sad mistake in getting stranded at the farther end of the court and leaving the unerring Peacock unguarded, ready to receive the passes and push them through the iron ring. Leighs and Doig played fine games on the defensive for the losers, covering their opponents to a point of perfection.

Hope Chapel displayed a woeful weakness in foul shooting, missing twelve attempts from the fifteen foot mark, the Ajax being subjected to penalties galore in the second half. What few opportunities the Ajax had for free throws were well taken care of by Peacock.

FINE OFFICIAL SORT.

An effort is being made to secure Carlton, the Trenton High School basketball coach, to officiate at the third North Plainfield-Plainfield High School match to be played at Saengerbund Hall next Saturday afternoon. Carlton is well known to local basketball enthusiasts, having refereed the third feminine interscholastic game last year, the P. H. S.-Trenton High School game at Trenton this year and also the Nonpareil-Trenton Y. W. C. A. game played at the Capitol. Carlton is accustomed to college rules, however, and this may cause some hitch in signing him up.

P. H. S. COACHES.

Louis Slocum, Tommy Mullin and Otto Frederickson will take up the training burden at the Plainfield High School left by Jack Martin, who has gone to join the New York Americans on their training trip. Martin got the candidates firmly started and the work will be comparatively easy to continue from where he left off.

MARTIN BUSY REFEREEING.

Martin, the well known Westfield High School basketball coach, is gaining popularity as a basketball official. Saturday afternoon he arbitrated a girls' game at Cranford and Saturday night he came to this city and officiated at the Ajax-Hope Chapel game.

"MAC" SAYS

At last that Hope Chapel-Y. M. C. A. Ajax series has been brought to a close. Final count and standing—Ajax 33, Hope Chapel 20.

There was nothing to the match but Peacock and the officials. This trio could have played the game unassisted.

Johnny Heron experienced somewhat of an off night in foul shooting. It was quite a change from getting eleven of the one point scores as he did against the Tuscarora Canoe Club last week.

Once again foul shooting played a prominent part. Had Hope Chapel made good on all of its throws the Ajax would have been in arrears.

Every infraction of the rules was detected by the keen eyed officials and the foul shooting occupied a large portion of the contest.

Why not a game between the Ajax and the winner of the interscholastic League to decide the local championship?

Saengerbund Hall proved to be a fine court to decide a match on. Neither team was handicapped to any extent by the heralded slippery condition of the floor and neither showed any great degree of familiarity with the baskets, besides Peacock.

There is some talk of raising the admission price for that third interscholastic match to be played at Saengerbund court next Saturday. Everybody knows that money talks but some of the local basketball magnates think that what a quarter says is inaudible. Those who cleaned up $85 on a recent match still claim that money doesn't really begin to converse in complete sentences until it gets up to the half dollar mark. A half dollar has quite a big vocabulary but the one who loosens up to this extent to witness an interscholastic game must have a bigger one.

That was some game at the Y. M. C. A. last Saturday night. Plenty of shooting and lots of excitement at all times. Then to make it more interesting the local boys won out by a count of 56 to 52 over their Somerset A. C. rivals.

Garland, who has been heard from before in basketball circles, certainly demonstrated his prowess along the shooting line by caging twelve of the field variety.

The local end of the scoring was well taken care of by every member of the team, all of the players getting at least two field goals. Taylor, Coyle and Smith each rang up a half dozen.

A team that has never visited this city before will be entertained by N. P. H. S. at Saengerbund Hall tonight. Rutgers' freshmen will be the boroughites' opponents.

COURT SEASON ENDS.

The basketball season is carded to end on March 1 but there are still several important matches to be decided hereabouts. The North Plainfield-Plainfield game is still to come and the Nonpareil-Trenton Y. W. C. A. game for the State title will be contested some time during the next week.

BOROUGH MAIDENS PLAY.

Westfield High School will furnish the opponents to lineup against the strong North Plainfield High School feminine quintet at Westfield tomorrow afternoon. In the previous game played in North Plainfield the Mt. Ararat team was defeated and it is needless to say that they will try their hardest to win tomorrow.

RETICENT BOB FITZSIMMONS, JR., TALKS PUGILISM TO A DAILY PRESS REPORTER

Robert Fitzsimmons, Jr., of Dunellen, has signed articles to fight Jim Manley in the Moose lodge rooms at New Brunswick, next Friday night, and under the watchful eye of his father, the "ruby Bob" is putting on the finishing touches for the bout. In talking to a Daily Press reporter this morning young Bob said that the fight at New Brunswick would be a friendly one lasting about three rounds and the proceeds would go toward swelling the lodge treasury. When asked if he contemplated going into the fighting game as a business he said that it all depended upon how much he was offered for his matches. He said that the compensation would have to be a large one to make him take up the fighting game at which he has become proficient while training with his father at their Dunellen farm.

Young Fitz claimed that all of the newspaper articles describing him as a book agent trying to work his way through Rutgers College were erroneous and nothing but press yarns. He said that he never had any idea of entering college and was at present staying at his Dunellen home with no definite plans as to his future vocation. Although he claimed to be but seventeen years of age and said that he had lots of time ahead in which to make his future plans, the son of the "lanky one" looked fit to enter the ring at the present time and take his own part with a prize fighter of any size or calibre. He tips the scales at 185 pounds and his broad shoulders and large hands betray the power that is behind them.

Fitzsimmons said that he had not been doing much training of late but would be in the best of shape to meet Manley who is considerably lighter than the Dunellenite. He has been enthusiastic over the fighting game since he could first wield a glove and under the tutorage of his mighty parent has mastered all of the scientific points of pugilism. This will not be his first appearance in public, however, as he has completed a booking circuit with his father in a vaudeville act in which boxing plays a prominent part.

Rumors have been prevalent of late to the effect that the Fitzsimmons family were planning to move to Newark where the elder Bob is making preparations to start a hotel. When asked to confirm this report young Bob said that his father has been talking a great deal of late about his Newark speculations and that he would probably engage in the hotel business there in the near future but would not give up his farm at Dunellen. The seventeen-year-old son said that he and his father had a paying proposition in the Dunellen property and giving it up to live in the Metropolis of New Jersey would be their last consideration.

Y. M. C. A. WINS A HIGH SCORE GAME

Totaling up 108 points in a basketball game played at the Y. M. C. A., Saturday evening, the Y. M. C. A. first team and the Somerset A. C., of New Brunswick, furnished a basketball exhibition that is seldom equalled. Both teams gave great demonstrations of their basket caging ability, all of the points, with the exception of ten, coming on throws from the field. Garland, the visiting center, put up a remarkable game, getting an even dozen through the iron ring, while Coyle, Smith and Taylor got six a piece.

Fast teamwork and loose guarding featured the contest, neither team guarding to any extent, but both caging baskets from every angle on the floor. The Somersets are one of the best teams playing the game in this vicinity and have stood their ground against a number of heavy metropolitan aggregations during the present season.

WESTFIELD B. A. C. BEAT LIGHT TEAM

Fast Mt. Ararat Delegation Put the Parish House Seconds to Rout.

A team from Westfield High School styling themselves as the Basketball Athletic Club, defeated the Scotch Plains Parish House second five by a score of 60 to 20. After the first few minutes of play the home five was never in the game. Westfield scoring baskets at will from all parts of the floor. It was plainly evidenced in this contest that the Mt. Ararat players were out of the 'Plains' boys class, being heavier and speedier than the Parish House youngsters. Four members of the B. A. C. aggregation are regulars on the Westfield High School five and plainly showed their basketball ability in their passing and shooting ability.

For the 'Plains' boys Fred Saunders and Hooker put up sterling games and amply upheld their end of the scoring. The winner's honors were garnered by Allegar, the Westfield High School star forward, who caged fifteen field goals.

DIVORCED DRESSY SPOUSE.

Trenton, March 3.—On the ground that Paul R. Smith, of this city, was unusually fond of dress, Chancellor Walker has signed a final decree of divorce for the wife, Florence Smith. Smith married his wife when she was fourteen years old and deserted her July 16, 1908, while Mrs. Smith was attending a church picnic. According to the report of Advisory Master Frank S. Katzenbach, Smith was inordinately fond of dress and had a weakness for proclaiming his affections for other women. The master said that as Smith only made $7 a week as an elevator attendant, he did not have the means to gratify his desire for such elaborate clothes and maintain his family. Another hobby of Smith, it is charged, was to collect pictures of girls and line his bureau with them, and on every new addition he proceeded to annoy his wife about the pictures.

STAGE SETTINGS FOR INAUGURATION

CROWDS AT CAPITOL

Seat of Federal Government in Gala Attire and Everything is in Readiness for the Big Spectacle, the Parade Being the Biggest Feature.

(By Telegraph to The Daily Press.)

Washington, D. C., March 3.—Washington today is in readiness for tomorrow's inauguration of President Wilson, the first chief executive that the Democratic party has given to the nation in sixteen years. Delegations of Democrats and thousands of other visitors are pouring into the capital, and the streets and hotels are crowded with strangers. Streets and buildings are decorated until hardly anything except flags and bunting is visible.

All the mass of plans, worked out in detail by a small army of committees, among whom the labors were divided, are complete, and all that is now needed is propitious weather. In all the leading features of the day's ceremonies the etiquette and precedents established in previous years will be followed. The program may be summarized as follows:

At 10:30 o'clock tomorrow morning members of the congressional committee will wait upon Mr. Wilson at the Shoreham Hotel to escort him to the White House. A similar party will wait upon the Vice President-elect, who is also stopping at the Shoreham. The incoming President and Vice President will be greeted by President Taft and in a few minutes will begin the trip to the Capitol.

The President-elect will have as a special guard of honor the Essex County Troop of Newark, N. J., and the Vice President-elect will have a similar escort consisting of the Culver Black Horse Troop from Indiana. President Taft, the President-elect and Senators Crane, of Massachusetts, and Bacon, of Georgia, will occupy the first carriage. With the Vice President-elect will ride Senator Overman, of North Carolina, and Representative Rucker, of Missouri.

On arriving at the Senate wing of the Capitol the President-elect will go immediately to the President's room and the Vice President-elect to the Vice President's room. Committees will then escort the President and President-elect and Vice President-elect into the Senate chamber, which will be filled with the members of both branches of Congress and the judges of the Supreme Court of the United States.

The oath of office as Vice President will be administered to Mr. Marshall, who will then deliver his inaugural address and administer the oath of office to the senators-elect. With the organization of the new Senate completed all of the participants in the ceremonies will march to the platform erected at the east front of the Capitol, where the big event of the day, the actual swearing in of President Wilson, will take place. The oath of office will be administered by Chief Justice White. President Wilson will then deliver his inaugural address.

When the inaugural address has been concluded aand the last cheer has died away President Wilson, Vice President Marshall and ex-President Taft will proceed to the White House for luncheon. Meanwhile the inauguration parade will be forming at the Capitol. By the time the luncheon at the White House is completed it will be time for the leading figures of the day to take their places on the reviewing stand erected in front of the executive mansion.

From a spectacular point of view the parade will be the big feature of the day. It will be viewed by several hundred thousand American citizens, or as many as can pack themselves along the line of March. Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood, chief of staff of the United States army, will act as grand marshal of the procession.

The first grand division of the parade will be composed of the regular military and naval forces, including picked men of the army, navy and marine corps and the cadets from the West Point and Annapolis academies.

The next division will be given over to the militia. The entire National Guard of President Wilson's home State will be in line. Other States which will be represented are Massachusetts, North Carolina, Pennsylvania, Georgia, Maryland and Virginia. The governors of a dozen or more States will be in line.

The third division of the parade will be given over to the G. A. R. and other patriotic organizations, while the fourth division will be composed of civic organizations, mostly political, from all parts of the country. In the lead will be 1,500 Tammany braves in shining silk tiles. Prominent Democratic organizations of Chicago, Philadelphia, Baltimore and other cities will be represented.

The college men's division will be headed by practically the entire student body of Princeton University. Other institutions which will be represented are the University of Virginia, Johns Hopkins University, the University of Wisconsin, George Washington University and Georgetown University.

Fifty bands and as many fife and drum corps will be in line. All along the route will be stationed Boy Scouts, ready to render first aid to any of the marchers or spectators who may become ill. Ambulances and hospital attendants also will be stationed at intervals along the line of march.

The inaugural committee has used every means in its power to make the celebration one that will live in the minds of all who witness it for years to come. In point of brilliance of decoration, in the matter of the inaugural parade, in the arrangements for the illumination of the city and a display of fireworks tomorrow night it is believed that the Wilson and Marshall inauguration will surpass all others.

The inaugural ball will be the only customary feature left out of the program and this will not be missed by the general public. The ball was dispensed with at the special request of the President-elect, who asked the committee in charge of the ceremonies to make the entire celebration as simple as possible and at the same time as impressive and dignified as the inauguration of a President of the great republic demands.

The rush of visitors into the capital began in earnest today. The most of those already on hand are the experienced ones, who desire to get comfortably settled before the high tide is reached. They know what it is to arrive in Washington in the midst of confusion the day before inauguration, when bands are playing in the railroad station and in the hotel lobbies, when it is next to impossible to get a cab and when all the street cars become "stand-as-you-ride" cars. The inexperienced are waiting until later, when they will pay for their experience as all strangers in a crowded city do on the occasion of their first vist.

It is going to be a splendid inauguration, providing the weather clerk does his duty. History shows that the majority of inauguration days have been abominable, but everybody is hoping that Mr. Wilson may have luck.

But no misfortune in weather can chill the ardor of the Democratic hosts, any more than a blizzard or rainstorm will be able to mar the most important feature of the inauguration, the illumination of the city. The illumination of the capital by means of millions of electric lamps promises to be a show in itself. Pennsylvania avenue from the Capitol to the Treasury will resemble a fairyland. At 100-foot intervals the avenue has been arched with festoons of light. From each festoon there are three pendant colored lights, which gives the broad thoroughfare the appearance of being roofed with brilliant, glowing bulbs. The court of honor opposite Lafayette Park and the Union station plaza are also the centres of brilliant schemes of illumination. At night a big searchlight is to play on the Capitol, making it visible for miles around. There also will be lighting effects on the Washington monument and on all the prominent public buildings.

Major Sylvester, the superintendent of police, issued his final instructions today. Among other things, he directed that the entire route of the parade be roped off with iron cables and cleared of all vehicles before 9 o'clock tomorrow morning. Beginning this morning every available officer and private of the regular police force will be on duty and more than 500 special policemen have been employed.

A considerable number of detectives have been brought here from outside cities to assist the local force in protecting the public from the army of pickpockets and other crooks who always flock here for the great quadrennial harvest. As a further means of protection a unique campaign of publicity has been inaugurated by Major Sylvester. In the railroad stations, the lobbies of all the big hotels and in many other public places throughout the city large placards bearing miniature photographs of about 500 well known thieves, principally pickpockets, have been hung conspicuously on the walls so that all may familiarize themselves with the faces of the crooks and be in a positon to cause their arrest on sight.

The street fakirs are in evidence as usual. They are here in force from New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and from points as far distant as Chicago. Hundreds of them may be seen wandering up and down Pennsylvania avenue with souvenirs to sell. Their wares consist principally of badges and pennants bearing the portraits of the incoming President and Vice President. Evidently the manufacturers of such goods were at a loss to find a distinct emblem for the occasion, such as the "Teddy Bears" and "Billy Possums" that flooded the market at the Roosevelt and Taft inaugurations.

ARTS AND CRAFTS FURNITURE

TO SELL AT CLOSE TO HALF REGULAR PRICES

Undoubtedly this is the most important furniture deal of the year—a selling feature no store outside our organization can match, because the sale of Stickley Bros. Co. product is confined to us in Newark.

Stickley Bros. Co., you know, are makers of the world famous "Arts and Crafts Furniture"—better known to most people as Mission Furniture, but superior in the minds of many to mission because of the finer lines and more artistic design in the Arts and Crafts.

These goods, of course, are new and strictly up-to-date in design—just like the pieces we have been selling regularly from our own stocks this season—beautiful pieces, perfectly built; constructed to give service for many years; fit for the finest palace, yet simple enough for modest cottage, and cheap enough in this sale for any one.

We are agents in this section for Stickley Bros. Co., controlling the sale of their product; so, naturally enough, they let us have their discontinued patterns and factory surplus stock at a price so liberally reduced that we are able to sell it close to half the regular prices.

This Wonderful Sale Started This Morning at 8:30 o'Clock and Will Continue While Lots Last

FACTS ABOUT ARTS AND CRAFTS FURNITURE

Co., and is fully guaranteed to be the highest standard of leather it is possible to obtain for the upholstering of this high-class furniture. The color of leather used is a shade that will blend perfectly with the warm brown shade of the wood itself.

WILSON TAKES THE OATH

EXPLOSION HURLS COUPLE INTO AIR

Gas Meter Wrenched Apart by Theif, and Blow-up Wrecks House.

SHAKES WHOLE BLOCK

Colored Victims in Hospital Will Recover—Their Home in Ruins—Quarter Gas Meter Thief Responsible.

With a violence that shook the houses on the entire block an explosion occurred shortly after 11 o'clock last night at 627-A West Fourth street, occupied by Burrell Harvey, colored. The cause of the blow-up was the indirect result of a thief wrenching apart a quarter gas meter. The guilty man secured 25 cents after he ripped the meter loose from its connections and allowed the escaping gas to flood the house.

When the colored couple, returning home from a church entertainment searched with a lighted lamp for the gas leaks they were starting to descend the cellar stairs when the terrific explosion took place. Both Mr. and Mrs. Harvey were thrown unconscious to the sidewalk together with furniture and part of the falling building. Regaining consciousness, they found themselves in flames which they beat out with their hands.

The two victims are in Muhlenberg Hospital, where they were rushed in an automobile after receiving first-aid treatment at the office of Dr. Raphael Yood, of 401 Grant avenue. They will recover.

This morning a force of carpenters hired by the Brotherhood Realty Company, the owners, are bracing the walls and other parts of the building to prevent further accidents. The structure is a two-story affair about

AND CITY FATHERS HAVE TROUBLES TOO

Reville "Starts Something" and There's a Lively Time in Chamber.

Councilman Reville at the Common Council meeting last night again introduced his resolution that the curtains of the police patrol wagon be drawn when passing through the streets, and Councilman Calkins, who opposed it at a previous meeting, seconded the motion. When the vote was taken Reville was the only member to support the resolution and it was lost.

Then Reville asked President Clay if he was ready to give an opinion regarding the right of any member to attend any committee meeting of the Council, which he had asked for at a previous meeting.

Mr. Clay said that he had not prepared himself to answer the question but if the member so desired he would look the matter up at once in Cushing's Manual and answer his question. This brought a reply from Mr. Calkins, who said: "Let us have it out now."

Mr. Clay took occasion to say that he was a member ex-officio of all committees and that he should be notified of such meetings. His reasons for making the statement, he said, was that recently several committees had neglected to notify him. This remark brought Mr. Reville to his feet with the explanation that it was not his fault that the president had not been invited to attend his committee meetings. He laid the blame on the assistant city clerk, adding that he had given him the names of persons to notify. Mr. Clay explained that he did not intend his remark to be personal.

Referring to his inability to secure action on his resolution at a previous meeting, he said that he did "not ride in the club-rooms, was not a member of the Get-together Club" and as he had been ejected from a police board meeting, the only place he said he could offer a resolution was at a meeting of the Council.

P. C. C. INCORPORATORS TO EFFECT ORGANIZATION

The Plainfield Country Club on February 28 filed in the office of the Secretary of State, Trenton, its certificate of re-incorporation under Chapter 181, Laws 1898, and President Calkins has called a meeting of the incorporators to be held in the rooms of the Charyity Organization Society tomorrow night, when the constitution and by-laws will be adopted, with certain amendments so as to permit a board of twelve trustees.

The new trustees are W. T. Kaufman, A. A. Tilney and George P. Mellick. After the organization, the twelve incorporators will meet as a Board of Trustees and will elect officers and chairmen of committees for the year. The officers elected at the annual meeting are not technically the officers of the club as re-incorporated. It will not be necessary for the trustees to go through the formality of re-electing all of the 750 members.

WASHINGTON ROCK BILL.

The bill creating the Washington Rock Park Commission and appropriating $4,000 was made the special order of business of the Legislature on Saturday. The only measure to be considered was Senate Bill No. 200, which Senator Smalley is pushing along. The proposed act was reported favorably out of committee with minor amendments and passed upon second reading. The Daughters of the American Revolution are interested in it and have the assurance that Assemblyman Beekman, of Somerset county, will be equally successful when the bill comes over to the House.

JACK DWIGGINS.

Jack, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Clare V. Dwiggins, aged one year, died yesterday. The funeral was held at the residence of the parents, 508 Woodland avenue, at 1 o'clock this afternoon. The interment was private.

COMMISSION GOV'T COMMITTEE NAMED

Seven Citizens Will Take Charge of Proposed Educational Campaign.

As chairman of a meeting of a few citizens who gathered recently to discuss the commission form of government with the idea of having it submitted to the people for its adoption or rejection in Plainfield, Howard H. Williams announced today the membership of a citizens' committee he was authorized to appoint for that purpose.

CITY TREASURER'S SALARY INCREASED TO $2,000

The salary of City Treasurer William F. Arnold was increased by the Common Council last night from $1,750 to $2,000, it being understood that he is also to serve as custodian of school funds as at present. There has been some misunderstanding as to who was to pay Mr. Arnold for his work in caring for school funds, whether it was up to the city or the Board of Education. The opinion seems to be that inasmuch as Mr. Arnold is elected by the city and is primarily chosen to look after the city funds, it is the duty of the municipality to pay him.

The resolution increasing Mr. Arnold's salary was offered by Councilman C. C. Randolph. All of the members voted in favor of the increase except Councilman Reville. The latter gave no reason for opposing the resolution.

IMMENSE CROWD SEES CEREMONY

NOW 'FIRST CITIZEN'

(By Telegraph to The Daily Press.)

Washington, D. C., March 4.—As he had predicted yesterday, there was radiant sunshine when Woodrow Wilson, until last Saturday the great Governor of New Jersey, and the first college president to rise to that exalted office, took the oath as Preident of these United States today, succeeding William Howard Taft.

With the skies smiling on him and amid the cheers of a half a million, who had not witnessed the inauguration of a Democratic President in two decades, Wilson and Taft rode down Pennsylvania avenue amid the plaudits of the multitude, the cheers for the "Schoolmaster-statesman" being deafening.

Shortly before 10 o'clock the President-elect arrived at the White House, where he was cordially greeted by the retiring executive, Mr. Taft, who was to become a private citizen within a very few minutes. With the Essex Troop of Newark, N. J., as a guard of honor, and seated at the right hand of President Taft, New Jersey's first citizen was driven through yelling throngs of pleasure seeking visitors to the capital building on his way to be made the first citizen of his country. Immediately behind, in another carriage, rode Vice-President-elect Marshall.

After Vice-President Marshall had been sworn in, at 12:34 this afternoon, President-elect Wilson and President Taft entered the Senate Chamber, and the retiring session of that body adjourned sine die. Then the entire party headed for the great stand on the outside of the building, where the impressive ceremony of inducting the new President into office was begun. After taking the oath, President Wilson delivered his inaugural address which will be found on page 11 of the Daily Press.

SUNDAY SCHOOLS TO HOLD PARADE HERE

Movement Began by A. M. Harris for Demonstration in Early Summer.

Plans for holding a large Sunday-school parade in Plainfield during the early summer are being considered by the heads of some of the schools. At the session of the Bible school of the First Baptist church yesterday afternoon, in response to a request by Superintendent Arthur M. Harris, a rising vote was taken to determine who were in favor of the proposition, and it was practically unanimous. Within a short time the superintendents of the different schools will hold a meeting to take the matter up in detail.

Two years ago there was some talk of holding such a parade, but for some reason nothing came of it. In view of the increased interest being taken in Bible school work the plan has been revived and it is believed it can be carried through to successful completion this summer. The combined membership of all the Protestant Bible schools of the city and borough would make an imposing procession and inspired with martial music would result in a demonstration worth while, according to those who have taken the initiative in the movement.

PROCTOR'S PROGRAM.

Harry Ladell and his cabaret girls in their musical comedy act are the leaders off in Proctor's bill for today and tomorrow in fun making and everything that goes with it. The scenery is above the usual standard displayed by vaudeville shows and the costumes are eye dazzling. Creo, the great French illusion, completely baffles the audience. In this act a humane form is apparently molded out of what was before a rubber bust and wooden standards. All of the shaping is done in full view of the onlookers who are mystified when a beautiful woman steps out upon the stage fully clothed. Sherman Grantley and company in their comedy skit produce a world of fun and laughter in fifteen minutes. The juggling Bannons are experts along their line and some of their Indian club swinging stunts are hair raisers. Jeanette Lowrie, singing comedienne and lightning change artist, sings a number of topical songs and tells of her matrimonial experiences and traveling jaunts.

ATE JACK HORNER'S PIE.

Economy And Inspiration

We all have inspiration—you'll grant that. Even the spendthrift has it. His is to spend more money.

But how many men and youths who buy their own clothing and furnishings have the inspiration to be economical?

Have you? Do you get the best possible merchandise for the lowest possible price? If not, why not?

It surely can't be lack of opportunity. It's the want of inspiration to be economical.

Then why not come to Rothberg's and take a look at the Suits, Top Coats and men furnishing fixings—see how low I price the better kinds of "Things That Men Wear."

The evidence is convincing. You'll be inspired. You'll vote the "Economical Ticket" ever afterwards.

THE PLAINFIELD THEATRE

There are few places in the heavens or earth or waters under the earth, that the man who turns the crank of the motion picture camera has not invaded in his strenuous search for the original, the strange, and the startling, but perhaps the top notch of all the achievements of his brother operators was capped when J. C. Hemment, who took the Paul J. Rainey African Hunt Pictures, which will be seen at the Plainfield theatre on Friday, March 7, secured his water-hole film, which is the big feature, and was pronounced by Professor Henry Fairfield Osborne of the American Museum of Natural History, as the greatest contribution to natural science of the last decade. A complete picture of the various animals of the jungle coming down to slake their thirst, was secured by Mr. Hemment only after the most patient and painstaking labor. When the Rainey expedition first reached the waterhole, a blind of timbers covered by shrubbery was constructed "up wind" from the drinking place, and left absolutely undisturbed for six weeks in order that the animals might become accustomed to it, and would walk around it without fear. At the end of this period the operator took his place in the booth with his camera, and waited day after day. At first he saw nothing but monkeys, and other small animals, and once in a while a rhinoceros or a giraffe, but it was weeks before a sufficient assemblage of animals was at the hole at once to make a good picture. Finally, he secured a film, which took eight different species of animals at once.

"Well, the inevitable has happened, and Hamlet has become a neurasthenic or quite an up-to-date model," observed, a few days ago, Robert B. Mantell, who comes to the Plainfield theatre Wednesday afternoon and evening, April 2, in Shakespearean and classic repertoire. "Hamlet was too attractive to escape very long the modern delvers into nervous diseases, and a middle western newspaper man, with a strong penchant for the bizarre in medicine, has submitted to me his theory that Hamlet was a neurasthenic, susceptible to suggestions of all sorts. Hamlet's friends seem to have understood the nature of his affliction as well as any modern insanity expert could have done. These friends had learned of the improper relations of Hamlet's mother with his uncle, but dared not tell Hamlet direct, for fear of exactly the same consequences that would be meted out by a modern young man of spirit to anyone who would dare carry such tales to him about his mother. These friends, consequently, took advantage of Hamlet's neurasthenia. They invented a tale about seeing the ghost of Hamlet's father and about the queer actions of the ghost, and told it to the young prince. They worked upon him in such a way that he believed there might be something in the story of the return of his father, and resolved to find out. Having won Hamlet's consent to watch with them the next night, the young men rigged up one of their friends to look like the ghost of the dead king. This ghost they foisted upon the prince and had him tell Hamlet the story of the queen's infidelity, which they dared not tell direct. Hamlet readily swallowed the imposture, and proceeded to avenge the wrong done to his father."

Rahway, March 4.—Dr. Charles B. Holmes, city physician of Rahway, and four times Mayor of the city, is dead at his home, 168 Main street, from pneumonia, following an attack of the grip. Dr. Holmes was the son of Alonzo and Julietta Holmes and was born at Hamilton, Monroe county, N. Y., on July 3, 1848. Since 1874 he has been a resident of Rahway and was the oldest practicing physician in the city. Dr. Holmes represented the First Ward in the Council for three years. At the death of Mayor John J. Daly, Dr. Holmes, then president of the Council, served the unexpired term and was afterward elected four times as Mayor, serving nine years in that capacity. The doctor also served one term as county coroner. Having been one of the organizers of the Union County Roadsters' Club, Dr. Holmes served several terms as its president, and also belonged to Rahway Lodge, No. 1075, B. P. O. E.; the Union County Clinical Club, the Rahway Board of Trade, the New Jersey Medical Association, the Unanimous Medical Club of New York and was an honorary member of the U. N. X. L. D. Theatrical Club. It was largely through the efforts of Dr. Holmes, who was then Mayor, that the Rahway High School was built. The doctor's last public appearance was at the presentation on Washington's Birthday by the Knights of Columbus of a flag to St. Mary's School. Dr. Holmes is survived by one brother, Myron Holmes, of Earlville, N. Y. Funeral services will be held at the First Baptist church, on Thursday afternoon. Rev. F. G. Merrill, pastor of the church, and Rev. Loyal Young Graham, Jr., of the First Presbyterian church, will officiate. Interment will be in the Melick plot in Rahway cemetery.

Miss Ella Moore, of Grant avenue, has returned from a visit spent with friends in Baltimore, where she formerly lived.

"QUALITY!"

Your first consideration in buying the new Spring Shoes—of course, will be Their Wearing Qualities.

"HIGH QUALITY" as you know has been the mainstay of VAN ARSDALE'S SHOE BUSINESS—and it's a matter of pride with us, yet it has been no easy matter to "KEEP THE QUALITY UP" this season in face of the greatly advanced leather prices. To accomplish it, we will tell you frankly that we have had to increase our prices in some instances; but we know that you would prefer to have us do this—rather than to have cheapened our Shoes.

Therefore, before looking at the new SPRING STYLES, bear in mind the ONE FACT, which after all is most important, to you, that:

AT VAN ARSDALE'S THIS SEASON YOU WILL GET SHOES THAT WILL WEAR AS WELL AS, OR BETTER, THAN ANY SHOES YOU HAVE PURCHASED IN PREVIOUS SEASONS.

and that is more than many a dealer can conscientiously say.

PRESI. WILSON'S INAUGURAL.

With the shortest inaugural address on record, except the second of Abraham Lincoln, President Wilson was today inducted into the great office of President of the United States. On the first reading the inaugural will be disappointing, but upon more careful consideration and full reflection it will be admitted to be wise. It does not discuss any policy, unless the one general paragraph relative to tariff, banking and currency, the industrial system, agriculture, water courses and forests conservation may be deemed to indicate a policy. Details are evidently left for future development. President Wilson has frequently said he does not claim to know all governmental questions. Evidently he realizes that he should first have his Cabinet advisers and confer with them before laying down definite suggestions for legislation. In this he is wise.

One thing, however, is made very clear, that the great problems of the day relate to man and human advance rather than material progress. All through the address there runs the thought that material prosperity we already have, and that the one aim now needed in government is how to direct this prosperity that it may be better distributed and assure a more just share to all the people instead of as heretofore allowing the few to be the chief beneficiaries. Conditions in government and in individual affairs run in cycles, and for the past twenty years they have run in the interests of the few promoting special privileges. He proposes that they shall hereafter run in the interests of all and to the advantage of all.

In fact the whole spirit of the address is the advance of man and not the dollar, the human and not the material. The strong man armed is able to care for himself. The capitalist needs no assistance, help only should go to the needy. President Wilson puts it this way: "There can be no equality or opportunity, the first essential of justice in the body politic, if men and women and children be not shielded in their lives, their very vitality, from the consequences of great industrial and social processes which they cannot alter, control or singly cope with. Society must see to it that it does not itself crush or weaken or damage its own constituent parts. The first duty of law is to keep sound the society it serves. Sanitary laws, pure food laws, and laws determining conditions of labor which individuals are powerless to determine for themselves are intimate parts of the very business of justice and legal efficiency." This states the true principle. All legislation must be for the uplift of all conditions of humanity, for better health conditions, better food, better protection of labor against unconscionable capital; with assured guarantee of equal justice for all men, whatever their condition in life, before the law.

The spirit which animates the new President is beautifully stated in the concluding paragraph of the address. It exemplifies the spirit in which he entered upon his new duties. Nothing finer has ever been uttered in public address by any statesman. He says:

"This is not a day of triumph; it is a day of dedication. Here muster, not the forces of party, but the forces of humanity. Men's hearts wait upon us; men's live hang in the balance; men's hopes call upon us to say what we will do. Who shall live up to the great trust? Who dares fail to try? I summon all honest men, all patriotic, all forward-looking men, to my side. God helping me, I will not fail them, if they will but counsel and sustain me!"

This breathes the Lincoln spirit. To this call to stand by his side the American people will respond and they will not fail him. The address is unique. It voices the uppermost sentiment of the hour, the living thrilling spirit of the opening of the twentieth century. It is indeed a pleasing prospect to feel that the next four years of the National Administration are to be devoted to the uplift of humanity and the betterment of the citizenship of the Republic.

In these columns yesterday, City Judge DeMeza was quoted as saying that despite the action of County Judge Connolly in setting aside the sentence the local jurist imposed on a speak-easy proprietor, on the ground that the complaint was imperfect, he would continue to pronounce the punishment in like cases. Mr. DeMeza very rightly takes the position that as Plainfield must bear the burden it should receive the benefit in such instances. Were he to hold the offender for the action of the grand jury and thereby possibly have the culprit placed on trial the chances would be that he would escape conviction after Plainfield is put to the expense of furnishing witnesses. In case of conviction, he points out that the county, not the city, collects the fine when imposed. As the arrest is made here and the city bears the cost of trial, the local magistrate takes the view that the fine imposed upon the guilty one should go into the city treasury. In the absence of any law or decision to the contrary, we believe that Judge DeMeza is taking a course that will receive the commendation of all our taxpayers.

Woodrow Wilson, you were our Governor and we've had none better for you ware able to and did accomplish progressive legislation which not only freed our State from the rule of the bosses, but placed us in the first rank, yea in first place, among the progressive states of the Union. As President of these United States, we greet you and we wish you all the good fortune and the country all the blessings which we sanguinely hope and expect will result from your administration of our National affairs. God speed you on your mission in the highest sphere for civic righteousness, equality and justice for all men.

Never in the history of local journalism has the inauguration of a President of the United States been "covered" so completely and satisfactorily as that of Woodrow Wilson in the Daily Press today. We beg pardon for proudly calling your attention to the superb and numerous pictorial features.

The contributing editor for Saturday's issue will be a representative citizen who will discuss what is considered the last word in the ideal form for municipal government.

Two meetings of the Bryant-Lincoln Parent-Teacher association have been called for this week, one to be held in the Bryant School auditorium tomorrow afternoon at 3:15 o'clock and the other to be held in the auditorium of the Lincoln School Thursday afternoon at the same time. Dr. W. E. Stelle will speak at the meeting tomorrow afternoon on "The Teeth and Their Care," and Dr. H. C. Krebs will talk on "Ventilation."

TEACHERS' RECEPTION.

The annual teachers' reception and dance was held in the Plainfield High School auditorium, Saturday night, and was attended by over fifty members of the local teaching corps and their friends. Dancing was enjoyed until a late hour, after which refreshments were served.

Those work seekers who expect to find a job through one publication of a want ad are sometimes disappointed—though not always.

STOCK EXCHANGE AS IT REALLY IS

Its Incorporation Would Be Detrimental to Public Interest Says Mr. Melick.

SULZER BILLS DRASTIC

To Increase Transfer Tax Rate Would Drive Business to Other Exchanges and Thousands in New York Would Suffer.

George P. Mellick, of this city, one of the New York Stock Exchange's committee appointed to confer with Governor Sulzer as to the latter's plans for compelling the incorporation of the 'Change, and also a member of the special committee of the Exchange to arouse the business men and civic bodies of New York city, makes the follow contribution to the Daily Press:

Editor, Plainfield Daily Press:

Some weeks ago I was interested in reading in "The Hill News," a paper published weekly at the Hill School of Pottstown, Pa., and article entitled "The Truth About the New York Stock Exchange."

The prominence which the Daily Press recently gave to the views of W. J. R. Hegeman, of Sycamore avenue, North Plainfield, in his support of the movement to have certain laws passed in New York State legislating against the public, and the interests of the New York Stock Exchange, prompts me to ask that you publish the article to which I refer, as I feel there are many readers of your paper who might take too seriously the extravagant utterances of the North Plainfield citizen.

As the attention of everyone has been turned, of late, to the investigation into the New York Stock Exchange, which has been carried on by the Pujo Investigating Committee of the Senate, it seems most appropriate for the Hill School News to print the following authoritative article on the subject.

The Stock Exchange is as old as organized business, and today it is one of the most important factors in modern finance. Without it, no large enterprise could now be successfully projected, and if it should suddenly close its doors without providing a substitute, financial chaos would prevail, because hundreds of millions of banking credits are based upon the daily official quotations established on the stock exchange.

The earliest reliable records of any reputable exchange relate to the Exchange of London, which flourished in the 17th century, and dealt mainly with the great English monopolies typified by the East India Company and the Hudson Bay Company. In 1868 the London brokers abandoned the Royal Exchange and transacted their business in coffee-houses, which were the social centers of those days, just as private clubs are now social centers for business men. One hundred years later, 1798, the present London Stock Exchange was organized, and on May 18, 1801, the cornerstone of the building now occupied was laid, in Capel Court, and one year later the new quarters were completed. Nathan M. Rothschild, the founder of the great banking house, was one of the charter members of this body. The London Exchange differs from the New York Stock Exchange mainly in the fact that its members exercise the function of dealers in securities, fixing a price at which they will buy or sell to the public; whereas members of the New York Exchange act as agents between buyers and sellers of securities. The London member may make a profit on his dealings, whereas the New York member receives a commission for his services as agent, which commission is rigidly fixed by rules of the Association, and out of which commission he must pay the expenses of conducting business.

In Paris the Stock Exchange business is a monopoly controlled by the French Government. The number of official brokers licensed by the French Government is restricted to 60, who are members of the "parquette" of the Paris Bourse. These memberships are extremely valuable, running up into hundred of thousands of dollars each, and they are often jointly owned by a half-score or

SHARRETTS OUSTED BY PRESIDENT TAFT

Washington, D. C., March 4.—Two members of the Board of General Appraisers of Merchandise at New York, T. S. Sherretts, who resides in Plainfield, N. J., and R. H. Chamberlain, have been dismissed from office by President Taft for alleged malfeasance in office. This action was one of the important decisions made by President Taft before retiring from office, and was announced at the White House last night. The two were charged with malfeasance in office.

The principal charge against Mr. Sharretts was that he used his official influence to have the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad stop its trains at his summer home and also promised to aid them in obtaining freight in case they would grant his request. According to the commission which investigated the board, this constituted a lack of the proper conception of the ethical standard of his position as a judicial officer.

In addition it is charged that while Mr. Sharretts declined to appear as a member of the board in cases in which his son appeared as counsel, he did sit in similar cases which made precedents affecting cases in which his son was counsel. No charge is made of venality or actual personal gain by his action.

CHUNKS OF IRON HURLED THRO' AIR

Many Narrow Escapes When 2,500 Pound Column is Blown up.

MUCH DAMAGE DONE

Somerville, March 4.—E. L. VanDoren, who has been using dynamite for the past few months in his work of excavating cellars, etc., about Somerville, had a thrilling experience late yesterday afternoon. He was employed by I. Werblin to break up some large chunks of iron in the rear of the latter's home on Franklin street, and everything went along all right until Van Doren put an extra heavy charge of dynamite to facilitate the breaking up of an iron column weighing about 2,500 pounds.

When the blast went off the air was filled with flying pieces of iron, some weighing as much as fifty pounds, and window glass for blocks around were broken by the concussion. One piece of iron, said to weigh at least 500 pounds, went straight up in the air for over 100 feet and came down without doing any damage. A piece weighing about 40 pounds bounded over the residence of Werblin and struck a valuable horse belonging to the Consumers' Supply Company, and driven by L. E. Everett, breaking one of its hind legs and the animal had to be shot. A piece weighing about thirteen pounds bounded over the County Hotel and landed on the sidewalk in front of Case's drug store, over a quarter of a mile away, and then bounced through a large plate glass window of Alpaugh & Wheeler's grocery and brought up on a shelf of goods. One of the pieces struck almost at the feet of Dr. A. L. Stillwell and W. H. Voorhees, who were conversing on the corner. The flagstone where the iron struck was smashed to bits. A young woman passing the drug store also had a narrow escape, while Herbert L. Davis just escaped by a hair breadth from being struck as he came down the steps from the doorway between the two stores, the piece of iron whizzing past over his head.

The building of James Rick, on the corner of Hamilton and Franklin streets, was literally bombarded with pieces of iron, the windows being smashed and one piece, weighing about twenty pounds, going through the roof. A piece weighing about thirty pounds fell in front of the blacksmith shop on Warren street, and this was taken by the proprietor as a souvenir. John O. Hoagland's carriage house, on East Main street, was struck with several large pieces of iron and a number of other pieces demolished the glass of the hot house belonging to James Terwilliger on East Main street.

That no one was killed seems marvelous, but the explosion threw the residents of that section into a panic.

COUNCIL RECEIVES SEVERAL PETITIONS

Somerset Street Widening, Fire Engine for East End and Other Pleas Made.

The question of widening Somerset street, between Front street and Green brook was revived at the March meeting of the Common Council last night when a petition, signed by William R. Codington and many others, was received urging that the improvement be made. A petition has been in circulation and a large number of property owners and others have signed it. It was referred to the street committee.

Dr. S. A. Aldrich and five other citizens in a petition protested against the proposed action of the Council to change the ordinance to provide for the appointment of a corporation counsel and against the payment of a high salary to such an official. This was referred. Residents of East Front street, Richmond street and Leland avenue, petitioned for sidewalks. This was referred to the street committee.

The Netherwood Residents' Association called the attention of the Council to the inadequate fire protection in the Netherwood section, and urged that a high-power automobile engine be placed in that section. This was referred to the fire and building committee. The petition from the Central Park Realty Company to have Sheridan avenue accepted by the city was also referred to the street committee.

Allan B. Cowperthwaite and other residents of the borough brought to the attention of the Council what they consider the exorbitant charges made by city hackmen in carrying passengers to the borough and asked that the city and borough authorities co-operate in the matter. It was referred to the committee on public affairs.

Bessie E. Lough, of West Seventh street, objected to the city placing a curb in front of her property, which she had planned to do, and then charge her for it, while other nearby residents had not been compelled to make a similar improvement. This was referred to the street committee.

F. J. Skinner applied for a license to conduct an employment agency, and the same was granted. The contracts between the Plainfield Trap Rock Company and Watchung Stone Company, for furnishing stone, were filed.

Residents of Lake street complained of the almost impassable condition of that thoroughfare due to mud, etc., and asked for immediate relief. This was referred to the street committee. W. C. Burke and others petitioned to have Spruce street opened to Fourth street, and another petition asked to have South Second street, from Clinton and Rock avenues, macadamized. Both were referred to the street committee.

Petitions for two hydrants on West Fifth street near Stanley place, for improvements on Watson avenue, lights on Raymond avenue and Milton street, and one to widen Park avenue, between North avenue and Fourth street, signed by D. C. Smalley and others, were referred to the proper committees.

WILSON'S INAUGURAL ADDRESS IS CLASSICAL AND VERY BRIEF

There has been a change of government. It began two years ago, when the House of Representatives became Democratic by a decisive majority. It has now been completed. The Senate about to assemble will also be Democratic. The offices of President and Vice-President have been put into the hands of Democrats. What does the change mean? That is the question that is uppermost in our minds today. That is the question I am going to try to answer, in order, if I may, to interpret the occasion.

It means much more than the mere success of a party. The success of a party means little except when the nation is using that party for a large and definite purpose. No one can mistake the purpose for which the nation now seeks to use the Democratic party. It seeks to use it to interpret a change in its own plans and point of view. Some old things with which we had grown familiar, and which had begun to creep into the very habit of our thought and of our lives, have altered their aspect as we have latterly looked critically upon them, with fresh, awakened eyes; have dropped their disguises and shown themselves alien and sinister. Some new things, as we look frankly upon them, willing to comprehend their real character, have come to assume the aspect of things long believed in and familiar, stuff of our own convictions. We have been refreshed by a new insight into our own life.

We see that in many things that life is very great. It is incomparably great in its material aspects, in its body of wealth, in the diversity and sweep of its energy, in the industries which have been conceived and built up by the genius of individual men and the limitless enterprise of groups of men. It is great, also, very great, in its moral force. Nowhere else in the world have noble men and women exhibited in more striking forms the beauty and the energy of sympathy and helpfulness and counsel in their efforts to rectify wrong, alleviate suffering, and set the weak in the way of strength and hope. We have built up, moreover, a great system of government, which has stood through a long age as in many respects a model for those who seek to set liberty upon foundations that will endure against fortuitous change, against storm and accident. Our life contains every great thing, and contains it in rich abundance.

But the evil has come with the good, and much fine gold has been corroded. With riches has come inexcusable waste. We have squandered a great part of what we might have used, and have not stopped to conserve the exceeding bounty of nature, without which our genius for enterprise would have been worthless and impotent, scorning to be careful, shamefully prodigal as well as admirably efficient. We have been proud of our industrial achievements, but we have not hitherto stopped thoughtfully enough to count the human cost, the cost of lives snuffed out, of energies overtaxed and broken, the fearful physical and spiritual cost to the men and women and children upon whom the dead weight and burden of it all has fallen pitilessly the years through. The groans and agony of it all had not yet reached our ears, the solemn, moving undertone of our life, coming up out of the mines and factories and out of every home where the struggle had its intimate and familiar seat. With the great government went many deep secret things which we too long delayed to look into and scrutinize with candid, fearless eyes. The great government we loved has too often been made use of for private and selfish purposes, and those who used it had forgotton the people.

At last a vision has been vouchsafed us of our life as a whole. We see the bad with the good, the debased and decadent with the sound and vital. With this vision we approach new affairs. Our duty is to cleanse, to reconsider, to restore, to correct the evil without impairing the good, to purify and humanize every process of our common life without weakening or sentimentalizing it. There has been something crude and heartless and unfeeling in our haste to succeed and be great. Our thought has been "Let every man look out for himself, let every generation look out for itself," while we reared giant machinery which made it impossible that any but those who stood at the levers of control should have a chance to look out for themselves. We had not forgotten our morals. We remembered well enough that we had set up a policy which was meant to serve the humblest as well as the most powerful, with an eye single to the standards of justice and fair play, and remembered it with pride. But we were very heedless and in a hurry to be great.

We have come now to the sober second thought. The scales of heedlessness have fallen from our eyes. We have made up our minds to square every process of our national life again with the standards we so proudly set up at the beginning and have always carried at our hearts. Our work is a work of restoration.

We have itemized with some degree of particularity the things that ought to be altered and here are some of the chief items: A tariff which cuts us off from our proper part in the commerce of the world, violates the just principles of taxation, and makes the government a facile instrument in the hands of private interests; a banking and currency system based upon the necessity of the government to sell its bonds fifty years ago and perfectly adapted to concentrating cash and restricting credits; an industrial system which, take it on all its sides, financial as well as administrative, holds capital in leading strings, restricts the liberties and liimts the the opportunities of labor, and exploits without renewing or conserving the natural resources of the country; a body of agricultural activities never yet given the efficiency of great business undertakings or served as it should be through the instrumentality of science taken directly to the farm, or afforded the facilities of credit best suited to its practical needs; watercourses undeveloped, waste places unreclaimed, forests untended, fast disappearing without plan or prospect of renewal, unregarded waste heaps at every mine. We have studied as perhaps no other nation has the most effective means of production, but we have not studied cost or economy as we should either as organizers of industry, as statesmen, or as individuals.

Nor have we studied and perfected the means by which government may be put at the service of humanity, in safeguarding the health of the nation, the health of its men and its women and its children, as well as their rights in the struggle for existence. This is no sentimental duty. The firm basis of government is justice, not pity. These are matters of justice. There can be no equality or opportunity, the first essential of justice in the body politic, if men and women and children be not shielded in their lives, their very vitality, from the consequences of great industrial and social processes which they cannot alter, control, or singly cope with. Society must see to it that it does not itself crush or weaken or damage its own constituent parts. The first duty of law is to keep sound the society it serves. Sanitary laws, pure food laws, and laws determining conditions of labor which individuals are powerless to determine for themselves are intimate parts of the very business of justice and legal efficiency.

These are some of the things we ought to do, and not leave the others undone, the old-fashioned, never-to-be-neglected, fundamental safeguarding of property and of individual right. This is the high enterprise of the new day; to lift everything that concerns our life as a nation to the light that shines from the hearthfire of every man's conscience and vision of the right. It is inconceivable that we should do this as partisans; it is inconceivable we should do it in ignorance of the facts as they are or in blind haste. We shall restore, not destroy. We shall deal with our economic system as it is and as it may be modified, not as it might be if we had a clean sheet of paper to write upon; and step by step we shall make it what it should be, in the spirit of those who question their own wisdom and seek counsel and knowledge, not shallow self-satisfaction or the excitement of excursions whither they cannot tell. Justice, and only justice, shall always be our motto.

And yet it will be no cool process of mere science. The nation has been deeply stirred, stirred by a solemn passion, stirred by the knowledge of wrong, of ideals lost, of government too often debauched and made an instrument of evil. The feelings with which we face this new age of right and opportunity sweep across our heart-strings like some air out of God's own presence, where justice and mercy are reconciled and the judge and the brother are one. We know our task to be no mere task of politics but a task which shall search us through and through, whether we be able to understand our time and the need of our people, whether we be indeed their spokesmen and interpreters, whether we have the pure heart to comprehend and the rectified will to choose our high course of action.

This is not a day of triumph; it is a day of dedication. Here muster, not the forces of party, but the forces of humanity. Men's hearts wait upon us; men's lives hang in the balance; men's hopes call upon us to say what we will do. Who shall live up to the great trust? Who dares fail to try? I summon all honest men, all patriotic, all forward-looking men, to my side. God helping me, I will not fail them, if they will but counsel and sustain me!

INAUGURAL SCENES THAT HAVE WON A PROMINENT PLACE IN AMERICAN HISTORY

Not unlike inaugurations of the past, the inauguration of Woodrow Wilson goes on record as one of the greatest in American history. With the city of Washington thronged with curious sightseers from all parts of the country, the streets of the national capital present a vivid picture of true American patriotism. Back in the time of George Washington the vast throngs assembled in a like manner to see America's first President take the oath of office. Patriotism has been the main thought of the American people through all these years, and it is safe to say it will always remain so.

RAPID RISE OF WILSON ONE MARVEL OF THE AGE

In Less Than Three Years Has Graduated From College Presidency to Head of Nation.

We have elected all sorts and conditions of men President of the United States, quite a number of generals, colonels and majors, a whole batch of lawyers, some diplomats and occasionally a statesman. Now, for the first time, we have chosen a college professor. We are putting a political economist at work applying his political economy. The word "economy" in this case does not mean saving money. We have got out of the habit of saving money in this billion dollar country. Various men have tried to reform our free handed method of dissipating national funds, but the results have not been conspicuous.

Woodrow Wilson will be the twenty-seventh president. I know some people say the twenty-eighth, but to do so they must count Grover Cleveland twice. Now, Grover Cleveland was a great man, but he was not that numerous. By the way, Mr. Wilson's home before being President is next door to that of Mr. Cleveland after being president. Cleveland was born in New Jersey and died in New Jersey, while Wilson lives in New Jersey. Another point of resemblance is that each amputated his front name. But for this they would have gone thundering down the ages as Stephen G. Cleveland and Thomas W. Wilson. Still another similarity is that one was and the other is a Democrat, the only two Democrats to be elected president since the Civil War—at least, the only ones to get the goods. There was Samuel J. Tilden— But that is another story.

Was Called "Tommy."

Mr. Wilson was born at Staunton, Va., during Christmas week, 1856. Several other presidents were born in Virginia, but they are all dead. It used to be fashionable for a president to be born in Virginia, and now it is coming back in style. In his young years the future president was called "Tommy." Maybe that is the reason he used the ax on his name. It is hard to imagine anybody liking to be called "Tommy." Yet the President was called "Woody" during his campaign and said he liked that. There is no accounting for tastes, especially after one gets into politics.

The next President's father was a Presbyterian minister, and his grandfather, James Wilson, was an editor and something of a politician in Philadelphia and Steubenville, O. He came from Ireland. Maybe that is the reason his grandson likes limericks. On the maternal side Mr. Wilson is descended from Presbyterian divines also. The Woodrows are Scotch. That Scotch-Irish combination is a hard one to beat. If you doubt it ask President Taft and the Colonel. Many of our statesmen have been Scotch-Irish, William McKinley among the number. Others have just been Irish. New Jersey was largely settled by Scotch-Irish in an early day, which may be one reason that the State took so enthusiastic a part in making Woodrow Wilson president.

Becomes a Georgian.

When the future Democratic leader was two years old his father, Dr. Joseph Ruggles Wilson, had a call to Augusta, Ga., where the family remained till after the war. Of that great struggle the boy remembered little. Augusta was not in the arena of actual fighting. About the only two events he recalls distinctly concerned the beginning and end of the conflict. One day he heard two men in front of his father's gate discussing politics. One of them said that Lincoln had been elected and there would be war. The other incident concerned the arrest of Jefferson Davis, who passed through Augusta on his way to prison.

At Augusta the boy destined to beat William Howard Taft and Theodore Roosevelt had his first schooling. He was not a boy prodigy who began talking about political economy as soon as through wearing dresses. Nothing of the sort. On the contrary, he did not begin school till he was a good chunk of a lad, his father not believing in teaching the young idea how to shoot too early. When he did enter school he was just an average scholar. He read a great deal, but had no frills as a student.

His father was perhaps his real teacher. The two took long walks about Augusta, visiting the factories in the vicinity. There the man explained industrial processes to the boy in a way that made the lessons stick. He also trained the lad in exact expression, teaching him that any thought clearly comprehended could be put in words so that others could comprehend. It is too bad that more of our statesmen do not have fathers like that. Take our platform makers, for example. They say things that the country thinks it understands, only to find out after election that the authors meant something else.

Carried Out His Platform.

Wilson showed his training in exact expression when he was governor of New Jersey. He interpreted the platform on which he was elected in the manner that the people thought they understood it. He also carried it out. When the legislators hesitated he called them in and talked to them like a father. This was such a novel procedure that the voters elected him president. Promising has become a grand old art in politics, but performance, if it is an art, is one of the lost arts.

A few years after the war the Wilsons went to Columbia, S. C., and while here Woodrow, or Tommy, as he was still called, entered Davidson College. Now, Davidson was one of those grand old institutions of learning in which the boys swept their own rooms, made their own fires, carried their own water and generally made themselves useful. I have certain shivery memories of that sort of school myself, in which the boys took turns about getting up at 5 o'clock in the morning to ring the bell. I do not know whether the future president of the United States had to take his turn at early morning bell ringing or not, but hope he escaped that particular form of punishment. He spent but one year at Davidson, ill health compelling him to quit. During that one year he did not make any particular mark. He is remembered as a pleasant spoken young man, who was good in his debating society. Former Governor Glenn, of North Carolina, was his classmate and is reported to have said to Wilson that he would make a good ball player if he were not so lazy. That sort of story makes interesting newspaper reading, whether it ever happened or not. I do not know how to verify this particular one without calling up Governor Glenn on the long distance or wireless, and probably he would deny it. Calling a president of the United States lazy does not sound nice unless he belongs to the other political party. Then it is too mild.

The "Original Wilson Man."

It was at about this time that Dr. Wilson pere became himself a college professor, holding the chair of theology. He did not like the change, however, and in a few years was back in the pulpit. Before the son returned from Davidson the family had moved to Wilmington, N. C., where the lad spent a year at home, recovering his health and being tutored for his entrance into Princeton. It was at this time also—so runs the story—that a prophecy was made that he would one day be president of the United States. A similar prediction is made for many boys, but the interesting thing about this one is that it came true. Another valuable features of the story is that it determines the identity of the original Wilson man.

You know how it is. Whenever aman is elected to high office there is not only the "I told you so" brigade, but the regiment of the "originals" who boomed him for this particular job before anybody else. There were 967 of these original Wilson men at last accounts, and the returns were not all in. Strange as it may seem, many of the originals were looking for jobs under the new administration. They were not office seekers, you know—nothing so vulgar as that—but felt that they owed their services as a patriotic duty to the country.

In 1875 Woodrow—no, he was still Tommy—entered Princeton. I am not certain just when he pried off that name and lost it, but it must have been about the time he graduated. At any rate, it was never heard of afterward. Henceforth he was to be known as Professor Wilson, Dr. Wilson, President Wilson, Governor Wilson, "that man" Wilson and again as President Wilson. The Tommy days ended with school days.

At Princeton Wilson began to show his bent for politics and the science of government. He never was a "grind," although he kept up his grades, graduating forty-first in a strong class of more than 100. He was ever an omnivorous reader, and from this time forward his reading turned more and more into his special line of parliamentary history and political economy.

At first he was not a good extemporaneous speaker, although always classed as a strong debater. There is a story told of him at about this time to the effect that he started out deliberately to make himself a ready speaker. He propounded the theory to one of his friends that any man of average intelligence could do this by a system of training. With this goal in view he began reading and studying great orations. Whatever there may be in the tale, it is certain that Woodrow Wilson has made of himself one of the readiest speakers in the United States. If clear and convincing statement is oratory he is an orator.

A Famous Class.

The class of 1879 was one of the most distinguished in Princeton annals. One of its members is Juctise Mahlon Pitney, of the United States Supreme Court. Another is Robert Bridges, editor of Scribner's Magazine. Others are Cyrus McCormick, head of the International Harvester Company, a suit against which President Wilson will inherit from his predecessor; Rev. A. W. Halsey, head of the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions; Robert McCarter, once attorney general of New Jersey; Cleveland H. Dodge and many more almost as distinguished.

Here is more sad news for the original Wilson men. Frank Presbrey, now a prominent advertising man, was president of Wilson's class at college. Since election he has told the following story:

During the freshman year a discussion started as to what man in the class was big enough to become president of the United States. At first a half dozen men were mentioned; then it narrowed down to Mahlon Pitney and Tommy Wilson and finally narrowed to Wilson alone. In this verdict practically the whole class agreed.

Studies Law.

Out of Princeton Mr. Wilson entered the law school of the University of Virginia. He had decided to become a public man and considered the law as an anteroom to public service. There are traditions of him in these days as wearing a flowing mustache and singing tenor in a glee club. He was also noted as a debater, evidently having profited by reading those orations. It is not on record whether his classmates in the law school boomed him for president or not, but they will doubtless be heard from later.

In 1882 Woodrow Wilson, with another young lawyer, hung out his shingle as a practicing attorney at Atlanta, Ga. He knew nobody in the town, and Atlanta already had her quota of lawyers. As a result the two young hopefuls had plenty of leisure. Wilson improved it by pursuing his studies of government and writing and by making the acquaintance of his future wife, Helen Louise Axson, who, like himself, was the child of a Presbyterian minister. From the number of them to whom he is related it would seem that Mr. Wilson should have the solid vote of the Presbyterian ministry.

In 1883 the future president revised his opinion as to the law being a proper open door to public life and entered Johns Hopkins University to study for his doctor's degree. While here he wrote his first work, "Congressional Government," which yet remains a textbook. Ambassador James Bryce has testified that he received material help from the students of Johns Hopkins in preparing his "American Commonwealth" and mentions Wilson by name as one of his helpers.

In 1885 Mr. Wilson was married and the same year became associate professor of history and political economy at Bryn Mawr, where he remained until 1888. He then held the same position at the Wesleyan University for two years. By this time he was gaining national fame as a writer and lecturer. In 1889 had appeared his second book, "The State," which further added to his reputation.

Back at Princeton.

The call from Princeton came in 1890, when he was made professor of jurisprudence and politics, which chair he held for twelve years. In a short time he became one of the most popular professors in the institution, his lectures being delivered to crowded rooms. During this period were written his most important works—"Division and Reunion," in 1893, and in the same year "An Old Master and Other Political Essays" and "Mere Literature and Other Essays." In 1896 appeared his "George Washington" and in 1902 his greatest work, "A History of the American People."

In the same year he was elected president of Princeton University. His subsequent history is familiar to most Americans. His fight for democracy in the college was one of the fiercest ever witnessed in an American university, and, while he lost on some points, its influence for good will long remain.

Of his campaign for governor it has been said that the "schoolmaster," as he was derisively called by his enemies, laid aside his cap and gown, his books and his spectacles and went out and "licked the gang to a frazzle." He was elected by 50,000, the first Democratic governor of New Jersey in sixteen years; redeemed his party pledges, kept Jim Smith, the party boss, out of the United States Senate; was nominated for President of the United States on the forty-seventh ballot after the longest fight in the history of American political conventions, was chosen to our highest office by the greatest electoral majority since James Monroe and today was inaugurated the twenty-seventh president of the United States.

New Jersey has the front seat in Washington today when Woodrow Wilson, its first representative in the Presidential chair, is being inducted into office. Not only are several thousand citizens of this State gathered there to witnesses the great event, with its accompanying pageantry, but New Jersey itself is cast in a lot of the active roles of the big drama, from the czar of the affair, Mr. Wilson, to the man behind the scenes, who set the stage, arranged the little details and assumed the responsibility for everything going well.

New Jersey's visitors to the national capital for the inauguration had started by Monday morning, while many hundreds, whether sightseers or participants in the great event itself, departed southward Saturday and Sunday.

He spent the night with his family at one of the large hotels, and this morning followed the precedents of previous inaugurations, the programs of which are well defined. Then there was a luncheon at the White House for a few friends, but, there will be no other social affairs.

New Jersey's Official Representative.

Governor James F. Fielder is the official head of New Jersey delegations at the inauguration. He went to Washington yesterday and opened an official headquarters in a suite of rooms at the New Willard. Last evening he held a public reception, to which all New Jersey people were invited. Mrs. Fielder accompanied him and assisted in receiving. The gathering was attended by many State officials, including Senators and Assemblymen, as well as Congressional representatives of the State in Congress.

Mr. Fielder is riding at the head of the provisional New Jersey troops in the parade, and is commander-in-chief. He has jested about his ability to ride a horse since making his plans to appear in the parade, but this is discounted by military men who have seen Mr. Fielder on horseback and know him to be a good rider. In fact, he is described by some who know him as the best horseman that has sat in the gubernatorial chair of New Jersey for many years. In addition to this he is well versed in military matters by reason of his experience at the Sea Girt encampments covering many years.

The military head of the New Jersey delegation is Major General Dennis F. Collins, of Elizabeth, who is making his headquarters at the Raleigh at Pennsylvania avenue and Twelfth street, where the State Democratic chairman, Edward E. Grosscup, has made arrangements to receive such New Jersey visitors to the city as may desire to drop in there. General Collins and Adjutant General Wilbur F. Sadler completed arrangements with General A. L. Mills, chief of the Division of Militia, some time ago, regarding the details of the New Jersey troops, and this State's militia have the third position in the line of march. The parade is in command of General Leonard Wood, chief of staff of the United States Army.

Place of Honor for Troopers.

The First New Jersey Cavalry, of Newark, better known as the Essex Troop, have the place of honor in the parade, that of personal guard to the new President. It has been the custom of Presidents to surround themselves with an escort from their own States, President Taft having had the Black Horse Troop, of Cincinnati, four years ago. This noon President Wilson rode through the parade, surrounded by the Essex Troop. They accompanied him down the broad avenue to the White House from the Capitol, where they fell out, the President making his way to the reviewing stand, the parade in the meantime halting until he had taken his place in the stand. The Essex Troop also accompanied him to the Capitol for the inaugural ceremonies this morning.

The First Troop is commanded by Captain Bertram Roome, of Arlington, his first lieutenant being Wilbur F. Kyle, of South Orange, and the second lieutenant Russell P. Freeman, also of South Orange.

The Provisional Troops.

Aside from the Essex Troop, New Jersey is represented by a goodly body of its militia. This is of a provisional nature, according to orders issued last week. The troops consist of the Second Brigade of the National Guard, which is made up of the Second and Third Infantry, plus the Fourth Infantry and the Signal Corps. Company K, of Plainfield, is in the parade, being part of the Second Regiment.

The uniform is olive drab, with cap and overcoat.

State Chairman Grosscup, Colonel Thomas H. Birch, of Governor Wilson's personal staff; Charles H. Fury, Colonel Mahlon R. Margerum and Representative Thomas J. Scully made the arrangements for the various delegations from this State, including those representing the State Democratic Committee. Mr. Grosscup obtained a section of the stand at Lafayette square, directly opposite the White House and the box which Governor Wilson and his family will occupy. There are 600 seats in this section and every one is occupied by a resident of this State. It is an excellent situation, commanding a fine view of the line of march. The Raleigh is the headquarters of the State Democratic Committee, fifty sleeping rooms having been engaged there. A reception room for visitors from New Jersey is maintained.

Princeton Students.

Undergraduates from many universities and colleges took part in the parade, but none were more to the fore than the Princeton men. They have a band. A personal body-guard of students accompanied Mr. Wilson, the lucky thirteen being the members of the Woodrow Wilson Club, of Princeton. They are shown in the photograph with Mr. Wilson. From left to right the photograph shows—Max Chaplin, W. Penfield, J. Baker, B. Ober and F. Hall (seated). Standing in the doorway in back of President-elect Wilson, are: K. Howard, A. Richardson and W. M. Chester. On Mr. Wilson's left are: Paul F. Meyers, president of the club; J. Colt, T. Wilson, G. Gaston and B. Harrington (seated).

New Jersey's visitors in Washington number more than 7,000, exclusive of the military organizations. From Newark two large delegations are on hand, the Gottfried Krueger Association, headed by its president, Charles F. Herr, and the Woodrow Wilson League, of Essex County. From Hudson county there are present a large number from the Democratic Club, the Wittpenn clubs and the Wedin participants. Scattering delegations from Bergen, Passaic, Union, Mercer, Sussex and Hunterdon counties are there, not overlooking representatives from the student body of the Stevens Institute of Technology at Hoboken.

The exodus from New Jersey is swelled by many hundreds of persons who take the opportunity to see the ceremonies and also to visit the city of Washington and its environs.

New Jersey Women Present.

New Jersey women are at the inauguration as well as men. Chief among these are members of various women's suffrage organizations from different parts of the State. Letters were sent out by the Washington Equal Suffrage League urging the attendance of as many women as possible at the inaugural ceremonies. Arrangements to accommodate visiting women were made by this organization, which spared no efforts to make the time one of importance to the cause of women's suffrage.

The Official Debutante.

Chief official recognition of women of this State fell to the lot of an Asbury Park girl. She is Miss Hazel Walling Cook, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Cook, of 605 Sunset avenue, that place, who was selected to be the New Jersey representative on the debutante committee, one being chosen from each State in the Union. She is acting as one of the maids of honor and a member of the reception committee at the social events in Washington subsequent to the inauguration of Mr. Wilson. Her selection was made by the Southern League of Women's Wilson and Marshall organizations of America, which has charge of the social affairs incidental to the inauguration.

Miss Cook is one of fifty debutantes taking part. They are under the leadership of Mrs. Leonard Hoffman, wife of Lieutenant Hoffman, U. S. N.; Mrs. Morris Sheppard, of Texas, wife of Congressman Sheppard; Mrs. Leonard Wood, wife of army chief of staff; Mrs. William Corcoran Eustis, wife of the chairman of the inaugural committee; Mrs. Henry C. Clayton, of Alabama, wife of the representative from that State, and others who act as a committee on entertainment and decoration.

On Thursday a reception, at which Miss Cook will serve as maid of honor from this State, will be given by the committee at the New Willard Hotel, to Mrs. Woodrow Wilson and Mrs. Thomas Marshall. This reception will be under the management of Mrs. Hoffman and Mrs. George A. Arms, of Washington, who are the social leaders of that city. They will be assisted by members of the advisory board of the Woman's National Democratic League, who will present the maids of honor and debutantes to Mrs. Wilson and Mrs. Marshall. This reception is the only one to be given, and is the finale of the elaborate inauguration and pre-inauguration program culminating on that day. A banquet and dance follows. This event will, in a great measure, take place of the inaugural ball. Miss Cook and her companions serving on the reception committee, will be entertained at the White House by Mrs. Wilson. While in Washington, Miss Cook is the guest of Mrs. Hoffman at her residence in the capitol city. Mrs. Cook accompanies her daughter, who is considered one of the most beautiful young women of Asbury Park. She is a brunette.

Jerseyman Directing Affairs

Back of the scenes, pulling the wires that produce all these events of ceremony and pump is one man who arranges things and sees that they are done. He is responsible for everything, from seeing that there is a ribbon properly tied around the inaugural address to having clear weather Appropriately enough, a New Jersey man is in charge of the details. He is Walker W. Vick, of Rutherford, who is secretary of the inauguration committee. Upon Mr. Vick devolved the superintendence of the multitude of details of the inauguration, a task he prepared himself for by acting as assistant secretary of the Democratic National Committee in the campaign that resulted in the election of Mr. Wilson to the Presidency. Mr. Vick's responsibilities culminate today, but it will be some time before he finishes the last of the big job of inducting Mr. Wilson into office.

Possession of the White House.

President Taft left for a vacation at Atlanta, Ga., immediately after the inauguration ceremonies and the White House was in readiness to receive its new representative this morning. Mrs. Wilson and the Misses Wilson did not accompany the President-elect to the Capitol, but awaited him at the White House, joining him at the time the review of the great parade started. Their first experience in the White House was at the informal luncheon given today to personal friends.

The Great Parade.

35,000 men in uniform, the pick of the nation's fighting force, are winding their way down Pennsylvania avenue in Washington in what is unquestionably the greatest military pageant that has ever been seen in the land which Columbus discovered. Inaugural parades of the past have always thrown down the gauntlet to any other outpourings of the nation. Four years ago weather conditions abridged the demonstration. Not for eight years has Uncle Sam had an opportunity to show what he can do along these lines when he lets himself out. The militia is the backbone of this great parade. When President Taft was inaugurated there were 30,000 men in line. Of these 25,000 were from the military branches of the Government. This number will this year be increased by at least 5,000. Among the men in line are a battalion of engineers, wise men of the army; grizzled infantrymen who have known many campaigns; coast artillerymen who fire the 15-mile guns; crack cavalry troops that perform the "monkey drill;" youngsters from West Point and Annapolis; militia organizations that are the pride of various States; field artillery, signal corps, ambulance, halting Civil War veterans; boy scouts and cadets from scores of military schools. The gaudiest of dress uniforms produce a blaze of color, and a hundred bands play martial music.

Major General Leonard Wood, chief of staff of the army, is grand marshal of the day. It was under his direction that all arrangements were made for the military features for the parade. His chief marshal, Major General W. W. Wotherspoon, is actually in command of the column in march. Of the parade taken as a whole there are four grand divisions. These are the army and navy division, which come first, the division of organized militia and military schools under Brigadier General A. L. Mills, forming second; third, the division of veterans organizations, and finally come the civic organizations, which complete the parade.

A silent organization, but one greatly needed, are unseen participants in the events of the day. These are not the Secret Service men, as might be imagined, but a great detective force, all experts, recruited by Major Sylvester, head of the Metropolitan Police of the District of Columbia. Around the nucleus of his own detectives are gathered an immense force, two men from each department of many cities. They take part in the warfare against crooks, which is waged nowhere so sternly as in Washington and at no time more vigilantly than at the time of the inauguration. It is an invisible work, but one of prime importance.

Washington, March 4.—The great deed is done, and Woodrow Wilson is president of the United States. Followed by the presidential salute of 101 guns and the cheering of the greatest throng ever gathered in Washington, he was sworn in today shortly after noon. The inaugural address, which followed was one of the shortest on record, but the parade was not. Despite the demand for democratic simplicity, this pageant was one of the longest and most imposing that ever marched in honor of a new occupant of the White House.

Following his trip from Princeton to Washington yesterday, accompanied by 1,000 Princeton students, his reception at the Union station by a committee of prominent citizens headed by Thomas Nelson Page, the author; his entertainment by members of the Wilson and kindred families from all over the land at the Shoreham and the big reception and smoker given in his honor by Princeton alumni at the New Willard, all of which occurred yesterday, Mr. Wilson appeared this morning at the Shoreham, apparently none the worse for that crowded day, to face the supreme event and triumph of his life.

At about half past 10 he was waited on at the Shoreham by members of the congressional committee and escorted to the White House, where he was greeted by President Taft, and shortly thereafter the president and president to be entered a carriage for the trip to the capitol, Mr. Taft seated upon the right hand and Mr. Wilson on the left. The president elect had as a guard of honor the Essex troop of Newark, N. J.

Marshall Also Had Escort.

Vice President Marshall, who had also been escorted from the Shoreham to the White House, followed in another carriage. Because of the vacancy in the office prior to his qualifying he rode with members of the committee, the event being a sad reminder to many of the death of Vice President Sherman. Mr. Marshall's guard of honor was the Culver Black Horse troop of Indiana. This is the first time a vice president has had such a guard in an inaugural ceremony, and the innovation is understood to have been due to the personal request of President Wilson. Mrs. Wilson and Mrs. Marshall did not ride in the inaugural procession, but the first lady of the land and her three charming daughters and the wife of the vice president were escorted to the capitol by a special military aid.

Arrived at the capitol building, President Taft and Mr. Wilson proceeded at once to the president's room, where Mr. Taft busied himself during the brief remainder of his term by signing bills passed in the last hours of congress. Mr. Marshall repaired to the vice president's room to await the moment of taking the oath of office.

Meanwhile the senate chamber presented an animated scene, for today it held not only the members of the highest legislative body in the land, but the supreme court of the United States, the diplomatic corps, members of the house of representatives, distinguished officials of the government and a gallery brilliant with the presence of the beauty and distinction of the land.

An Imposing Procession.

The ancient ceremony of turning back the clock having been attended to in due form, at exactly 12 by this amended timepiece, appeared the president and president elect of the United States escorted by the honorable committee to the chief seats in front of the presiding officer's desk. Thomas R. Marshall was then sworn in by the president pro tem. of the senate, after which there was prayer by the chaplain, the new vice president delivered a brief inaugural address and gave the oath to the new members of the senate, and the stately procession was ready to move to the temporary stand built over the east portico of the capitol.

Those who have never witnessed this imposing array of United States officials and representatives of all the nations of the earth move through the rotunda and corridors of the nation's capitol have missed the most impressive formal spectacle known to the republic. Headed by the sergeant-at-arms of the senate and the sergeant-at-arms of the house, followed by the marshal of the supreme court and the marshal of the District of Columbia, the procession moved in the following order: Chief Justice White and the eight associate justices of the United States supreme court, the committee on arrangements, the president and president elect, the ambassadors and ministers from foreign nations in all their regalia of office, the vice president and former vice presidents, the president pro tem. of the senate, senators and former senators, the speaker and clerk of the house, retiring members and members elect of the house, heads of executive departments of the government, governors of states and territories, Admiral Dewey, head of the navy; Major General Leonard Wood, head of the army; officers of the army and navy who have received the thanks of congress and all other persons who have been admitted to the floor of the senate, followed by the occupants of the senate gallery headed by members of the diplomatic corps.

Administering the Oath.

All this does not require much space in the telling, but when it is reflected that some of these divisions represented hundreds of people and that they included all the chief officials of the United States government of all departments, the accredited delegates from all foreign nations and some of the most distinguished men and women in private life some realization may be had of what it all meant.

Arrived at the temporary stand where hundreds of people were already seated and tens of thousands more were banked in front of the stand, the high dignitaries took the places allotted to them and prepared to solemnize the chief event of the day.

For the first time Chief Justice Edward D. White administered the oath, his predecessor, Chief Justice Melville W. Fuller, having officiated at the last six public inaugurations. In a firm voice the president elect repeated after the venerable chief justice the oath, bowing to kiss the Bible at its close. The boom of cannon and the cheers of the mighty concourse of people announced the fact that a new president of the United States had been inducted into office and that William Howard Taft was now a private citizen.

Inaugural Address Cheered.

The inaugural address was delivered in the easy manner and full voice for which President Wilson is already famous, but the crowd was so enormous that only those nearest the platform could hear. These cheered the telling points, especially the brief reference to the tariff and the striking sentences such as "our work is a work of restoration," "justice and only justice shall always be our motto" and "this is not a day of triumph; it is a day of dedication." Many complimentary references were made to the lofty tone of the address. In its brevity, pithiness and high moral plane it is likened to the inaugural addresses of Lincoln.

In the journey back to the White House President Wilson and Mr. Taft exchanged places in the first carriage, the new president now on the right hand and the ex-president on the left. Wilson was cheered almost continuously throughout the mile of Pennsylvania avenue extending between the capitol and the treasury building. At the White House luncheon was served to the presidential and vice presidential parties. Mr. Taft, whose treatment of his successor throughout the day has been the soul of courtesy and good feeling, excused himself soon after the luncheon to take the train for Augusta, Ga., where he will rest for several weeks before moving to his new home in New Haven, where he is to be Kent professor of law at Yale.

The reviewing stand in front of the White House, to which the presidential party then repaired, seats about 1,500 persons and is crowded with friends and relatives of the new president and vice president. The stand is on the general design of the home of the patron saint of democracy, Thomas Jefferson, just as the stand across the way in Lafayette park is after the plan of Washington's home at Mount Vernon. Huge firs and other evergreen trees are placed about the two stands and the court of honor is brilliant with the inaugural colors, green and white. These colors dominate throughout the entire city.

A Model For Other Nations.

The gigantic parade is now under way. The first division, led by the famous Marine band, is already passing the court of honor. As this band approached the president's stand it broke out in the strains of "Hail to the Chief" amid the cheering of the assembled thousands. The first parade division consists of some of the finest marching regiments of the United States army and navy and the West Point and Annapolis cadets, perhaps the best drilled body of young men in the world. General Leonard Wood's boast that he would make this section of the pageant a "model for other nations" has certainly been realized.

The scene along Pennsylvania avenue is one never to be forgotten. Practically every inch of space on both sides of the great thoroughfare is occupied. The temporary stands, the sidewalks, the cross streets back for a long distance, the windows of every building along the route and even the trees and housetops are alive with humanity. The decorations, not only of this street but of the whole line of march and in a lesser degree of the entire city, have never been more effective. Great arches and festoons span the avenue at frequent intervals. These when lighted at night will make of Pennsylvania avenue a veritable fairyland, and with the garlands of green and white and the display of the national colors the effect will be like that of day.

Quarter of a Million Visitors.

By conservative estimates there are a quarter of a million visitors in Washington today and almost an equal number of the residents of the city who have also turned out to see the show. The suffragists who marched over the same ground yesterday are still in the city and are conspicuous in the crowds, with their yellow banners bearing the legend of "Votes For Women."

Despite the enormous crowds no disorder has come to mar the day. There is immense enthusiasm, of course, but this is not noisy. Dignity and impressiveness are the prevailing notes of the entire inauguration. The thousands of college men in the line of the parade have been cautioned against college yells while on the march, and it is even hoped that the cowboy and Indian contingent of the parade will be subdued in their cheers.

It is estimated that the parade will last till 6 o'clock or later. Following the regular army and navy and cadet division comes the national guard from the various states, headed in many instances by the governor and his staff. There are more than 20,000 marchers in this division alone. The entire national guard of New Jersey is out in honor of the first Jerseyman to become president of the United States. Virginia, the new president's birthplace, and Georgia, the native state of Mrs. Wilson, are also represented by thousands of troops, while Pennsylvania, New York, Maryland and other nearby states swell the great marching columns.

The Veterans In Line.

The third division is made up of the Grand Army of the Republic, Spanish War Veterans and other patriotic organizations. The old soldiers, who hold an honored place in every inaugural procession, are growing fewer each four years, and there were not a few suspicious lumps in the throats of those who cheered them today, while eyes grew blurred while looking on.

The last division consists of political and civic organizations. In it are marching clubs from all parts of the country. Tammany is present in force, and Mayor Carter H. Harrison is leading a large contingent from Chicago; Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore and the District of Columbia are represented by Democratic organizations; American Indians, dressed in the costumes of their ancestors, lend a picturesque touch; nearly 100 huntsmen preceded by their hunting dogs are in line; 1,000 students from Princeton are on hand to march in honor of their former president; other university men are here, representing almost every great college in America, and bands of music at frequent intervals in the giant parade furnish the measure to which the heavy tramp-tramp of the marchers keeps time.

There is one welcome innovation. Only the Marine band is supposed to play "Hail to the Chief" and that only when passing the presidential reviewing stand. At previous inaugurations every band has felt it its bounden duty to play this air at every possible opportunity. How weary a president of the United States must grow of that tune!

Tonight comes the great fireworks display on the ellipse near the White House. Because of the abandonment of the inaugural ball this feature is to be made the most elaborate in the history of inaugurations. After it is ended red fire will be burned all along Pennsylvania avenue, and the festivities are to continue till after midnight.

WASHINGTON IN GALA ARRAY FOR THE INAUGURATION OF PRESIDENT WILSON.

Everything is in readiness to-day for the inauguration of Woodrow Wilson and T. R. Marshall as President and Vice President of the United States. According to advices from our Washington correspondent the capital has put on a gala appearance. Government buildings and private residences are festooned with flags and bunting; the ubiquitous faker is there ready for business; the enterprising vender of souvenirs, with his heavily laden mule, is on the job, and altogether the city has taken on a holiday aspect. Thousands of newspaper correspondents and photographers from every quarter of the globe are waiting with pad, pencil and camera to report this most important event to readers all over the world.

STOCK EXCHANGE AS IT IS

more of persons, who may operate in what is called the "coulisse" of the Bourse.

The beginnings of the New York Stock Exchange were the signing of a paper of 24 brokers on May 17, 1792, in which they agreed to charge a commission of not less than ¼ of 1 per cent. (now ⅛ per cent. on par value) on transactions. They called themselves "Brokers for the Purchase and Sale of Public Stock." Practically the only thing they had to trade in was certificates representing the public debt of the United States—in other words, Government bonds. Today the "stock in trade" of the New York Stock Exchange consists of securities of corporation approximating a par value of Twenty Billions of Dollars.

The New York Stock Exchange is an unincorporated association of business men, whose primary object was the establishing of uniform charges for services rendered, and closely allied to this object was the providing of a common meeting place where the agents representing buyers and sellers of stocks and bonds could come together and effect transactions. The open competition between buyer and seller established a recognized market value for securities—first from week to week, then from day to day, and finally, from minute to minute. The prices thus established became invaluable as a means for regulating the terms of collateral loans negotiated in bank, and this was a benefit to both borrower and lender, who might be located a thousand miles from the Stock Exchange, but who had the assurance of a constant and speedy market at a publicly established price for the security pledged as collateral for loans.

The benefits conferred upon the general public by the Stock Exchange are manifold, whether the individual ever had a "trade" on the Exchange or not. For example, when an investor buys a stock or bond regularly listed on the New York Stock Exchange he knows for a certainty that he is not receiving a counterfeit, because the Stock Exchange requires that certificates shall be the work of authorized engravers, and that the printing of such certificates shall be done by authorized engraving companies, using authorized materials in turning out the work. As much care is exercised in this respect as the United States Government exercises in the issue of bank notes or other forms of paper money.

Another important requirement insisted upon by reputable Stock Exchanges is an official transfer agent and registrar for every listed stock or bond. Thus the owner of such listed security knows where he can go to transfer title in a certificate in case of sale, or if he wants to divide up a certificate of large denomination into smaller denominations. This requirement for official transfer agent and registrar is not only a great convenience to the public, but is a safeguard against an over-issue of stock, even by officers of a corporation. Before the Stock Exchange became powerful enough to enforce these requirements for the protection of members and their clients, the fraudulent issue of securities was not uncommon, and great loss was entailed upon the public.

Another requirement of reputable Stock Exchanges is a sworn statement showing the legal organization of a corporation seeking to have its securities listed; the amount of the authorized as well as the actually issued capital; the amount and character of debt, if any; prompt notice of dividends declared and when payable; the character of business transacted; the location and number of plants; the names and addresses of officers, and much more information which it would be difficult if not impossible to obtain by an individual, but which is essential in making safe investments.

Membership in the New York Stock Exchange is limited to 1,100, and the aggregate market value of the 1,100 "seats" is between $60,000,000 and $70,000,000. Applicants for admission are more rigidly investigated as to past business career and present financial and moral standing, than are applicants for admission into any other association, business or social, in the country. The successful candidate may be said to have a passport for commercial probity that entitles him to entrance into the highest business circles. This fact is recognized by financial institutions and great corporations who accept the signature of a New York Stock Exchange member to a stock certificate with the same degree of confidence that attaches to the seal of a notary public or authorized official.

The services rendered by a reputable stock broker are as moral and legal as the services rendered by any honest accredited agent between principals. The stock broker's services, however, do not end with the mere act of offering to sell or purchase a security on the Stock Exchange. He must attend to the details of making legal transfer and final delivery. He must establish banking credit in order to handle a transaction during the successive stages of negotiation between buyer and seller. He must be acquainted with all the legal forms necessary in the different kinds of property changing ownership, and custom requires him to take the risks connected with verbal orders, on which the bulk of business is now handled.

The legal status and honorable character of a business that has been conducted according to organized forms for more than a century must be recognized by all, and its value as a dominant factor in social and political economy is steadily growing in appreciation. It is inevitable, in a Stock Exchange as in a religious society or other body of men, that undesirable features sometimes creep in, and that these undesirable features are temporarily magnified so as to obscure obvious virtues; but if there were no other motive than the purely selfish, that would be sufficient to keep the reputable Stock Exchange ever on the alert to curb irregular practices and keep its members keyed up to the strictest integrity in all their dealings.

Imitation has always been acknowledged as the sincerest flattery, and more than a century ago poets embalmed the fact that there are those who will "steal the livery of heaven to serve the devil in." It is not surprising, therefore, that there should be counterfeits of the legitimate Stock Exchange.

The most deceptive of these counterfeits is commonly known as a "bucket-shop." The legitimate Stock Exchange, as already stated, is an association of responsible business men who act as agents for the public in the purchase and sale of bona fide securities, involving actual delivery of certificates representing legal title to concrete property. The bucketshop—no matter whether it masquerades under the name of a brokerage firm, a commission house, an "Exchange," or a "Board"—does not trade in securities or commodities, and does not contemplate actual delivery of anything. The bucketshop uses the price quotations made on a legitimate Exchange in actual transactions, as the basis for purely fictitious transactions in the bucketshop. These price quotations are not infrequently stolen, and are almost invariably manipulated to the disadvantage of the innocent dupe who gives an order to buy or sell in a bucketshop.

The member of a legitimate Stock Exchange earns his commission by the service he renders to a customer, and has no personal interest in the fluctuations in price except that his business will naturally increase if his customers make money through the selection of profitable investments based upon sound judgment.

Exactly the reverse is true in the case of the owner of a bucketshop. The bucketshop keeper does not deliver a certificate for stock or bond which he pretends to purchase or sell on orders. He assumes the functions of both agent and dealer, which is illegal, and yet in reality he merely enters in his books a wager against his customer's judgment.

Supply and demand establish price the world over for everything representing service and property. This basic factor is wholly lacking in all bucketshop "transactions." No matter how great the demand may be for a given stock or commodity, if the orders are given to a bucketshop they can have no possible effect upon supply, because the bucketshop never really executes an order, and never deals in any tangible thing representing the existence of actual property.

Furthermore, a bucketshop is not restrained by any rules or regulations which reputable business men find necessary for the prompt and faithful execution of contracts. Because of the fraudulent character of the so-called "business," a bucketshop owner cannot gain admission to any reputable Exchange, and is therefore lacking in financial standing and resources. The average bucketshop keeper is here today and gone tomorrow. His disappearance is always due to the prospective success of his customers, but these customers are never permitted to realize their success.

The safeguard of the public against bucketshops is to ascertain the business connections of stock brokers before placing orders of money. This may be done through personal inquiry, or by correspondence with chartered banks, editors of well known daily newspapers, or direct application to the secretary of the legitimate Stock Exchange in any of the great cities.

As to assertions made by Mr. Hegeman I desire to explain that, no good purpose would be accomplished by the incorporation of the New York Exchange; on the contrary, the substitution of public control for the control exercised by the Exchange over its members, would be detrimental to the public interest—to force incorporation would be unjust.

The commission appointed by Governor Hughes in 1909 to report upon speculation in securities, disapproved of forcing the Stock Exchange to incorporate.

The importance of the New York Stock Exchange is of inestimable value. Financial authorities and economists recognize the fact that stock exchanges are economic necessities, and it is only through the medium of the Stock Exchange that a market place is provided where investors and speculators, in large numbers, may trade in securities, which enables the stock market to render a useful service in the establishment of values.

It must be recognized that there is a great difference between gambling and speculating; terms that are often misapplied by critics of stock markets. A gambler seeks and makes risks which it is not necessary to assume and which, in their assumption, contribute nothing to the general uplift; but the speculator—one, for instance, who sells stocks short, volunteers to assume those risks of business which must inevitably fall somewhere, and without which the mine, or the factory, or the railroad, could not be undertaken.

The well known economist, Professor Emery, has written as follows:

"Speculation has become an increasingly important factor in the economic world without receiving a corresponding place in the economic science. In the field in which it acts, in the trade in grain and cotton and securities and the like, speculation is the predominant influence in determining price, and, as such, is one of the chief directive forces in trade and industry. But treatises in the English language on general economic theories and conditions have given very little space to this influence, which is fundamental in the world of economic fact.

"It is true that forty years ago speculation was far less important than it is now, and there was, therefore, more justification for disregarding it. Prof. Hadley has given due consideration to the new conditions which prevail in modern business. At the same time it should be remembered that McCulloch, already in his day, had grasped the true idea of the function of speculation, a fact shown by the incorporation of his treatment of the subject into his chapters on Value. Wide as is the influence of speculation, its force is felt primarily in the field of prices. By making prices it directs industry and trade, for men produce and exchange according to comparative prices. Speculation then is vitally connected with the theory of value.

"From the point of view of theory, therefore, it is incorrect to attach so little importance to the function of speculation; in practice it is impossible to deal intelligently with the evils of the speculation system without first recognizing its real relation to business. Both the writer and the reformer must reckon more than they have yet done with the fact that speculation in the past half century has developed as a natural economic institution in response to the new conditions of industry and commerce. It is the result of steam transportation and the telegraph on the one hand and of vast industrial undertakings on the other. The attitude of those who would try to crush it out by legislation, without disturbing any other economic conditions, is entirely unreasonable."

Regulation.

The rules of the New York Stock Exchange prohibit absolutely unfair and unbusinesslike dealings, and all members must live up to the letter and spirit of the stock exchange rules. Severe punishment is given to those who fail to comply with the law, and the instances of dishonesty on the part of members of the New York Stock Exchange are rare.

Many fraudulent acts perpetrated on innocent investors through advertising campaigns, and by persons unaffiliated with recognized Exchanges are often classed as "Wall Street Scandals" and the New York Stock Exchange innocently bears the burden of such reproach.

Taxation.

Among the various bills recommended by Governor Sulzer is one increasing the present transfer tax from $2.00 to $4.00 on each one hundred shares of stock sold. This tax must be born by the public, and there is great opposition to this bill becoming a law.

The desire of the State of New York to increase its revenue will not be accomplished if this tax is increased, as the doubling of the present tax will contract the volume of transactions and drive a large amount of business now directed to the New York market, to stock exchanges in other cities such as Philadelphia, Boston and Chicago. The tax is unjust, as there is no similar tax on sales of coffee, grains, metals, dry goods, etc. It is a tax on business, not on property.

If this bill should become a law it will menace the supremacy of New York city and State, as it will direct legitimate business elsewhere. Thousands of employes will be discharged, offices in the financial district will be vacated, rents will be reduced, and real estate interests in New York know this means not only a loss of revenue from buildings located in the financial district, but will also affect rentals in many apartment houses in New York, and generally interrupt and lessen trade. The Merchants' Association of New York is active in its protest against the passing of this transfer bill. It is appreciated that if this bill becomes a law the purchasing power of many thousands of individuals who now secure their necessities of life by reason of their employment or connection with the financial district of New York, will be greatly impaired.

Many of the Stock Exchange bills recommended by Governor Sulzer are so drastic and so injurious to financial interests as to encourage the belief that they will not become laws.

GEORGE P. MELLICK.

WOMEN'S PART IN THE INAUGURATION

No greater evidence of the growing influence of women in the political, intellectual and business life of the nation can be found than is reflected in the inaugural festivities of the present week. The suffrage parade of yesterday and the hike from Newark to Washington have told of the advanced position of women, and although she did not appear in the parade today, except as lending charm to the galleries, she is very much in evidence in all matters connected with the induction of Mr. Wilson into office.

During the last campaign all of the national committees had woman's departments. Women speakers, and quite effective ones at that, were on the stump. Women organizers were in the field. Women were connected with the press bureaus—wrote the letters, mailed the documents, attended to the card indexes and helped in a thousand and one ways. Therefore woman will be present in force at the inauguration of the new president.

New First Lady of the Land.

A change of administrations makes an even greater stir in the social life of Washington than in the political life of the coutry. Of course there is a social life in the capital city quite apart from the government set. Families of wealth, culture and leisure have been making Washington their home. The beauty of the city, its climate and charm have acted as a magnet to draw to it loveliness, wit and brilliancy, and in time it is probable that the American capital will become as much a social center as the great capitals of Europe.

The resident set, which continues however administrations may come and go, accepts only those among the official circle who win their way into its exclusive precincts by their own merit. evertheless the advent of a new administration has a profound influence on Washington society. The wife of the president is the first lady of the land in fact as well as name. She has the right of precedence everywhere. Her invitations are commands, and her influence in social matters is powerful, not only in the capital, but elsewhere.

Mrs. Woodrow Wilson is the daughter of a southern clergyman and was an art student before she married the President, who was then an assistant professor at Bryn Mawr. As wife of the president of Princeton, governor of New Jersey and President-elect she has won golden opinions from all. Not only is she cultured in the best sense of the term, but has all the charming hospitality that is proverbial with southerners. Her three daughters, Margaret, Jessie and Eleanor, while serious minded young women, each with a classic education and interested in art, music, settlement work and the bigger things of life, are nevertheless social favorites and may be depended on to make life at the White House brilliant and lively. Associated with them will be Miss Genevieve Clark, daughter of the speaker, and the daughters of various Democratic senators and representatives, who are already belles in Washington.

Never Apart For a Day.

Mrs. Thomas R. Marshall is the second lady of the land and promises to be a favorite as such. It is said of her that she has never been away from the Vice President twenty-four hours at a time since their marriage many years ago. When she went on a shopping tour to Chicago, or elsewhere the then Governor of Indiana dropped the affairs of State and went along, and when the Governor had to go on a campaign tour Mrs. Marshall accompanied him to look after his collars, ties, tickets and time tables and make things easy for him on the road. In one campaign Governor Marshall set a pace that wore out some of the old guard of campaigners, but Mrs. Marshall did not seem to mind. She was as bright and vivacious at the end of the grueling trip as at the beginning. The same was true in his tour of the country as a candidate for Vice President.

Mrs. Marshall was the deputy to her father, who was an Indiana county clerk when Mr. Marshall, then a lawyer, had a case to try in that county. It was love at first sight and has been a love match ever since.

The wives of the new cabinet members will share with Mrs. Wilson and Mrs. Marshall the leadership of the government set and in a general way of all Washington society. One thing appears certain—there will be more democratic simplicity than during some of the recent regimes. The Vice President says frankly that he is a poor man and will govern his affairs accordingly. Not only so, but democratic simplicity will be a rule of the new administration, socially and otherwise.

Suffragists' Part In Show.

Neither Mrs. Wilson nor Mrs. Marshal is an advocate of woman suffrage. Nevertheless the campaign in behalf of votes for women has made immense headway in the national capital, many of the society leaders having espoused it. At first there was talk of an elaborate suffragist division in the inaugural parade, but this was abandoned, and one arranged for yesterday. It was proposed to have leading women from all parts of the land present, to marshal imposing division from all the States, to show by their costuming the advance of womankind from their ancient position of semiserfdom to the proud place of citizenship and boss of the works they hold today and otherwise to make the procession the most gorgeous and imposing in the history of the movement.

It was at about this stage of the proceedings that Major Sylvester, chief of the Washington police, got himself distinctly disliked. The major refused police protection to the parade. After the resulting storm had subsided sufficiently so that he could get in a word edgewise he rather lamely explained that he thought the parade was to be held at night and he could not promise to protect the fair marchers from offensive remarks and hoodlums. But if it was intended to hold it in the daytime that was altogether a different matter. Ahem! While the major was thus crawfishing, hurriedly if not gracefully, various gallant men volunteered to form a guard for the fair procession.

The suffragists on their part did not think they needed any mere masculine guard. They would have a parade so imposing that the chance hoodlums lurking along the streets would be awed into silence. Moreover, they could depend on the chivalry of American men. The women were quite able to protect themselves, thank you!

At about this time came news of recruits. General Rosalie Jones, who had led Colonel Ida Craft, Surgeon General Dock and one or two others in the hike from New York to Albany to present a petition for woman suffrage to Governor Sulzer, sent word to Washington to hand a similar memorandum to President-elect Wilson. With this redoubtable escort who can question that the suffragist yesterday was amply protected?

Kitchenettes.

Onion salt in a handy shaker, at 15 cents, saves the time and trouble required to prepare an onion for seasoning.

Never put soda in the water in which you wash china that has any gilding on it. Soda injures the gilding. Instead use soap, which answers just as well and has no ill effects.

To clean a decanter take a small raw potato, cut it into tiny pieces and put them into the decanter with a little warm water. Shake up and down till clean, then rinse in fresh water.

If you or your laundress runs your fine linen through the wringer it will make wrinkles that are almost impossible to iron out. Do not allow this. Have the fine linen sorted and wrung out by hand. It is worth all the extra work.

MRS. WOODROW WILSON, THE NEW MISTRESS OF THE WHITE HOUSE, AND HER DAUGHTERS.

Friends of Woodrow Wilson have aid that his political ability is vested a his family, which consists of a charming wife and three equally attractive daughters.

Mrs. Wilson was born in Georgia. After her engagement to Mr. Wilson she took up the study of art at the Art Students' League in New York. She continued her art work after her marriage for three years until the birth of her first daughter. She liked portraiture particularly well. A clever, smiling, matronly woman, she is described as an ideal housekeeper and mother, and Mr. Wilson declares she has been his chief aid in his rise to fame.

Miss Margaret Woodrow Wilson was born twenty-six years ago at Gainesville, Ga. Miss Jessie Woodrow Wilson was also born at Gainesville, twenty-five years ago. Miss Eleanor Randolph Wilson, who is twenty-two, was born at Middletown, Conn., where her father was an instructor at Wesleyan College.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilson have carried into effect advanced ideas in the education of their daughters. They are proficient in German and French, and each has specialized along a particular line. Miss Margaret is a singer and has frequently appeared in choral festivals in New York.

Miss Jessie intended to become a missionary, but finally contented herself with settlement work in Philadelphia.

The two elder daughters are fair, slender, and of medium height, but Miss Eleanor is dark. They have no fads, nor have they any prudish aversion to any of the pursuits and amusements in vogue among healthy modern American girls. Mr. and Mrs. Wilson are intensely proud of them, as the whole nation will also doubtless be when the Wilson family is finally settled in the White House.

Secretary of the Interior—Franklin K. Lane of California.

Secretary of Labor—W. B. Wilson of Pennsylvania. (If the bill creating this office is not vetoed.)

The names on the list which have not appeared heretofore are those of Lindley M. Garrison, Franklin K. Lane and David S. Houston. Mr. Garrison is a vice chancellor of New Jersey and lives at 200 Barrow street, Jersey City.

Franklin K. Lane is the present head of the interstate commerce commission. Mr. Houston is the president of Washington university of St. Louis.

Statesmen who have sporting blood in their veins are offering to bet odds that the list is correct. A few skeptics who have been fooled before in their guesses concerning the purposes of the new president are taking some wagers that there will be at least one change before the slate goes into the senate.

To say that the cabinet as a whole gave the politicians and statesmen a new thrill in the shape of a surprise would not adequately convey the precise meaning intended.

Even William Jennings Bryan, who is to have the most important place in the new cabinet, admitted the sensation when he asked about the personalities of three or four of the men. His interest justified the inference that he had not been consulted by President Wilson in selecting the other members of the cabinet.

PROTEST AGAINST MYRTLE AVE. 'DUMP'

Something Peculiar About Health Board's Plan They Consider.

Herbert Langford, E. W. Henck and E. H. Mumford at the Common Council meeting last night entered a strong protest against the announced purpose of the Plainfield Board of Health to re-open the "dump" on Myrtle avenue. They declared it a nuisance when in operation three years ago.

"I would like to know," said Mr. Langford, "first, why the Board of Health is so persistent in wanting to place a 'dump' where people have so strenuously objected, after bitter experiences; second, where does the Board of Health get its authority to plant a 'dump' in any spot they select, especially when the Council had closed this particular one. Third, if there be an honest intention to make a road connecting Myrtle avenue with North Plainfield below the West End avenue bridge, why not let the Common Council attend to the matter, who in turn would appoint Mr. Gavett, the street commissioner, to take charge of the road building. Who ever heard of the Board of Health looking after the laying out of a street.

"The residents of the West End will soon be able to determine whether Myrtle avenue is to be extended to North Plainfield, or merely used for a city 'dump' as former. If they see Mr. Gavett it means a road; if a health inspector, a city 'dump.' Halstead Compton informed me that he gave the land to the city with the understanding that Myrtle avenue was to be extended to West End avenue and never with the idea of a public 'dump' as the newly-formed Board of Health purpose."

After the hearing, on motion of Councilman Randolph, the city clerk was instructed to communicate with the Board of Health for the purpose of learning exactly what the Board proposes to do in the matter. It is the belief that the "dump" will not be re-opened.

AMEND ORDINANCE FOR CORP. COUNSEL

Measure Will Allow Mayor to Name C. A. Reed as City's Lawyer.

The amended ordinance empowering Mayor Percy H. Stewart to appoint a new corporation counsel was passed on third reading at the March meeting of the Common Council, last night, but as ten days must elapse after the passage of the ordinance before the appointment can be made, Mr. Stewart will probably not send in a name before the regular April meeting of the Council.

While no official announcement has been made as to who the appointee will be it is expected that former State Senator Charles A. Reed will be named by the Mayor and confirmed by the Council. It is also stated unofficially that there will be no assistant corporation counsel to be appointed by the Mayor, but this will not prevent Mr. Reed from engaging an assistant if he desires. The corporation counsel, however, will be held responsible for the work of his department.

It is recognized that the city has a considerable amount of litigation on hand which will require the employment of corporation counsel well versed in such matters, and it is further admitted that in city court cases City Judge W. G. DeMeza should not be required to act as both judge and prosecutor, but that there should be someone to represent the city and prosecute these cases. While it is expected that the salary of the corporation counsel will be raised from $2,000, the exact amount has not yet been determined upon. That will be fixed by resolution of the Common Council.

New Brunswick, March 4.—The will of Abram Giddes, of Piscataway township, was probated before Surrogate Clayton here today. The entire estate is left to the widow, Mrs. Mary E. Giddes, for her use during her life time while she remains a widow. If she should remarry the estate is to be divided equally among five children, A. L. Giddes, Mrs. Emma Brokaw, Miss Anna E. Giddes and Alonzo Brokaw, the last named formerly of Plainfield, are the executors with power to sell part or all of the personal or real estate for a trust fund in accordance with the provision of the will. The will was made October 13, 1909, the witnesses being W. R. Compton and William McD. Coriell, the last named of Plainfield.

THE FORUM.

FOR NEW COUNTY.

Editors, Plainfield Daily Press:

The citizens of South Plainfield are very much interested in Mayor N. B. Smalley's proposition to create a new county with Plainfield as the county seat. The benefits and convenience the inhabitants in the proposed county would receive are beyond conception. As we are situated here in South Plainfield being at the extreme end of Middlesex county, we get practically no improvements from Middlesex county, our county roads and bridges are in horrible condition and always have been so, no matter what party is in power; in other words we are too far from headquarters to receive any recognition from our county officials. Our county tax keeps increasing continually and what the people have to show for it, I fail to see.

If a taxpayer or citizen has any business at the court house or county clerk's office it takes a whole day to get there and back as we have no direct means of travel to New Brunswick. If a citizen is fortunate enough to have a high-power automobile he can get along very well. Plainfield's Chamber of Commerce is at the present time wrestling with the problem of booming Plainfield. It seems to me if they would take up this proposition and help carry it through to success, Plainfield would have such an enormous growth in five years that it would astonish its most optimistic person in the whole community. It will be argued by the opponents of the plan that we would have to build a court house, county clerk's office, etc. This would be true, but we are paying for those same buildings at the present time. Somerset and Union counties have recently built new court houses, while Middlesex county has just erected a costly county clerk's office and are at present agitating the erection of a new court house. These we will have to be paid for by the people in their respective counties and why not by all means have one of our own, where it will do our people the most good. It is to be hoped that Mayor Smalley's proposition will succeed and if we have a constitutional convention let us see to it that provision is made for this change. Let us do as Mayor Smalley suggests, rally around the historical Washington Rock on the Fourth of July and assert our independence of Middlesex, Somerset and Union counties.

HEARINGS OCCUPY TIME OF COUNCIL

SEWER ASSESSMENTS

As to Madison Avenue Widening, Some Affected Property Owners Object to Schedule of Benefits and Damages.

There was so much time consumed last night with public hearings on ordinances for proposed street improvements, and the revised and amended sewer assessment by Howard C. Tracy, E. A. Laing and H. B. MacDonald and the report of the commissioners, E. T. Barrows, Michael Riffner and Howard C. Tracy, in the matter of widening Madison avenue between Front street and the railroad, that it was nearly 10 o'clock when the Common Council took up the regular business of the March session.

The first public hearing was on the proposed widening of Sycamore street, between Fifth and Sixth streets. S. S. Sweckhamer, representing Mary W. Alpough, said that his client had donated certain land for this improvement and he hoped that the actual work would place no further burden of taxation on her. He did not oppose the widening. This ordinance was passed on third reading as well as the ordinances to establish grades in certain streets and to change the grade on South Second street between View and Rock avenues.

An opportunity was given the Council to treat with property-owners in the matter of extending Kensington avenue. George E. Sovereign, one of the largest property-owners affected, notified the Council that he had been called away and would be glad to met the members later. V. W. Nash, Jr., representing Jonathan Clawson, and George W. Bird, representing Mrs. Agnes R. Bird, both of whom own property affected by the opening, addressed the Council, stating that they were ready to treat with the city for the sale of the land. They said that they were willing to meet the city half way. They did not oppose the improvement, but simply want their clients to receive a fair compensation for their property to be used for the improvement. On motion of Mr. Mygatt the matter was laid over until the April meeting, giving further opportunity to treat with the above named property-owners.

Lamar VanSyckel and Donald McInnes were the only two property-owners appearing to protest against the amended sewer assessment, and after they had stated their objections Mr. Mygatt's resolution that the amended report be confirmed was adopted. Mr. VanSyckel's objection was based on the fact that more expense had not been placed on the city, and in his case he will get little or no use of the sewer. Mr. McInnes complained that only thirty-two feet of his land on Monroe avenue would be benefited, while the balance of 209 feet would receive no benefit. In response to a question from Mr. Calkins both Mr. VanSykcel and Mr. McInnes stated that W. R. Completon had represented them at the previous hearing. They did not know why he was not present at this time.

William Newcorn, representing the Dreier estate; W. S. Angleman, representing the lessees of the Dreier estate, and J. Henry Crane, representing Wadley & Goodenough, appeared before the Council to protest against confirmation of the report of the commissioners in the matter of widening Madison avenue. Mr. Newcorn declared the assessment of benefits and damages in the case of his clients to be the most inequitable he had ever known. The commissioners allow the Dreier estate $4,874 in benefits and gives $11,912 in damages, which Mr. Newcorn said was out of reasonable proportion. By comparison he cited the assessment on the Endress property, opposite where he said that the benefits exceeded the damages by $172. In this case provision for the widening had been made years ago.

Mr. Angleman's argument was that the lessees of the property, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Dreier, were entitled to compensation under the law, and the commissioners had not made any allowance for them. Mr. Angleman and Councilman Calkins engaged in a little "jolly" as to the phrasing of the ordinance where it refers to "owners or occupants" and "owners or occupants," it occurring both ways. Mr. Angleman thought there was no doubt as to the real intent, but being included.

In the case of Wadley & Goodenough, the commissioners allowed the owners $151.12 in excess of damages, which Mr. Crane did not think was sufficient. He estimated that it would cost the firm $985 to make changes if the street was widened. He returned to the commissioner's expert having passed upon the matter, and in answer to Mr. Mygatt's question as to who the expert was, he said that it was Charles H. Hand.

Upon Mr. Mygatt's motion this whole matter was referred to the Council as a committee of the whole.

BETHEL CHAPEL SCOUTS IN "BETWEEN TWO FIRES"

The performance of the play "Between two Fires," given by Troop No. 7, of the Bethel chapel boy scouts in the church rooms last night scored a big hit with the audience that packed the house. The scouts were assisted in producing the play by the Misses Jennie Walker and Elinore McNeil, and Mrs. Julius Smith. Mrs. Sarah Pryor and Calvin Tildon took the leading parts in the cast.

About $80 was realized which will be turned over to the association treasurer for use in this work. Those in charge wish to extend their thanks to Harold Condict for his kindness and also the friends who contributed so liberally to make the affair a success.

The regularly monthly meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church will be held on Thursday afternoon at 2:30 in the Epworth House. An all-day sewing meeting will be conducted and all of the members are requested to be present.

WHY ALL SCOTLAND LOVES ROBT. BURNS

J. Duncan Spaeth Gives the Reason to the Monday Afternoon Club.

That Robert Burns, the great lyric poet of Scotland, revolutionized the style of writing in his time from the cold, classic and ordinary, to the natural, broad and common, was asserted by Prof. J. Duncan Spaeth, of Princeton University, who paid the famous composer of song and verse a tribute yesterday afternoon in an address before members of the Monday Afternoon Club at the Hartridge Auditorium. Burns' poems, the lecturer said, contain an intimacy with nature, which, being so different from the works of other writers, make them especially loved by the people of Scotland.

"When we recite poems to the children," Prof. Spaeth continued, "we are often asked if the stories the verses tell are really true—if they really happened. And of the works of other poets, we attribute to them great credit for their imagination and wonderful theories; and we tell the children, 'No, the things which we read to them about were just made-up.' But of Burns—everything really happened in Burns' poems. As he guided the plow over the fields of his father's farm he noted incidents of nature, actions of the birds and antics of the wind, which at various times caused him to receive the inspirations later resulting in his most famous lines."

Prof. Spaeth said language is that which is living and not which you hear or see written. He said this was exemplified by Burns. In his various works, the lecturer said, Burns went literally speaking, directly into the souls of his people and they were a part of the inheritance of the past. Burns' works were the fruits of his own life in its gale of love and passion, he said.

In his songs, the speaker added, Burns was perhaps the closest to Scotland. He said they were written not in the dialect of the English or the Scots but in the dialect of the human heart.

In closing Prof. Spaeth proved himself a master recitationist and amused the large audience with his Scottish dialect. He also obliged with the rendition of several songs written by Burns and their quaintness and peculiar charm thrilled his hearers.

Telling of the life of Burns, Prof. Spaeth said in part: "Born in Scotland, near Ayr, January 25, 1759, Burns was instructed in the ordinary branches of the English language by an instructor hired by his father, who was a farmer. At an early age he had to operate the plow and perform other labors of farm life and at the age of twenty-one years attracted wide attention by his productions of poetical pieces."

Continuing the speaker told of his love affair with Jean Armour, a Mauchline girl, which through fate led to the wide publication of his works as he was about to emigrate to a foreign land to avoid the uncomfortable criticisms being heaped upon him because of his life of dissipation, misfortune and recklessness At the age of thirty-seven Burns died, leaving his wife, Jean Armour, and four children. Although his character was marred by imprudence he was an honest, proud, and warm-hearted man, combining sound understanding with high passions, and a vigorous and excursive imagination.

ST. ALBAN'S CANON ON RECONCILIATION

Man's Conscience Will Trouble Him Until He Seeks Salvation, He Says.

"And His Thoughts Troubled Him," was the theme of the discourse by Canon Alexander Macnab, of St. Alban's Cathedral, Toronto, Can., at Grace church, Sunday morning, at which time he addressed a large congregation. In part he spoke as follows:

"No wonder his thoughts troubled him because of the handwriting on the wall. I suppose your thoughts have troubled you. Actions grow out of thoughts and thoughts grow out of actions. No matter what a man's position or power may be in life if he is not living in the right way his thoughts trouble him.

"Babylon was a great city of tremendous size, with twenty-five gates on a side, with great avenues joining them. Among the great buildings was the magnificent temple of Nirvana and the enormous palace of the king. There came a time when Belshazzar gave a banquet in his palace. At that time he brought in the sacred vessels which his father had brought from the Hebrew temple in Jerusalem and his guests drank wine from them."

The preacher then gave a graphic picture of the banquet and of the appearance of the handwriting on the wall and of the interpretation of the same by the prophet Daniel. He then went on to say:

"Everyone has a time when trouble, sorrow or disappointment comes to him or his thoughts trouble him for one reason or another. Then if we wilfully shut our eyes to these handwritings on the wall of the mind there will come a time when it is too late.

"There are very many whose thoughts never trouble them. That is for them a time of serious moral decay. If you shut your eyes and ears wilfully, God will say to you 'Thou are weighed in the balance and found wanting.' Work is often neglected because people say 'Let someone else do that for they can do it better than I.' Their thoughts are not troubling them with regard to their responsibility.

"The criminal may turn away to another country but he cannot get away from his conscience, his guilty thoughts. The judgment of his thoughts is ever with him.

"All but the very careless think some of the future but if our bodies are thought of and cared for at the expense of the soul, there will come a time when a bed of sickness or some catastrophy will force our thoughts to trouble us, and to consider the soul's failure. Sin must be taken away out of the life before there can be any real peace of the soul. The warning for us is to be the handwriting on the wall to trouble us. This is the day to seek for reconciliation. 'Behold now is the day of salvation.'"

HURLS COUPLE INTO AIR

The part of the building designated as No. 627-A, where the explosion took place, is entirely wrecked. The roof is partly blown off, and the front and rear a mass of ruins. The apartments at 627 and 629 West Fourth street were badly shaken and will have to be reconstructed before habitation is possible again. The bearing walls are completely demolished and there is danger of the structure collapsing at any moment.

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey have lost everything of material value they possessed except the clothes they wore. A sum of money which they were saving and other valuables are lost in the ruins. Their furniture was either blown in pieces from the house or is laying demolished beneath the fallen parts of the building. There was no insurance on the personal effects.

The owners of the brick row had the property insured against fire but according to Morris Abrams, one of the stockholders of the realty concern, the surety company will contest any claim they may make on the grounds that the destruction was caused by an explosion.

Heroic work on the part of the firemen who responded to the alarm sent in by Patrolman O'Keefe from box 81, is the cause of favorable comment. Captain James Daly, of No. 2 Engine Company, ran into the cellar amid the falling bricks and timber and groping his way in the dark shut off the gas. Captain Mehl, of No. 3, ran into the blazing structure despite warnings from Chief Doane that he was taking his life in his hands by so doing. Mehl was accompanied by Patrolman O'Keefe. They searched the rooms to see if any human being was there.

The jar caused by the explosion ripped the gas meters in the adjoining flats from their connections and the Public Service employes who quickly responded to a summons, had a busy, as well as risky time, turning off the gas at the building line, thereby preventing other explosions.

That no one was killed, the firemen and police consider a miracle. Had Mr. and Mrs. Harvey been in bed there is little doubt but that they would have met instant death they claim.

That anyone would endanger the lives and property of so many people for the purpose of looting a meter of twenty-five or fifty cent pieces has horrified the citizens of the West End and there is some talk of immediate vengeance should any miscreant be caught. Police Chief Patrick Kiely has detailed several men of the department to make investigations under the direction of Detective Sergeant Flynn. The explosion brought to light the fourth incident of thefts of money from quarter meters reported to the police yesterday. There were several other cases last week.

According to a statement made to a Daily Press reporter by Mr. Harvey at the bedside in Muhlenberg Hospital, he and his wife returned shortly after 11 o'clock last night from a church entertainment and as they entered their apartments on the first floor they noticed the odors of escaping illuminating gas. He lighted an oil lamp and accompanied by his wife started for the cellar where they imagined the gas was coming from. As they opened the door leading to the basement the gas which filled the cellar ignited and a terrific explosion occurred.

With part of the stairway leading to the second floor and the front of the house, husband and wife were hurled into the air and landed violently on the sidewalk. Their hair and clothing were in flames as they lay unconscious. Mrs. Harvey regained her senses first and beat out the flames enveloping her body. She quickly put out the flames on her husband's clothing as he was regaining consciousness.

By this time a large crowd had gathered and the two victims of the explosion were lifted from the walk and hurried to Dr. Yood's office in an automobile owned and driven by Harry J. Miller, of Westfield. Mrs. Harvey says this was the second time her meter had been looted within a month.

Other families effected by the explosion are Mr. and Mrs. Mosley and Richard Carter, of 627 West Fourth street; Henry Miller and Samuel Jackson, and relatives, at No. 629. The second floor of No. 629-A is vacant.

MINOR MATTERS OF THE COUNCIL

In response to an invitation at the Common Council meeting last night, Mayor Percy H. Stewart and Councilman Francis J. Blatz expressed their willingness to attend sessions of the Public Utilities Commission at Newark on March 11 and 14, at which time the question of a uniform price for gas and electric lights will be discussed. Representatives from various parts of the State will attend.

Mayor Percy H. Stewart called the Council's attention to the necessity of establishing a dog pound and submitted plans prepared by the S. P. C. A. This was referred to the committee on public affairs.

Building Inspector T. O. Doane reported the granting of 22 permits during the month. Horace Adams, clerk of the District Court, reported receipts for the past month of $168.-02 and expenses of $42.93, leaving a balance of $117.90.

Resolutions by Councilman C. C. Randolph, and adopted, transferred $1,000 from the general to the poor fund, authorized the borrowing of $8,000 for sewer extension work and authorized H. C. VanEmburgh, civil engineer, to make the official assessment maps for the year at an expense not to exceed $225.

Mr. Mygatt reported back the communication from W. A. Coddington, representing the John S. Harberger estate, regarding a drain at West Front street and Giraud avenue, and moved that the opinion of the corporation counsel that the city is not responsible, be sent to Mr. Coddington.

Assistant Fire Chief A. D. Jennings was granted an additional $25 for doing the clerical work in the fire department, in accordance with a resolution by Mr. Endress. Another resolution by Mr. Endress, and adopted, authorized the purchase of one thousand feet of hose at an expense of $1,050. A question by Mr. Calkins that he supposed the purchase of the hose was upon the recommendation of Fire Chief Doane, brought forth a smile.

The city clerk was authorized to advertise for bids for furnishing the fire and police departments with oats and hay, in accordance with a resolution by Mr. Endress. They will be received April 7.

Mr. Endress presented a recommendation from the fire committee to the effect that an electrical inspector be appointed to look after all electrical work in the city, including the Gamewell fire and police system. This was referred to the committee on laws and ordinances for the purpose of having a suitable ordinance drafted.

Mr. Endress introduced an ordinance, it being a supplement to the building code, being intended to cover the erection and operation of moving picture theatres. It was read once, laid on the table upon motion of Mr. Blatz and copies of the ordinance will be sent to each member of the Council.

Mr. Reville, chairman of the light committee, explained that the Public Service Corporation is to give a demonstration of street lighting on West Second street, Madison and Central avenues, beginning Wednesday night, and he hoped the councilmen would inspect the same. The lights to be used will include carbon arcs and Tungstens.

An ordinance was introduced by Mr. Mygatt, adopted on two readings and ordered advertised, providing for the permanent pavement of certain streets in the east and west end of the city. It is proposed to issue three year bonds in the sum of $24,000, to be dated July 1, 1913, to be sold for not less than par. The ordinance calls for the appointment of commissioners to assess benefits and a public hearing will be granted on the ordinance on Monday night, April 7. The Council adjourned to meet Monday night, March 10, and all sewer matters were continued until that time.

LAST OFFICIAL ACTS OF PRESIDENT TAFT

Washington, March 4.—President Taft's last official act of importance was his veto of the Sundry Civil Bill, which carried about $118,000,000. The veto was based on a provision in the bill appropriating $300,000 for the enforcement of the Sherman anti-Trust law, but which specifically exempted from prosecution all labor organizations and associations of farmers.

The bill was returned to the House, and after a short debate was passed over the veto there by a vote of 256 to 50, after which the House adjourned without day at 12:05 this afternoon.

In the Senate, at 11:52, the hands of the clock were set back to 11:25, and the upper house then received the bill which had just been passed by the House for the second time. In the Senate the bill failed to pass over the veto.

During his last few minutes in office the President signed the rivers and harbors bill, appropriating $100,000,000, and the public buildings bill, which includes an appropriation for the new postoffice in Plainfield, N. J. He also passed the bill creating the new Department of Labor.

The Seaman's protection bill failed because President Taft refused to either sign or veto it.

SOME WASHINGTON CORRESPONDENT, THIS

"MAC" SAYS

Several of Plainfield's ball players who are planning to join minor organizations in the course of the next two weeks have been seen together much of late. They are gettig into shape by taking long jaunts over the mountains in the morning and trying out their arms in the P. H. S. gym every afternoon.

The detachment of Yankees that left New York Saturday morning, of which Jack Martin was a member, arrived at Bermuda yesterday morning at 9 o'clock. The voyage south was a rough one but none of the players are any the worse for their experience today.

Ernest Dorsinger, the genial manager of the Plainfield baseball team, will be the contributing sporting editor for next Saturday. Watch for his article in these columns on baseball.

Much speculation in rife over the third and deciding interscholastic contest and the followers of each team are optimistic as to the final result. The wise ones, however, make the same discount for these rash ideas as they do for fish stories.

Captain Woodhull says that his team will surely show the boroughites up this trip, while Captain Townley, of North Plainfield, does not see how the N. P. H. S. boys can lose. Somebody's hopes will have to be shattered.

Y. M. C. A. Color Leaguers are making great preparations for their banquet scheduled for the 28th of this month. Several famous athletes and good speakers will be among the entertainers.

Physical Director E. C. Ostlin, of the local Y. M. C. A., is still on the trail of that wrestling promoter who invaded Plainfield some weeks ago trying to arrange matches for Gus Peterson, the welterweight champion. Ostlin offered to take the title holder on but nothing has been heard from the manager since. That fellow must have been a lime (a small lemon).

During the absence of James Archibold Thompson, manager, captain, coach and chaperon for the Company K basketball team, the schedule of that aggregation has been indefinitely discontinued. His return is uncertain.

HOCKEY TITLE AT STAKE.

The race for championship honors in the Amateur Hockey League tournament will be settled this week, but not without the elucidation of a very intricate problem in percentages caused by the unusual number of tie games that have characterized the season's play. The St. Nicholas team, which is third in the race, will play the Irish-American A. C. tonight at the St. Nicholas Rink. A victory will place them in close proximity to the Hockey Club, which has yet one regularly scheduled game with the Crescents to be played on Friday night and a tie game with the Irish-Americans yet to be decided. The Crescents are now in the lead, but a victory for the Hockey Club players on Friday night will put them in first place.

SOPHS STILL IN IT.

When the Freshmen class team defeated the Seniors in their third meeting of the P. H. S. interclass schedule yesterday afternoon, the sophomores were one the side-lines rejoicing. If the 1915 men defeat the graduating class Friday afternoon they will be tied for first place in the league and a playoff will be necessary. The Sophs have been greatly strengthened by the return of Dealaman, who has been on the ineligible list for the past month.

ANOTHER WIN FOR N. P. H. S. STRING

Boroughites Score a Creditable Victory When They Wallop Collegians.

Rutgers College Freshmen basketball players, champions of the college interclass league, were forced to swallow a bitter dose of defeat at Saengerbund Hall last night when they bowed to the North Plainfield High School team by a count of 46 to 33. The game was a fast and rough one, featured by many fouls, partially due to the collegians unfamiliarity with school boy rules.

Love, playing in the place of Taylor, put up a sterling game, and it was his basket shooting that kept the boroughites in the lead throughout the entire contest. The first half ended with the score 24 to 14 but the collegians picked themselves up in the final period and put up an excellent guarding game and came near tying the score at one time.

A LATE START.

A number of girls interested in basketball from North Plainfield, Plainfield, Scotch Plains and Westfield have banded together to form an All-Star aggregation to defeat the Nonpareil girls' team of this city. It is understood that several former Plainfield, Westfield and North Plainfield High School stars are enrolled and they have been holding regular practises on the Scotch Plains court. The game, which will determine the local and suburban title, will probably be staged on the Saengerbund Hall court this Friday night.

TRAVIS LEADS AT GOLF.

Pinehurst, N. C., March 4.—Two hundred and twenty players participated in the opening rounds here yesterday of the ninth annual spring golf tournament. Walter J. Travis led the field with a card of 76. B. Warren Corkran, Baltimore, was second with 78. Among the leaders yesterday were William C. Fownes, Jr., Pittsburgh, former national champion, and Parker W. Whittemore, Brookline, former Massachusetts champion.

P. H. S. AT SAENGERBUND.

In preparation for their third and deciding game of the interscholastic league series with N. P. H. S., the Plainfield High School team was accorded the use of the Saengerbund Hall for practise this afternoon. Coach Wriston had a full squad of candidates out and it is thought that the one afternoon given them to familiarize themselves with the borough court will make a big difference in the final game.

RIVAL FRESHIES MEET.

On the Saengerbund Hall court tomorrow afternoon, the Plainfield High School and North Plainfield High School Freshmen class basketball teams will meet for the first time this season. The N. P. H. S. and P. H. S. sophomores recently met on the court and the game resulted in a win for the local boys.

COLOR LEAGUE PROGRAM.

Athletic competition is on the schedule for Y. M. C. A. Color Leaguers tonight and Physical Director Ostlin is desirous of having a big representation out as the league is drawing to a close and the final standings will be very much effected by the last few events. The Color League banquet comes on Friday night, March 28, and at that time the cup for the highest point score will be awarded to the winning team.

REAL OBJECT OF BASEBALL UNION

Aim of Players' Fraternity Is to Increase Salaries.

WILL DEMAND IT LATER.

Men Haven't Asked For Representation on National Commission or More Pay, but Will In All Probability, May Precipitate Another War.

By TOMMY CLARK.

More money—that in brief is the explanation of the Baseball Players' fraternity, the organization which is supposed to be seeking an uplift in the profession.

Such moves are recurrent in baseball. About once in every baseball generation, if the financial condition of the game seems to warrant it, the players come forward with demands for reforms, chief among which has always been the request for a larger proportion of the emoluments of baseball.

But once, in 1890, did the players endeavor to enforce their demands by actually going on strike, but that is all that differentiates the Brotherhood revolt from the Union association movement of 1884 and the Players' Protective association of 1900.

The first of these movements, the Union association of 1884, though frankly capitalistic in its organization, nevertheless owed a portion of its ephemeral success to its espousal of the cause of the "downtrodden" players.

The Brotherhood movement six years later was the most serious attempt on the part of the players to control the financial end of baseball yet made. Prior to the revolt the organization had been limited altogether to players under contract to National league clubs.

When the men went out they took with them many of the stars of the American association. But they failed in their effort to control baseball mainly because they failed to make the league pay and, with their backers, consequently lost heart.

The Players' Protective association, formed ten years later, never amounted to much. Coinciding, as its organization did, with the war between the National and American leagues, the players of that day lost sight completely of mutual aid or anything else in the mad scramble after fat contracts.

The present organization asks openly for the better protection of the players while on the field. There can be no objection to that. They have not as yet demanded representation on the national commission, as it was announced they would when the association first took definite shape last September, but this demand may be forthcoming later.

They have not made many financial demands thus far, but that this feature was uppermost in the minds of many who have subscribed to the organization was shown last summer, when in discussing the matter the players said that a demand for half pay on training trips would be asked in 1913. No mention whatever of demands as to salary increase was made, except by some of the Detroit players while on strike last May.

At that time several of the striking players said that "the magnates are getting it all, anyway, while we are getting nothing." That the other players on the Detroit club would have struck for the sake of either Cobb or the principle involved in the attack made by that player upon a spectator in New York is quite unlikely. They sought rather to terrorize the magnates into giving them something and failed utterly because of insufficient organization.

Should any attempt be made to strike at the present time such movement would necessarily result in failure. Organized baseball is far more strongly fortified today than it was in 1890, when the unsuccessful Brotherhood revolt occurred. But it is not likely that players in the light of past experiences and with so wise a head as David Fultz leading the association will attempt any movement of this sort, at least until they have extended their organization to at least as low as Class B.

Then, if a considerable percentage of their members do not succumb to tempting offers sure to be made by the magnates of the two big leagues in event of a strike, they can go out with some reasonable prospects of success. A strike under existing conditions would be almost necessarily fatal.

CUBS HAVE BEST CATCHERS.

With Archer and Bresnahan Team Will Rank First Behind Bat.

In adding Roger Bresnahan to his catching staff Owner Murphy of the Chicago Cubs has now arranged the greatest catching staff in the country and probably the strongest in the history of baseball.

Jimmy Archer is regarded as the game's greatest catcher today, and Bresnahan is one of the few close behind the wonderful Cub. Between these two Manager Evers will always have a great catcher on duty and to a certain extent offset in this way the loss of Chance, Tinker and Brown.

It is understood that Bresnahan and Archer will catch alternately, working an equal number of contests throughout the year.

DEVELOP JAVELIN THROWERS.

America Should Try to Make This Branch of Sport More Popular.

A subject that is worthy of the attention of athletic officials throughout the United States is the development of javelin throwers in this country who will be able to at least make a respectable showing against the men of northern Europe at future Olympiads.

There is only one reason why America doesn't get her share of the javelin prizes, and that is because we don't pay any attention to that sport. In Sweden, in Norway and in Finland a javelin champion is the biggest of all athletes. Erick Lemming, the Swedish police clerk who has won the "best hand" javelin throw at three Olympiads, is a national hero.

Baseball Season Opens April 10.

Pennant campaigning in the two major circuits will be started again on April 10 in 1913 and close Oct. 4 in the east and Oct. 5 in the west. American league dates will be drafted Jan. 2 at a session at French Lick Springs. National league schedules will be drawn up in New York, Feb. 11.

CHANCE WOULD NOT TAKE WILSON AS GIFT.

Big Chief Wilson, the Pittsburgh Pirates' outfielder, is a great ball player, but Frank Chance said last year that he wouldn't take him as a gift. It seems that one day Chance was spiked, and as he was removing his shoe Wilson passed him with the remark:

"I hope you are not hurt!"

Chance looked up in surprise and frowned.

"Wilson isn't the kind of man I want," remarked Chance to the Cubs when he reached the bench. "He should have said, 'I hope you lose your leg the next time!'"

GEERS' GREAT DRIVING.

Veteran Harness Reinsman Has Placed Twenty-seven Trotters In 2:10 List.

Battered and bruised and twisted out of shape by numerous accidents on race tracks and with advanced age creeping over him, Edward F. Geers still may well be referred to as the dean of the light harness turf. Half the injuries that Geers has had with horses would intimidate hundreds of men, but it does not seem to bother the lovable old driver from Memphis. No hole is too small for him to drive through so long as there is room for a sulky to pass, and the thick of the fray is where Geers can generally be found unless he is too far ahead for the others to catch him.

Geers has a mode of driving races that is quite as generally talked about as is his pleasing personality. "Here comes Geers; here comes Geers," is an expression that has oft been repeated on race tracks and is generally heard as the horses pass the seven-eighths pole. There is where the veteran makes his drives. He keeps his horse well to the front in a race if possible, but he does not forge out in front until near the end of the race. By so doing he does not overtax his horse, but leaves plenty of reserve strength for the brush to the wire. Year after year Geers has campaigned on the grand circuit, and by his great finishes he has won the plaudits of the crowds and has won lifelong popularity by his clever driving.

There is nothing a driver feels more proud of than to have a number of horses in the 2:10 list—that is, with records of 2:10 or better. Up to five or six years ago the ten list was a mere skeleton, as it was a rarity for a trotter or pacer to take a record so fast. Since then, however, greater speed has been developed, and horsemen are now shooting at the 2:05 mark, for that is the goal a horse must reach to become a star. Today the 2:10 list is a lengthy affair, and it is growing even faster than the sixth city.

Ed Geers leads all other trainers in marking trotters in 2:10 or better. He added five to the list in 1912, which gives him twenty-seven all told. Several other trainers are rather close to this mark, but the palm belongs to Geers.

FRESHMAN TEAM WON BASKETBALL TITLE

By Virtue of Their Defeat Over Juniors They Will be Awarded the Medals.

In scoring a 48 to 28 victory over the Junior class team on Saengerbund Hall, yesterday afternoon, the N. P. H. N. P. H. S. BASEBALL CALL.

Frank Dunning, captain of the North Plainfield High School baseball team, has issued the first call for outdoor practise and had a full squad of candidates out for a tryout today. Dunning is greatly encouraged at the showing made by the large turnout and says that N. P. H. S. will have another champion nine this year.

WOODROW WILSON GIVES HIS VIEWS IN INTERESTING BOOK

He Discusses Tariff, Trusts and Welfare of American People.

Copyright, 1912, by Doubleday, Page & Co.

[The publication of a new book by Woodrow Wilson constituted the chief political event of the spring, second only to inauguration. This book, "The New Freedom," is just off the press. Following are brief extracts from the advance proofs.]

THE tariff question is not the question that it was fifteen or twenty or thirty years ago. It used to be said by the advocates of the tariff that it made no difference even if there were a great wall separating us from the commerce of the world, because inside the United States there was so enormous an area of absolute free trade that competition within the country kept prices down to a normal level; that so long as one state could compete with all the others in the United States, and all the others compete with it, there would be only that kind of advantage gained which is gained by superior brain, superior economy, the better plant, the better administration; all of the things that have made America supreme and kept prices in America down, because American genius was competing with American genius. I must add that so long as that was true there was much to be said in defense of the protective tariff.

But the point now is that the protective tariff has been taken advantage of by some men to destroy domestic competition, to combine all existing rivals within our free trade area and to make it impossible for new men to come into the field. Under the high tariff there has been formed a network of factories which in their connection dominate the market of the United States and establish their own prices; whereas, therefore, it was once arguable that the high tariff did not create the high cost of living, it is now no longer arguable that these combinations do not—not by reason of the tariff, but by reason of their combination under the tariff—settle what prices shall be paid, settle how much the product shall be and settle, moreover, what shall be the market for labor.

The "protective" policy, as we hear it proclaimed today, bears no relation to the original doctrine enunciated by Webster and Clay. The "infant industries," which those statesmen desired to encourage, have grown up and grown gray, but they have always had new arguments for special favors. Their demands have gone far beyond what they dared ask for in the days of Mr. Blaine and Mr. McKinley, though both those apostles of protection were before they died ready to confess that the time had even then come to call a halt on the claims of the subsidized industries. William McKinley before he died showed symptoms of adjustment to the new age such as his successors have not exhibited. You remember what the utterances of Mr. McKinley's last month were with regard to the policy with which his name is particularly identified. I mean the policy of protection. You remember how he joined in opinion with what Mr. Blaine before him had said—namely, that we had devoted the country to a policy which, too rigidly persisted in, was proving a policy of restriction and that we must look forward to a time that ought to come very soon when we should enter into reciprocal relations of trade with all the countries of the world.

Proved to Be Straitjacket.

This was another way of saying that we must substitute elasticity for rigidity; that we must substitute trade for closed ports. McKinley saw what his successors did not see. He saw that we had made for ourselves a straitjacket.

When I reflect upon the protective policy of this country and observe that it is the later aspects and the later uses of that policy which have built up trusts and monopoly in the United States, I make this contrast in my thought—Mr. McKinley had already uttered his protest against what he foresaw. His successor saw what McKinley had only foreseen, but he took no action. His successor saw those very special privileges, which Mr. McKinley himself began to suspect, used by the men who had obtained them to build up a monopoly for themselves, making freedom of enterprise in this country more and more difficult. I am one of those who have the utmost confidence that Mr. McKinley would not have sanctioned the later developments of the policy with which his name stands identified.

What is the present tariff policy of the protectionists? It is not the ancient protective policy to which I would give all due credit, but an entirely new doctrine. I ask anybody who is interested in the history of high protective tariffs to compare the latest platforms of the two protective tariff parties with the old doctrine. Men have been struck, students of this matter, by an entirely new departure. The new doctrine of the protectionist is that the tariff should represent the difference between the cost of production in America and the cost of production in other countries, plus a reasonable profit to those who are engaged in industry. This is the new part of the protective doctrine "plus a reasonable profit." It openly guarantees profit to the men who come and ask favors of congress. The old idea of a protective tariff was designed to keep American industries alive and therefore keep American labor employed. But the favors of protection have become so permanent that this is what has happened: Men, seeing that they need not fear foreign competition, have drawn together in great combinations. These combinations include factories (if it is a combination of factories) of all grades, old factories and new factories, factories with antiquated machinery and factories with brand new machinery; factories that are economically and factories that are not economically administered; factories that have been long in the family, which have been allowed to run down, and factories with all the new modern inventions. As soon as the combination is effected the less efficient factories are generally put out of operation. But the stock issued in payment for them has to pay dividends, and the United States government guarantees profit on investment in factories that have gone out of business. As soon as these combinations see prices falling they reduce the hours of labor, they reduce production, they reduce wages, they throw men out of employment—in order to do what? In order to keep the prices up in spite of their lack of efficiency.

Tariff Raises Prices.

There may have been a time when the tariff did not raise prices, but that time is past. The tariff is now taken advantage of by the great combinations in such a way as to give them control of prices. These things do not happen by chance. It does not happen by chance that prices are and have been rising faster here than in any other country. That river that divides us from Canada divides us from much cheaper living, notwithstanding that the Canadian parliament levies duties on importations.

Did you ever look into the way a trust was made? It is very natural, in one sense—in the same sense in which human greed is natural. If I haven't efficiency enough to beat my rivals then the thing I am inclined to do is to get together with my rivals and say: "Don't let's cut each other's throats. Let's combine and determine prices for ourselves—determine the output and thereby determine the prices and dominate and control the market." That is very natural. That has been done ever since freebooting was established. That has been done ever since power was used to establish control. The reason that the masters of combination have sought to shut out competition is that the basis of control under competition is brains and efficiency. I admit that any large corporation built up by the legitimate processes of business, by economy, by efficiency, is natural, and, I am not afraid of it, no matter how big it grows. It can stay big only by doing its work more thoroughly than anybody else. And there is a point of bigness—as every business man in this country knows, though some of them will not admit it—where you pass the limit of efficiency and get into the region of clumsiness and unwieldiness. You can make your combine so extensive that you can't digest it into a single system. You can get so many parts that you can't assemble them as you would an effective piece of machinery. The point of efficiency is overstepped in the natural process of development oftentimes, and it has been overstepped many times in the artificial and deliberate formation of trusts.

A trust is formed in this way: A few gentlemen "promote" it—that is to say, they get it up, being given enormous fees for their kindness, which fees are loaded on to the undertaking in the form of securities of one kind or another. The argument of the promoters is not that every one who comes into the combination can carry on his business more efficiently than he did before; the argument is: We will assign to you as your share in the pool twice, three times, four times or five times what you could have sold your business for to an individual competitor who would have to run it on an economic and competitive basis. We can afford to buy it at such a figure because we are shutting out competition. We can afford to make the stock of the combination half a dozen times what it naturally would be and pay dividends on it, because there will be nobody to dispute the prices we shall fix.

How Trusts Prosper.

Talk of that as sound business? Talk of that as inevitable? It is based upon nothing except power. It is not based upon efficiency. It is no wonder that the big trusts are not prospering in proportion to such competitors as they still have in such parts of their business as competitors have access to; they are prospering freely only in those fields to which competition has no access. Read the statistics of the steel trust if you don't believe it. Read the statistics of any trust. They are constantly nervous about competition and they are constantly buying up new competitors in order to narrow the field. The United States Steel corporation is gaining in its supremacy in the American market only with regard to the cruder manufactures of iron and steel, but wherever, as in the field of more advanced manufactures of iron and steel, it has important competitors, its portion of the product is not increasing, but is decreasing, and its competitors, where they have a foothold, are often more efficient than it is.

Why? Why, with unlimited capital and innumerable mines and plants everywhere in the United States can't they beat the other fellows in the market? Partly because they are carrying too much; partly because they are unwieldy. Their organization is imperfect. They bought up inefficient plants along with efficient, and they have got to carry what they have paid for, even if they have to shut some of the plants up in order to make any interest on their investments, or, rather, not interest on their investments, because that is an incorrect word—on their alleged capitalization. Here we have a lot of giants staggering along under an almost intolerable weight of artificial burdens, which they have put on their own backs, and constantly looking about lest some little pygmy with a round stone in a sling may come out and slay them.

For my part I want the pygmy to have a chance to come out. And I foresee a time when the pygmies will be so much more athletic, so much more astute, so much more active, than the giants that it will be a case of Jack the Giant Killer. Just let some of the youngsters I know have a chance and they'll give these gentlemen points. Lend them a little money. They can't get any now. See to it that when they have got a local market they can't be squeezed out of it. Give them a chance to capture that market and then see them capture another one and another one until these men who are carrying an intolerable load of artificial securities find that they have got to get down to hard pan to keep their foothold at all. I am willing to let Jack come into the field with the giant, and if Jack has the brains that some Jacks that I know in America have then I should like to see the giant get the better of him with the load that he (the giant) has to carry—the load of water—for I'll undertake to put a water logged giant out of business any time if you will give me a fair field and as much credit as I am entitled to and let the law do what from time immemorial law has been expected to do—see fair play.

Capitalizing Control.

As for watered stock, I know all the sophistical arguments, and they are many, for capitalizing earning capacity. It is a very attractive and interesting argument, and in some instances it is legitimately used. But there is a line you cross, above which you are not capitalizing your earning capacity, but capitalizing your control of the market, capitalizing the profits which you got by your control of the market, and didn't get by efficiency and economy. These things are not hidden even from the layman. These are not half hidden from college men. The college men's days of innocence have passed, and their days of sophistication have come. They know what is going on, because we live in a talkative world, full of statistics, full of congressional inquiries, full of trials of persons who have attempted to live independently of the statutes of the United States, and so a great many things have come to light under oath, which we must believe upon the credibility of the witnesses who are, indeed, in many instances very eminent and respectable witnesses.

I take my stand absolutely where every progressive ought to take his stand, on the proposition that private monopoly is indefensible and intolerable. And there I will fight my battle.

You will notice from a recent investigation that things like this take place: A certain bank invests in certain securities. It appears from evidence that the handling of these securities was very intimately connected with the maintenance of the price of a particular commodity. Nobody ought to and, in normal circumstances, nobody would for a moment think of suspecting managers of a great bank of making such an investment in order to help those who were conducting a particular business in the United States maintain the price of their commodity, but the circumstances are not normal. It is beginning to be believed that in the big business of this country nothing is disconnected from anything else.

W. J. BRYAN PRAISES BOOK.

Those who would calculate with accuracy the course of the ship of state under the pilot who takes his place at the wheel on March 4 can find in "The New Freedom" a chart of the seas to be traversed during the next four years. Progressives will welcome the book as renewed evidence of the author's consecration to the great task of popularizing the government and putting the people in the control of the instrumentalities of that government. Those who have from lack of information viewed with alarm the changes that are taking place will be instructed and, to a large extent, relieved of their fears by the definitions given and the distinctions drawn by Governor Wilson.—William Jennings Bryan.

RANGES AND HEATERS

Our entire stock of Ranges and Heaters was on the ground floor in our warehouse at the time of the fire. Some were water damaged and have since rusted; a good blacking will make them look like new. Others were untouched, but the insurance companies have paid for them, and, as in all cases, the savings will be passed on to you.

GO-CARTS

Many of the Go-Carts and Carriages were slightly damaged by water; others are as good as when they left the factory. We are going to sell them at a saving to you of 75c on every dollar.

REFRIGERATORS

Not a single Refrigerator was damaged on the inside—the part that counts. A few were water spotted, but the majority are as good as when they left the factory. There are dozens of styles to select from; some have galvanized linings, others are enameled—but all go at about the prices of the unfinished wood.

RUGS

Some of the rugs are smoke damaged; others were simply water soaked, while still others are brand-new, all are to go at less than the cost of raw material.

There is no backdown, no running to cover with a few underpriced offerings. The bargain flame burns brighter than on the preceding days of this sale, when record-breaking crowds set a new standard for furniture selling. The gigantic stocks that were packed in the FIVE spacious floors of our mammoth warehouse are rapidly finding their way into the homes of the people at prices that stagger belief. The prevailing price reductions, astounding as they are, are only to be appreciated when you see the excellent condition of the goods offered. While the fire raged on the upper floor and tons of water were poured into the building, the wrappings of the goods were so secure as to protect them from any material damage. These are the goods the insurance companies paid for as a total loss. These are the goods that for all practical purposes are as good as new. Yet it is your good fortune to BUY NOW AT a fraction of their worth.

"ALL IN" BUT GAME TO THE END, SUFFRAGISTS FINISH LONG WALK

HIKERS MARCHING UP PENNSYLVANIA AVENUE

Footsore, weary, nervous, "all in," but with spirits as high as ever, "General" Jones' suffragist hikers finished their 258 mile walk from New York and marched into Washington full of enthusiasm for the cause.

Marching through streets tightly packed with curious persons, they invaded the city. All wore the pilgrim garb.

"General" Jones carried a pilgrim's staff and a great bunch of roses. She was followed by her aide, Colonel Craft, who carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley.

Just after passing the Capitol "General" Jones announced that their march up historic Pennsylvania avenue would be as prearranged. The hikers marched abreast. The "war correspondents"—newspaper men—acted as flank guards. A score of policemen marched in front.

COLORED RESIDENTS WANT SCHOOL'S USE

They Ask Education Board for Washington Auditorium for Friday Nights.

Among the several matters discussed by the Plainfield Board of Education, last night, was that in reference to the Legislative bill providing that the city treasurer shall be the custodian of school funds and shall be paid by the Board of Education, instead of by the city. In case this bill becomes a law the local Board would have to make some provision in its budget for the payment of the salary of the custodian of school funds. The Board decided to take the matter up with the Common Council.

The colored people attending night school at the Washington School asked for permission to use the auditorium Friday nights for the same purpose that the white people do on Saturday nights, and the petition was referred to the teachers' committee. The popularity of the night school is increasing to such an extent that the Bryant-Lincoln Parent-Teacher Association requested that the sessions be extended through March. This was granted with the understanding that the pupils pay for the maintenance of the teachers.

Permission was given the Stevens Dramatic Club, through its manager, Howard Runyon, to give a concert at the High School, Friday night, March 23. Dr. A. F. VanHorn, school physician, requested the Board to appoint a member to confer with the Board of Health for the purpose of agreeing on the length of time for keeping children out of school who have been ill with chicken-pox, mumps and measles. Dr. VanHorn was authorized to take the matter up with the Board of Health at his own pleasure.

The Board's attention was called to the recent fire in the West Orange High School, and President Tyler suggested the appointment of a member to visit the school with a view to getting information that would prevent such a mishap in this city.

MRS. TIER'S PARTY.

Mrs. William N. Tier, of Bank place, entertained a company of friends at her home, last night, in honor of her sister, Mrs. John Felter, of Nyack, N. Y., who is visiting here. "Five Hundred" was the feauture, there being seven tables. Mrs. Allan Coddington and Mrs. Arthur McVoy won the women's prize, and Mrs. Elizabeth Woodard, taking the place of a man, and Dr. A. K. Brennan received men's prize. Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gow were presented with the booby prizes. Music, dancing and refreshments followed.

Howard W. Boise, of Brooklyn, N. Y., a stationery manufacturer, has purchased the business of the Lenox Manufacturing Company, which conducts a wholesale and retail stationery store at 12 Madison avenue.

Miss Myrtle Fedderman, of this city, has returned from an extended western trip. On her way home she visited Miss Margaret Bradshaw, of Ann Arbor, Mich., the former physical director, who is much improved in health.

AN INSOLENT WRITER.

He Found He Couldn't Dictate to a Typical John Bull.

That sprouting Scotch peer, the Earl of Levon, who rebuked a ship news reporter who approached him by declaring that "no gentleman ever speaks to another without an introduction; it simply isn't done," is an old friend of James Francis Dwyer, the Australian novelist—that is, Dwyer doesn't actually know the Earl of Levon, but he knows his sweetly British sort.

"I ought to," said Dwyer. "I was broke in London and I learned to know the true Briton. Once I answered an advertisement for a literary secretary. To make certain that my letter would be read I wired the advertiser as follows:

"'Do not engage a literary secretary until you have read my letter of application.'

"That letter was a gem. I thought I would land the place with it sure. I was certain of it when a large, square letter directed me to appear at a named address at a given hour. It was a four penny bus ride, but I didn't care. My fortune was opening out before me. I squandered the fourpence without a miserly thought. A pompous butler ushered me into a black oak library, where the original stuffed model of John Bull sat at a table. I sat down meekly and waited to be spoken to.

"'You cannot dictate to an Englishman,' said this old image.

"'No, sir,' I said.

"'I tell you,' he shouted, 'you cannot dictate to an Englishman!'

"'Certainly not,' I said.

"'But you tried to,' he said. 'You sent me this impertinent telegram. No Englishman would have done that. It was an American trick.'

"I tried to soothe him, for I wanted that job. But he got hotter and hotter. Finally he told me outright that he had hired a young man who once had worked for a lord.

"'I have sent for you,' said he, 'and you should be grateful to me in order to teach you a proper respect for the traditions of England and for the British flag.'

"'You old fossil,' said I, 'if I had a British flag here I'd tear it in two and choke you to death with it.'"—Chicago News.

"COOKING A PILL."

That Is What Opium Smokers Call "Hitting the Pipe."

The opium smoker in the act of smoking is said to be "cooking a pill." Smokers of tobacco in seeing opium pipes have been misled into the belief that the large bowl of the pipe is filled with opium when really the "pill" is simply pasted over a tiny opening in the cover of the bowl. Heating of the bowl produces dense fumes, which are drawn through the bowl and the stem of the pipe into the smoker's mouth.

Neither does one pipe of opium produce stupor. A "pill" makes only even an inexperienced smoker as a large drink would effect a person unused to alcohol. The opium users who have been pictured stretched on bunks of opium dens in utter stupor have been saturated with the drug.

Reclining on a bed, the smoker places the layout within easy reach and lights the lamp. Peanut oil, burning slowly and without evil odors or fumes, is used exclusively. The smoker is then ready to prepare his "pill."

The yen-hok, or dipper, a long, needle shaped instrument, is put into the opium receptacle and turned slowly in the black and sticky substance until a small quantity of opium adheres to the point. It is then placed over the flame of the lamp, and, turning the dipper, the smoker rolls and cooks the "pill" until it is ready for the pipe.

The tiny speck is then thrust into the opening of the bowl, which, held above the lamp, slowly begins to produce opium fumes, which are drawn in by the smoker through the stem of his pipe. The "pill" lasts only from thirty to forty seconds, and to enjoy another smoke the same preparations have to be repeated.—New York Tribune.

Humiliated Hubby.

A newly married couple had had a little disagreement about some cakes which the wife had made. The husband complained that those his mother used to produce were far superior. On the next day the girl set before him a plate of hot cakes.

"Now you have achieved something!" he exclaimed enthusiastically. "These are exactly like what mother used to make. How did you do it?"

"I will give you the recipe," replied the wife coldly. "I used margarine instead of butter, eggs a year old, I put alum in the flour and added plenty of water to the milk."—London Tit-Bits.

He Didn't Know Art.

"Where did you get that marble statuette, my dear?"

"Why, at Martino's. Isn't it lovely? And such a bargain! It was marked 'half off.' Didn't you see the tag?"

"Yes, but I thought the tag referred to the clothing."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Unsophisticated.

"Darling," said the fond youth, producing a ring, "which is the right finger?"

"For goodness' sake, Jiggy!" responded the maiden. "Don't you know? Nineteen years old and never been engaged to a girl before!"—Chicago Tribune.

Easy.

A CURIOUS COURT

It Is Held Annually When France Pays Tribute to Spain.

PRICE OF AN ANCIENT PEACE.

After More Than Five Centuries Three Calves Are Still Humbly Presented Each Year to the Haughty Descendants of the Victorious Spaniards.

Every year there takes place in the Pyrenean highlands a remarkable fete. It is held at the boundary stone of San Martin, which separates the French valley Bareton from the Spanish valley of Roncal. Every year the representatives of the French peasants assemble there in order to pay the Spaniards a tribute, which consists of three calves of the same age and the same color, and the delivery of the calves is accompanied by ceremonies which sufficiently indicate that the old inhabitants of the Roncal valley were once victorious over their neighbors.

At 9 o'clock in the morning the mayors of the various villages in the Bareton valley, bravely adorned with their blue, white and red scarfs of office, march up to the boundary stone. In front of the column walks a lad, with a pike, from the point of which flutters a little white pennon as a gage of peace. The three calves are dragged in the rear of the procession at the end of long ropes. Calves and scarfs take up their position by the stone and await the arrival of the Spaniards.

They are soon visible in the distance. In front walks a man clad in sheepskins, who waves a red pennon at the end of a pike as a sign of war. Behind him walks the alcalde of Isaba, the principal village in the valley of Roncal, and following him come the alcaldes of the other villages, their staffs of office in their hands. The bulk of the procession consists of shepherds, stern looking fellows armed with old sabers and matchlocks.

The alcalde of Isaba is all glorious to behold in a long black garment fastened by gold buttons, a tall white ruff, tight fitting knee breeches, red silk stockings and buckled shoes. A sombrero covers his head, and in his hands he holds the staff adorned with silver knobs, the emblem in Spain of magisterial dignity.

As soon as the Spaniards reach the rendezvous the alcalde of Isaba steps to the front and addresses them in solemn ceremonial style:

"Are you come to pay tribute and swear friendship according to old custom and tradition?"

"That is the reason of our coming," answer the French.

Then the two standard bearers approach the boundary stone and lay their pikes crosswise upon it. After a few moments the Spaniard takes his up again, sticks it into French soil and then places it as before on the stone. On the cross formed by the two shafts the representatives of the two valleys swear to keep the peace with loyal mind.

Then follows the delivery of the three calves to the Spaniards. They are examined by a veterinary surgeon an accepted, after which all present take up their stations under a shady oak and, following the example of the good St. Louis of France and Alfonso the Wise of Spain, the alcalde of Isaba enthrones himself among the gnarled roots of the oak and proceeds to act as a magistrate.

Shepherds and neatherds pass before him and prefer their international complaints. The judge listens to both sides, bids them bring forward their witnesses and delivers judgment without delay, inflicting a fine on one, awarding compensation to another, punishing one and affording satisfaction to his victim.

After all the quarrels are settled the alcalde undertakes the appointment of the pasture guardians for both valleys, so that he enjoys even greater authority in the township of Bareton than the president of the republic himself. Finally, they all betake themselves to Spanish soil, where a Homeric feast is set out, and till late in the night the banquet goes on, the descendants of the old warlike mountain peoples drinking together in brotherly unity in commemoration of the conclusion of the peace of 1375 and the installation of the above ceremonies.

About 300 years after this treaty had been made the French began to refuse to pay the tribute, but after some negotiations they consented to continue it. In more modern times they tried to get the tribute commuted to a sum of money, but the Spaniards declined, but agreed to forego the firing of guns in the direction of France as being a wound to French amour propre.—London Spectator.

LOCAL MEN MAY BUILD ARMORY

Scheme to Erect Home for Co. K and to Derive Revenue by Leasing.

QUARTERS INADEQUATE

Plan Being Considered is to Form a Stock Company and to Obtain a Site in the Central Part of the Town.

Through an interest aroused by members of Company K, several business men are considering a plan to form a stock company to build an armory suitable for the use of the local citizen-soldiers. That the organization needs an armory is conceded, and the fact that it is about the only one in the State without such a building has stirred the soldier boys to action. The officers of the National Guard have promised to lend their support to Company K in so far as possible.

The scheme of the local business men is to sell stock and form a company. If such a building is erected it would not only afford ample accommodations for Company K, but could also be used for other affairs of a public character, particularly local celebrations. As yet no thought has been given to a possible site, although one in the centre of the city would be desired.

The hall now used by Company K for its meetings and drills is entirely inadequate for the purpose and the men cannot do their best work. They have been hampered considerably with their drill work for lack of room. In fact the hall is not large enough to accommodate a full company drilling under the new army rules. Another bad feature in the present accommodations is that there is no place for the men to keep their uniforms; no heat in the building, except that furnished by gas heaters and no place to store the company's equipment.

CHOOSE WHICH ONE YOU WOULD PREFER

Robert Mantell, the great American tragedian, will appear at the Plainfield theatre on Monday afternoon and night, March 17, and the readers of the Plainfield Daily Press are asked to decide as to what production the Plainfield theatre-going public would prefer to have presented.

Mr. Mantell's repertoire includes The Merchant of Venice, King Lear, Macbeth, Hamlet and Richelieu. He is equally strong in each and is supported by a splendid cast.

Which of these great plays would you prefer to see reproduced by artists of the very highest class?

Name your choice in a letter or postal card directed to the Editors of the Plainfield Daily Press on or before Saturday, March 8. This is a referendum in which all local theatre-goers may cast a vote. The selection will be announced in the Daily Press on Monday, March 10. Shall it be Hamlet, or what shall it be? It is up to you.

When James McNee, of 303 Madison avenue, unexpectedly came home from business yesterday he found William Galloway, 44 years old, of North Plainfield, in his home. Galloway was ordered from the house and upon refusing to go a fight ensued during which McNee made good use of a stove poker. The fray was stopped when a patrolman, summoned by an excited neighbor, placed both under arrest.

Appearing before City Judge DeMeza this morning on charges of disorderly conduct, Galloway was fined $5 and told to keep away from other men's homes in their absence and McNee had the charge against him dismissed. He was complimented for protecting his home.

ASK ADJOURNMENT IN THE HOOD CASE

Hearing in Husband's Action to Recover $50,000 in Personalty on March 18.

Upon the request of McCarter & English, representing Mrs. Frances Sparks Hood, the hearing in the action brought by Richard Haden Hood, huband of the defendant, to recover his personal goods in the Stelle avenue mansion, was adjourned by Chancellor E. R. Walker, yesterday, to Tuesday, March 18, at Newark. The adjournment was granted for the reason that defendant's counsel desired more time in which to prepare an answer to the bill filed by Mr. Hood. The latter is represented by Chauncey G. Parker, of Newark.

Mr. Hood claims that the personal goods in the Stelle avenue house, upon which he places a value of $50,000, belong to him, and he is seeking to get possession. The order of the court restraining Mrs. Hood from making any disposition of the goods pending a settlement of the suit, was continued.

CANDIDATES CHOSEN FOR ORACLE BOARD ELECTION

Five Plainfield High School pupils were nominated this morning by Principal Lindsey Best for the position of business manager on the High ESchool Oracle board which publishes the monthly edition of the High School paper. Those who will be voted upon at the assembly exercises Friday morning are Morris L. Mann, 1915; Cortlandt, 1914; Phillip Schuyler, 1914; Bradford Willard, 1914, and Guy Snyder, 1914.

All of the candidates with the exception of Mann are members of the junior class and Mann is the only one who has been on the board before. As a rule the assistant manager is the one to get the most important position, that of business manager, and it is conceded that Mann will be elected as he is serving in the capacity at the present time. He has been efficient as assistant for the past year and has been a member of the board since his freshman year, this being the first case in the history of the board that a first year man was elected to serve as assistant to the business manager. Election will be held in the High School auditorium Friday morning at the assembly exercises and a two-thirds vote of the school is necessary for election of any one candidate.

MISS MILLER SCORES IN WAGNER RECITAL

Miss Hope Irene Miller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson A. Miller, of Washington avenue, who is visiting friends through the upper part of New York State, assisted in the fine presentation of a Wagner program last week by the Thursday Morning Musicales at the Park church, Elmira, N. Y., in which she received the highest praise for her singing of difficult numbers. Fritz Jacobi, basso, and his wife, Mrs. Jacobi, violin, both of whom formerly lived here, also took part in the program.

Miss Miller sang "Studie-zu-Tristanund - Isolde," "Schlaf-holdes Kind;" "Elizabeth's Prayer," "Tannhauser, and "Allmacht'ge Jungfrau," Tannhauser. The Elmira Gazette in speaking of the affair said: "Miss Miller has a sweet contralto voice, true and of wide range. She interpreted her numbers well and her German enunciation was very good. The club is indebted to her for an appreciated pleasure." Miss Miller is the contralto soloist at Trinity Reformed church, this city, where her work has received favorable comment. At present she is visiting at Buffalo.

T. S. SHARRETTS TO MAKE A FIGHT

Plainfielder Removed From Office by President Taft Defends His Course.

GIVES OUT STATEMENT

Ousted for Malfeasance in Office, He Says the Evidence Was Only Documentary and That He Was Perfectly Justified.

Thaddeus S. Sharretts, of this city, a member of the Board of United States General Appraisers in New York, who was removed from office on Monday by President Taft for alleged malfeasance in office following the filing of a report by the special commission appointed by the President, will make a vigorous fight for reinstatement under the Wilson administration.

Mr. Sharretts gave out a statement yesterday justifying his course while a member of the board. He said:

"I was informed that there was no oral testimony against me, only documentary. This documentary evidence consisted of a letter I had written to Dr. Butler, the local Appraiser at Baltimore, asking that his influence be used to have the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad stop a Chicago express train at Bradshaw, near Baltimore, on Sunday nights in order that I might be at my desk in New York the first thing Monday mornings. This request was in the interest of the Government rather than myself."

WE TRULY THANK YOU

Editors, Plainfield Daily Press:

Allow me space to express a personal appreciation of the manner in which your paper published its account of the inauguration ceremonies yesterday.

Not only were the citizens of our city supplied with an accurate description of an event which stirred the heart of every American, but they were also enabled to read the account at as early an hour as readers in the great metropolitan centers. Another striking feature was the superb illustrations. I feel that such efforts ought to be appreciated and congratulate the editors of the Daily Press upon their enterprise.

Sincerely yours,
(REV.) CORTLANDT H. MALLERY.

Editors, Plainfield Daily Press:

When I read the Daily Press last night I felt so proud of the issue that I felt I ought to let you know my feelings. Although I have severed my connection with the paper which I founded and conducted for so many years, you must know that I am interested in its welfare and I want to tell you that last night's issue was the best paper every printed in Plainfield. Everybody wanted to know about the inauguration and they found it all in the Daily Press. As the dean of editors in this section of the State, although now retired, I offer you my hearty congratulations for your enterprise and efficiency. With brotherly, or I should say, fatherly love, I am

Sincerely,
A. L. FORCE.

BRACED THE WALLS OF WRECKED HOUSE

Under the direction of Fire Chief T. D. Doane, who is also building inspector, carpenters and masons have completed the work of bracing the shaken walls of the house at 627-A West Fourth street, which was almost entirely wrecked Monday night, when a terrific explosion occurred, badly injuring two persons.

As told in these columns yesterday the explosion was caused by the igniting of escaping illuminating gas which filled the house after a thrief had wrenched the quarter gas meter from its connections in the cellar for the purpose of robbing the money in the apparatus. The damage is now estimated by Chief Doane and the owners, the Brotherhood Realty Company, at $5,000.

Burrell Harvey, who lived in the house where the explosion took place, and was hurled with his wife into the street by the concussion of the blow-up, is still confined to Muhlenberg Hospital, suffering with severe burns about the face and hands. His hands were burned as he beat out the flames which enveloped his body as he lay in the street. Mrs. Harvey is also suffering with painful burns about the face and hands and is staying at the home of friends.

The Public Service have men detailed night and day, on the lookout for the miscreant. No burglaries have been reported today.

As told in yesterday's issue of this paper, Mr. and Mrs. Harvey came home after attending a church entertainment Monday night and noticing the odors of gas coming from the cellar started an investigation. Lighting an oil lamp they started to descend the basement cellar stairs when the gas fumes ignited with the flame of the lamp and the terrific explosion followed. The couple were hurled unconscious to the street. The fire department extinguished the flames resulting.

RAINEY'S FAMOUS AFRICAN PICTURES

To Be Shown Here Under Auspices of Local Alumni of Smith College.

Smith College, of which there are about twenty-five graduates in this city, is in the madist of the greatest undertaking in its history, that of acquiring a sufficient endowment to meet the educational obligations of what is the largest college for women in the world. Smith is unique in its position of being an institution without a debt, having always enjoyed an economical management and having used wisely every dollar of its income. However, since the growing number of undergraduates does not sufficiently increase the resources of the college and since the educational efficiency of each college is in direct proportion to the size of its faculty, President Burton decided to make every effort to secure a million dollars of endowment to cover the unavoidable increase in salary expense and to enlarge the teaching force.

The Plainfield graduates of the college wishing to assist in this work have arranged for the exhibition here on Friday afternoon and evening of the Rainey Africa Hunt Pictures at the Plainfield theatre. The merits and necessity of this endowment fund are best evidenced by the fact that the General Education Board, when appealed to for a contribution, pledged $200,000 to the fund, after a rigid examination of the college's financial conditions and needs. This is conditional upon the college obtaining, prior to June 30, 1913, pledges sufficient to complete the $1,000,000. $600,000 of this additional amount has already been raised and the undergraduates and friends of the college, including the alumnae, are endeavoring to secure the remaining necessary sum. This will be the first appearance in Plainfield of the famous Rainey pictures.

Quick Heat

SQUARE POT BOILERS develop full heating capacity in a few moments and are rightfully called "quick heaters." The reason can be seen by a glance at the sectional view herewith. Interior surfaces in SQUARE POT BOILERS are brought low, in direct contact with the fire, and also trend sharply upward, thus providing instantaneous water heating and lively circulation. The result is a free-steaming boiler that gives quick and satisfactory house heating.

SQUARE POT BOILERS are economical of coal, require little attention and are easily regulated for either mild or severe weather. Call on the nearest dealer for a full demonstration.

Our First Sale of Used Upright Pianos

The remarkable demand for our player pianos has brought to the piano department many fine upright instruments. Many of the pianos have seen very little use. Every one has been thoroughly overhauled and put in the best possible condition, and afterwards passed upon by the foreman of our piano repair shops. This means that with each piano goes the Bamberger guarantee of complete satisfaction. Moreover, every piano in this sale is offered on this liberal proposition: Should the purchaser desire, within a year, a new upright or player piano, we will allow all the money paid on the used instrument to be credited as part payment for any new piano or player piano in stock.

Easy terms of payment. If you have an old piano, a liberal allowance will be made for it, taken in exchange as part payment. A scale of payments as low as $5.00 a month can be arranged, according to the instrument selected. If you cannot come in person, a telephone or post card request will bring a representative. A deposit of $5 will reserve any instrument, which deposit will be refunded if you are not satisfied after inspecting the piano.

We also include in this special sale a number of upright pianos and several grand and player pianos, that have never been taken off the floor of the piano department, but have been used solely for wareroom demonstration. None of these pianos has been in our department more than four months, and while sold as "used pianos," the usual Bamberger guarantee goes with every one, just the same as though it had been purchased at its regular selling price. Bear in mind these facts: These pianos bear the makers' names, and are all reputable makes, and NOT "stencil" pianos, specially designed and built for sale purposes. Every one is a part of our regular stock. They are not second-hand instruments, in any sense of the word.

The increase is made necessary, it is explained, because of the proposed increase in the salary of the principal, which is to be enough to make it $2,250; also the increasing of salaries of several teachers, a salary for the custodian, a salary for one extra teacher and a salary for the kindergarten teacher, as well as an allowance of $350 per annum for an extra room.

COMMENTS ON MESSAGE.

Almost without exception the great daily journals this morning warmly approve the utterances of President Wilson in his inaugural address and wish him well in his expressed determination to carry into action his high and praiseworthy ideals. Especially do they commend his declaration that "Justice and only justice shall always be our motto" and that "our work is a work of restoration." To the President, the occasion as he remarked, was "not a day of triumph; it is a day of dedication," and he solemnly consecrated himself and his administration to bring about "a government of the people, for the people and by the people."

As the Philadelphia Record says the address is an appeal to the nation's conscience, its heart, its mind. "The new departure manifested in the substitution of a Democratic for a Republican administration means that the country has set its face toward a higher life and is installing new weights and measures by which public policies and private business must be tested. Mr. Wilson appeals to all Americans who understand and welcome and participate in the change of popular ideals to cooperate with him in making the Government respond to the newer and better aspirations of the people. They will do so, and the Wilson administration will mark an epoch in American history."

The message, the New York Tribune declares, "breathes a sincere desire to help the country forward, to protect and uplift the weak and those of narrowed opportunity and to give free scope to the feelings of the new age which seek to bring into the conduct of human affairs a larger measure of mercy and justice. The President will not carry a spear of justice which knows no brother. Rather he would make the judge and the brother one. It is in this high-minded and undoubtedly genuine expression of his hopes and ideas that the inaugural is most appealing and most significant."

"The inaugural keynote," according to the New York Herald, "is found in the references to the 'high enterprise of the new day' which is 'to lift everything that concerns our life as a nation to the light that shines from the hearth fire of every man's conscience and vision of the right.' This is a noble sentiment. It rises as high above the actual performances of the democratic House of Representatives that has gone out of being with the Taft administration as the furthermost star above the surface of the earth."

This view is shared by the New York World which says: "We have faith that the American people, called by such a leader to such high undertakings, will not fail to respond to this solemn invitation and pledge 'I summon all honest men, all patriotic, all forward-looking men, to my side. God helping me, I will not fail them if they will but counsel and sustain me.'"

For a fortnight at least, a thief has been operating at will where he has found houses in which are installed the type of gas meter known as the quarter in the slot machine. No section of the city has been missed by him and the danger to human life was apparent from the first. This conviction became all the more deepil impressed when as a result of his villany an explosion wrecked a house and what is far more important two human lives came near being sacrificed. As it was, the occupants of the dwelling were hurled into the street and are now in the hospital. The City of Plainfield expects that the police authorities will confine their energies to running down the criminal offender for the situation is most serious and demands quick action. That the whole city is stirred up over the outrages goes without saying and the people of this community look to the police to ferret out the guilty one. That's what the police are paid for.

We presume very many of our readers were interested in the highly instructive communication from George P. Mellick concerning the workings of the New York State Exchange and objections to the Sulzer measures for regulation and taxation, as published yesterday. His letter was prompted by an interview with W. J. R. Hegeman published a few days previously and was intended as a reply to the latter's castigations of the Exchange. The Daily Press is always glad to print communications from its readers and the public generally and provided they are signed with the writer's name, will always be given prominence.

President Wilson does not propose to waste the time he should devote to the country's interests in listening to job seekers. This practise of office-hungry men in trying to get the Chief Magistrate's ear has been one of the greatest annoyances he has had to contend with, but Wilson gives notice that he does not intend to put up with it.

HEALTH BOARD NOT AFFECTED BY 'C. M.'

Supreme Court Holds Such Body Continues in Office After Adoption of Act.

Trenton, March 5.—The Supreme Court has just handed down a decision that the adoption of the Walsh Act for commission government in cities does not have the effect of abolishing the local Boards of Health. The decision applies to cities having the general scheme of statutory regulation of the Public Health organized under the general act of 1887. The decision is given in the suit of Blasius Isvan against Police Justice Samuel G. Naar, of this city. Isvan was convicted of a violation of the Trenton sanitary code, the complainant being the City Commission, elected under the Walsh Act. The decision of the Supreme Court sets the conviction of Isvan aside.

The question at issue in the action was whether the adoption of the Walsh act superseded the general scheme of health regulation in this city and its adoption abolished the Local Board of Health. The City Commission took the view that the Board of Health was abolished, together with other city boards. Ever since the commission has been in office and since it dispensed with the Board of Health, the Commission has been itself regulating the health of the city, and so it appeared as the complainant in this suit.

The Supreme Court says the Walsh Act is not to be construed as meaning, in the absence of plain words to that effect, that after the adoption of Commission Government there was to be no such thing as a Board of Health in Trenton.

HIS WHEEL "STOLEN."

Patrolman Daniel James MacDonold brought a motorcycle to police headquarters Monday, saying he found it in front of the premises at 115 East Front street, where it had been standing all night. Peter Welsh, of 130 North avenue, reported to Chief Kiely last night that his machine had been stolen shortly after 6 o'clock from Park and North avenues. After he had given a description of the vehicle it was found that the wheel found by MacDonald was the vehicle "lost" by a Welsh.

LIPTON'S CHALLENGE FOR AMERICA'S CUP

(By Telegraph to The Daily Press.)

London, March 5.—A challenge by the Royal Ulster Yacht Club for a series of races for the America's cup to take place in 1914, made on behalf of Sir Thomas Lipton, is on its way to America. It will reach New York on the Oceana today or tomorrow.

The challenge is for competition under the old rules and Sir Thomas says there is doubt of the acceptance of the challenge.

What Saved Him.

William was not kind to his small brother Henry; in fact, he looked upon him as a nuisance, a scourge sent from heaven to try his spirit and spoil his fun. Especially that day was Henry a thorn in the older boy's flesh. In his efforts to rid himself of his burden William resorted to all the methods the mind of youth suggested, but in vain. Henry continued to stick as close, if not closer, than a brother.

"William," finally said the boy's father, who had witnessed, unheard, the final paroxysm of the unequal struggle, "you should be ashamed of yourself to treat your little brother in that way! He ought to be sacred to you."

William made no reply, but shortly afterward, believing himself to be free of surveillance, he was heard to address Henry thus: "Always taggin' after me! If you weren't sacred I'd break your blamed face for you!"—New York Tribune.

His Head and the Psalm.

"In my third living there was a very crowded congregation the first morning I officiated. The parishioners were evidently curious as to the build, color of hair, etc., of their new vicar. As a matter of fact I was, though a young man, very bald. A little thought would have caused me to make my first appearance on any morning but the 8th, but it was the 8th, and in the Psalms, which were read and not sung, I had to say, 'My sins are more in number than the hairs of my head.'"

Faith will do wonders. A woman in Devonshire, England, recently said to a chemist:

"I've got a cruel, bad cough, surely. I've heerd that bronchial troches are good things. Hav'ee got any?"

The assistant pointed to a small box on the table and said:

"Yes; there they are."

"How much is it?" was the inquiry.

The price was paid, and the old woman took her departure. At night the assistant missed a box of glycerin soap (three cakes).

A couple of days afterward the woman returned to the shop and said:

"I won't'ee to take back two of them things I had t'other day. I took one of 'em. It was mortal hard to chew and awful to swallow, but it cured the cough."

Knew His Geography.

The manager greeted Mr. Thornton and, turning to Cody, said, "I would like to have you meet my friend here, Mr. Thornton."

"Mr. Thornton, this is Colonel William F. Cody, better known as Buffalo Bill."

Mr. Thornton, gripping the wild west showman's hand, said: "Glad to know you, Bill. What part of Buffalo are you from?"—National Monthly.

EXACTLY 143 YEARS AGO TODAY IT WAS

Boston, Mass., March 5.—One hundred and forty-three years ago tonight Captain Preston, commander of the British guard in Boston, gave the command which caused so much bloodshed and added another step toward the Revolutionary War. The Boston massacre claimed three of the patriots who were defending their homes aand demanding their rights against the onslaughts of the British troops who had made life anything but pleasant during the period after the repeal of the Stamp Act.

Resenting the insults put to them by the men and boys of Boston, the British troops protected themselves against the charge of the indignant Boston men. When the smoke of the British guns cleared away there were eleven men stretched on the ground, of whom three were killed and eight wounded.

Although the demonstration of the Boston folk was but a defensive move, it had a great deal to do with the hastening of the Revolutionary War. When several Boston lawyers, who were also staunch patiots, acted as counsel for Captain Preston, who was tried for murder, there was great excitement, but Preston was acquitted on the ground that he had done his duty as an officer.

THE FORUM.

Editors, Plainfield Daily Press:

Mr. Mellick's article on the New York Stock Exchange is like a book on physiology, it describes a perfect body, but Mr. Lawson's articles are like a medical book, they describe the diseases and show the remedy. The Stock Exchange is like a person going about with a contagious disease, and the Board of Health is seeking to put it in quarantine.

EDWARD GRAY MAY BE THE PREMIER

Likely He Will Succeed Asquith Who Would Retire to Private Life.

London, March 5.—As the session of parliament proceeds it becomes daily more evident to close observers that contingencies may force an early change of administration. The cares of office are telling heavily on Mr. Asquith and it is believed that he is only awaiting a favorable time to retire from the premiership.

The question as to who is most likely to be the next premier is now being freely discussed, notwithstanding the fact that Mr. Asquith has as yet given no outward indication that he intends to take advantage of his often expressed wish to retire.

It is an open secret that both Mr. Lloyd George and Mr. Winston Churchill are waiting for the day when their chief finds the burden of his office too great for his years and seeks repose in the House of Lords. But factional differences may, and perhaps will prevent either of these gentlemen from realizing his ambition to succeed Mr. Asquith in the premiership. If such proves to be the case it will become necessary to cast about for some one else to take the reins of government.

In the opinion of many competent judges of the situation the only available man possessing the requisite qualities of leadership is Sir Edward Grey. There are those who confidently declare that it is only a question of time until Sir Edward becomes prime minister.

The granson of Sir George Grey, who was several times home secretary, and the grand nephew of Earl Grey of reform bill fame, Sir Edward inherits political instincts and talent of the highest order. He had scarcely attained his majority when he became private secretary to Sir Evelyn Baring (later Lord Cromer), and he acted in the same capacity to Mr. Childers at the time the latter was chancellor of the exchequer. Entering parliament at the age of twenty-three years, he made some stir at an early period of his career by his independence on the question of Irish land purchase.

He was only thirty when Mr. Gladstone appointed him, in 1892, under secretary for foreign affairs. As his chief was in the House of Lords, his position was important, and it became particularly delicate when Lord Rosenbery succeeded to the premiership. Sir Edward Grey had to expound a policy with which it was suspected Lord Rosebery's principal colleague did not always sympathize. He did the work which then fell to his hand with courage as well as with propriety. Later, during the period of Liberal opposition, he came strongly to the front as a critic of the foreign policy of the Balfour administration.

Although his style is restrained, Sir Edward's speeches are nearly always impressive and effective. Once he was announced to address a meeting of northern miners who were keen Radicals. Instead of giving them a slashing harangue Sir Edward spoke sedately on foreign affairs, yet his manner was such that his audience listened with deep interest.

NEW ORLEANS CELEBRATES.

New Orleans, La., March 5.—New Orleans made merry yesterday in honor of the inauguration of the first Southern-born President that the nation has had in nearly half a century. Canal street and other leading thoroughfares were decorated with flags and when the bulletin came announcing that Mr. Wilson had taken the oath of office every boat in the harbor tied down its whistle. This, added to the din that was originating from all varieties of noise-making devices in the hands of the crowd, rolled out over the lowlands and was caught up by the boats on Lake Pontchartrain. It is probable that never before, during Lent, has such a jollification taken place in this strongly Catholic city.

IN WOMAN'S REALM

FISH CANAPES.

THESE relishes give flavor to the otherwise plain Lenten meal. Canapes may be made by cutting slices of stale bread about a half inch thick and in any shape liked. Then they are toasted or sauted until a golden brown. Spread with some savory mixture, such as cheese, fish or meat, and tastefully garnished they add to the attractiveness of the table.

The slices of bread may be sauted in fat, butter or olive oil, as you prefer. If you have a fancy cutter to shape them with it is more convenient than using a knife.

Made With Shell Fish.

Crab Canapes.—For these fresh or canned crab meat may be used. For the foundation take a half dozen oval shaped pieces of toast.

For the sauce about a dozen hard shelled crabs are needed. Take the meat from the claws and divide the claws lengthwise. Wipe off the shells and put them in the oven to dry. Take out, put into a mortar and pour in four tablespoonfuls of olive oil and pound fine. Then place in a saucepan on the fire and let cook slowly for about ten minutes. Take off and press out the oil by squeezing the mixture in a clean cloth. Now take this oil and two tablespoonfuls of tarragon vinegar and mix this with the crab meat previously prepared. Cover the six pieces of toast with the sauce and garnish with the claws and add pieces of pickle, cut in fancy shapes or chopped fine; capers, watercress or horseradish sauce.

A Russian Relish.

Caviar Canapes.—Cut the sandwich bread a third of an inch thick and about two inches square. Toast golden color. Spread each piece with a teaspoonful of Russian caviar. Chop a cold hard boiled egg very fine. Mix with a teaspoonful each of minced parsley and onion. Divide this among the pieces of caviar covered toast. Serve the canapes on a dish on a folded napkin and decorate with quartered lemon and parsley.

Sardine Canapes.—Sardines put up in oil are required in this case. Take the skin and bone from one-half dozen sardines and pound them in a mortar until smooth. Then mix in one ounce of butter, one ounce of grated cheese and season with salt and pepper. Make some toast of bread, cut in rounds and butter them. Then pile the sardine paste on each piece of toast, sprinkle with grated cheese and put in the oven to get thoroughly hot. Serve at once.

VOTES FOR WOMEN

Conducted by the Equal Suffrage League of Plainfield and North Plainfield.

JANE ADDAMS TO SPEAK TO SPHINX

Miss Addams said that before she left Chicago one of the papers there had pictured her in a cartoon as making a few remarks on woman suffrage to the Sphinx, and she proceeded to explain her idea of what a speech on suffrage to the Sphinx ought to be.

"I would begin," she said, "by going back twenty-five centuries to the time when Plato dreamed of an ideal republic, in which poverty, disease and crime would be gradually abolished. Plato taught that an ideal republic could never be established unless women received equal guardianship in the State with men. And he contended that it rested with those who disagreed with him to prove that women should not have such a share. While women then had no part in government, he said this condition was the result of custom, not of nature, and that until the experiment of giving women an equal share in the guardianship of the State had been tried, the burden of proof remained on those who insisted that women should be excluded.

"And here Plato stopped in his argument to request that his fellow-citizens would not ridicule him for the position he had taken. He showed that fear of ridicule twenty-five centuries ago which has always been of such power in keeping men from advocating the cause of equal suffrage.

"This experiment proposed by Plato has never been tried till the present century. Whether it is a new compunction seizing the conscience of man, or a gust of moral sentiment which bids him attack the old chimeras of poverty, crime, and disease, or whether it was simply that the time was ripe, all the world suddenly has begun moving toward giving women the vote.

"In all centuries there have been charities and philanthropic enterprises to fight poverty, crime, and disease, but it is only recently that these questions have been taken up by the State in such laws as pensioning the aged, limiting the hours of labor, and prohibiting premature labor—and in such undertakings as the prevention of yellow fever in the Canal Zone, ridding Portor Rico of the hookworm and attacking tuberculosis in this country.

"To limit the hideousness of these three great evils of poverty, crime, and disease, women are being called upon to help, and in the face of a work so enormous and so needful as the war upon these evils, the old fear of ridicule is dropping from men like a garment which falls from the shoulders of one who is hurrying too fast to care. Many of these tasks of reform which are now being taken over by the State have been started and carried on up to the present by women, and the State needs the help of these women when it begins its battle against poverty, disease and crime."

Progress of Woman Suffrage.

The delegations of women who went to Lansing on behalf of the equal suffrage amendment returned to their respective districts elated with the big vote of 74 to 21 cast in the House on February 20 in favor of resubmitting the question on April 7, writes a friend in Michigan. Their elation was tempered by the knowledge of the short time in which to campaign, but the work of last summer and autumn will prove a factor in the six weeks alloted to reach the voters for the spring election.

The Iowa House of Representatives passed the equal suffrage emandment last week by a vote of 81 to 26.

While several hundred women in the gallery cheered, the Missouri House followed the action of the Senate and sent the proposed suffrage amendment to engrossment last week. Final action on it is due this week. The vote in the House was so nearly unanimous that no count was taken.

The Maine Senate, by a decisive vote of 23 to 6, accepted the unanimous report of the judiciary committee, and went on record in favor of submitting the equal suffrage amendment to popular vote.

Connecticut suffragists are now actively preparing for the hearings before the joint committee of House and Senate on March 18 and 19.

The judiciary committee of the Pennsylvania Senate will hold a public hearing on woman suffrage March 18.

The next meeting of the Equal Suffrage League of Plainfield and North Plainfield will be held at the home of Mrs. C. L. Riley, 7 Myrtle avenue, near the corner of Washington avenue. Business at 3 o'clock; speaking at 4 o'clock by ex-Senator Gebhardt and Miss Elinor Gebhardt. Tea served at 4:30.

It will be remembered that Senator Gebhardt was the first senator to introduce a suffrage resolution in the Senate of New Jersey, and although the resolution which he introduced, last year was defeated, it paved the way for success this year. Miss Elinor Gebhardt is his daughter. Both father and daughter are lawyers and will ably present the cause of suffrage and the needs of the present new situation which has come about since New Jersey became a campaign State. Suffragists are invited to bring their friends.

waist made with a yoke that extends to form a panel. In the illustration it is of nainsook, with all over embroidery and lace insertion and edging, and it is very charming; but, since the skirt is straight, it can be used for flouncing that greatly reduces the labor of making.

For the six year size the dress requires three yards of material twenty-seven inches wide, with five-eighths of a yard of all over embroidery and seven yards of banding to make as shown in back view.

Three Tales With a Moral from the Newark Evening News

January 17, 1913.

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—Surrogate John P. Cohalan declined yesterday to pass on the liability of an executrix who lost a $98,000 estate through entrusting it to a broker for investment without supervision. Surrogate Cohalan said he would not pass upon the question until an account had been filed.

John Phyfe, who died in 1901, left an estate of more than $98,000, naming his wife, Anna A. Phyfe, as executrix. He directed her to pay $50 a month to his mother, Mrs. Elizabeth H. Coe, of East Orange, during her lifetime. The payments stopped recently, and Mrs. Coe petitioned the surrogate to put her daughter-in-law under bonds to continue them.

In her answer Mrs. Phyfe said that she had turned over the estate for management to a broker and had not supervised him. She learned recently, she said, that he had mismanaged the property and had made her income payments from the principal of the estate. She added that she believed the estate had been almost entirely lost by mismanagement.

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 17.—Samuel S. Hatt, a lawyer and church worker, who was charged with converting to his own use about $104,000 of trust funds, was sentenced yesterday to serve not more than thirteen years and nine months, nor less than nine years and nine months. He pleaded guilty to two of five indictments alleging grand larceny and forgery.

The second, and an intermediate, accounting in the estate of Dr. Leslie D. Ward, was presented to Judge Martin, in Orphans' Court, today, for final passing by the executors, Jacob E. Ward and the Fidelity Trust Company. The principal of the estate, in comparison with the figures quoted in the last accounting, showed a gain of approximately $5,000, and was stated as $2,720,364.82 last December.

The income from the estate, which was $108,909.35 at the close of 1911, had increased in the aggregate to $252,-285.86 at the close of 1912. During the year past, however, two payments of $107,801.16 were made to the Fidelity Trust Company, as trustee for Leslie P. and Helen Ward, legatees, a total of $215,602.32. Together with other expenses incidental to the management of the estate, the turning over of this sum brought the balance of the income down to $13,142.98 at the end of last year.

The income, as stated, represented the dividends on stocks and bonds held by Mr. Ward in the Prudential, the Fidelity Trust Company, the Union National Bank, the United States Steel Corporation, the Public Service Corporation, the United Electric Company and the New Jersey Street Railway Company, besides many other securities in like enterprises, as well as mortgages and real estate rentals.

PARVIN'S LECTURE ON OCEAN LINERS

"From the Half Moon to the Olympic" Subject of Illustrated Talk.

Precautions taken by the White Star Steamship Line to avoid a possible repetition of the horrifying Titanic disaster in which so many people lost their lives when the giant vessel struck an iceberg and sank to the bottom of the Atlantic were outlined last night in steropticon views during a lecture delivered in Hope chapel by Emerson E. Parvin, secretary of the International Mercantile Marine. The address was given under the auspices of the Men's Club. The subject of his discourse was "From the Half Moon to the Olympic."

The Olympic, a floating palace of the sea belonging to the White Star fleet, was shown on the screen in a dry dock undergoing reinforcing repairs. The double bottom of armor plate as a protection against icebergs and the air-tight apartments, which failed the Titanic, were shown in the course of installation, but of an improved type. Views of the Holy Land, Egypt and large cities of Europe were also exhibited in steopticons and commented upon.

MRS. M. I. COOLEY HEAD OF MISSIONARY SOCIETY

Officers were chosen and an interesting program was presented at the annual meeting of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society of the First Baptist church, held yesterday afternoon in the lecture room of the church. There was an unusually large attendance and a feature was the numerous reports presented of "impressions" of the recent missionary convention held at the church. The current event paper was given by Mrs. W. A. Conner, and there were also papers by Mrs. Arthur M. Harris and Mrs. Robert Lowry. Mrs. Charles H. Smith led the devotional exercises.

These officers were elected: President, Mrs. Martin I. Cooley; vice presidents, Mrs. J. A. Powlison, Mrs. DeWitt Brokaw and Mrs. W. A. Conner; secretary, Mrs. B. J. Shreve; treasurer, Mrs. James Macnab. The executive board will be chosen later. Mrs. Shreve now begins her forty-first consecutive year as the secretary of the society.

The Women's Home Missionary Society is expected to hold its annual meeting on Tuesday, March 18, but arrangements are being made for an anniversary meeting of all the missionary societies of the church and the home society may decide to change its date.

A LITTLE MISTAKE IN TENSE

SPORTS OF ALL SORTS

"MAC" SAYS

There is some talk prevalent of starting a four cornered basketball organization to decide the city championship. Hope Chapel, Y. M. C. A. Ajax, Y. M. C. A. first team and the First Presbyterian teams are conceded to be the likely aspirants.

Although the season is ebbing fast, if the move is started and pushed along now it could easily be made a reality this season. Physical Director Ostlin, of the Y. M. C. A., is behind the move and he will probably do something definite before tomorrow.

Speaking of basketball, that third North Plainfield-Plainfield High School clash comes next Saturday afternoon at Saengerbund Hall. This contest will complete the High School schedules for the season.

Both schools will then turn their undivided attention to baseball. Both Captain Dunning, of N. P. H. S., and Captain Good, of P. H. S., have had their men out practising occasionally and the summer sport is well started at both institutions.

With the advent of spring, track work will receive a large amount of attention at the Plainfield High School. This sport has been boosted more or less during the past two years but a big campaign is being arranged among the students interested in this sport and a number are planning to enter several of the New York interscholastic meets under their alma mater's colors.

Two teams of basketball players that have met twice before this season and by some peculiar coincidence have won and lost by exactly the same scores will come together again on the Saengerbund Hall court next Friday night in the third and deciding game of their series. At Scotch Plains three weeks ago the Plainfield five won out by a score of 29 to 25, and at the same place last week, the 'Plains boys turned the trick with the same count.

The playoff will be staged as a preliminary to the girls' game for the city championship that night. A number of girls interested in the court game have gotten together an all-star aggregation and will play the Nonpareils at Saengerbund Hall, Friday night.

Playing on the Westfield High School floor yesterday afternoon the North Plainfield High School girls' five suffered a defeat at the hands of the Mt. Ararat delegation. Their series is now even and the boroughites are trying to arrange for a playoff on a neutral court.

BASEBALL NOTES

The Boston Braves' holiday games at home will be played on the American League grounds next season.

Manager Jack Dunn, of the Baltimore team, is going to let the fans pick the captain of the Orioles by popular election.

The Marquette University at Milwaukee, Wis., has decided to drop baseball and track sports for the coming year at least.

The Montgomery Club, of the Southern League, has signed twins. The twins, whose names are Frank and Ernest Henry, play the outfield.

The Pacific Coast League, American Association and Western League have arranged longer-playing schedules than the major leagues.

It looks as if Joe Tinker would have to find another catcher for his Cincinnati Reds as Tom Clarke is the only first string receiver on the team.

BOROUGH HIGH SCHOOL GIRLS' TEAM DEFEATED AT WESTFIELD HIGH SCHOOL

Superior team work and an aggrevating field goal (the same old story) spelled defeat for the North Plainfield High School girls' basketball team in its game with the Westfield High School girls on the latter's court yesterday afternoon. The first chapter of the contest closed with the score 12 to 7 in favor of the home players and they increased their lead from five to eight points in the second period, the final count being 22 to 14. Even in the initial half, when the boroughites had the best goal to cage their baskets in, the Mt. Ararat team managed to keep well in the lead, by virtue of Miss Pearsall's excellent field goal shooting, she getting a trio of this variety and three fouls in the first half. The home players displayed a vast improvement over their playing when they appeared at Saengerbund Hall earlier in the season, passing like wizards, and this feature enabling them to keep the ball out of the hands of the accurate North Plainfield basket cagers who made good on what few shots they had.

In the first game the N. P. H. S. five was victorious but the second more than established an even footing for the Mt. Ararat representatives, there being nothing to it but Westfield from start to finish. Numerous fouls were levied on both sides throughout the game especially in the first half, when a total of seventeen penalties were levied, nine on Westfield and eight on the visitors. Of these Miss Burtis took advantage of three and the Westfielders made good on four. A shift in the last half when Miss McAuliffe was sent in to play forward, Miss Douglas taking her place at center, materially strengthened the boroughites' team in the goal shooting department, but left the pivot position weaker than it had been before.

All through the first half the playing was slow and uninteresting to the large crowd of spectators and the one redeeming feature of other wise listless playing was a neat field goal tossed from the center of the floor by Miss Mildred McAuliffe, of N. P. H. S., after she had received a swift pass from Miss Clara Smith.

Miss Pearsall was easily the star of the contest chalking up seventeen of her team's twenty-two points and putting up a strong defensive game. Most of her shots were of the kind that are difficult to ward off and came on spectacular over-head attempts, which made it practically impossible for the loser's guards to check.

WITH THE BOXERS

Gotham promoters are trying to arrange a return match between Joe Rivers and K. O. Brown, the bout to take place in New York.

Charles Ledoux, the French bantam, has returned to this country and is seeking a muss with either Kid Williams or Johnny Coulon.

Both Ad Wolgast and Tommy Murphy claim that they should have been given the decision in their recent bout which was declared a draw.

Bob Moha, the conqueror of Cyclone Thompson, and Eddie McGoorty have signed for a ten-round bout at Milwaukee on the evening of St. Patrick's Day.

Charlie Cutler, manager of Jess Willard, announces that Luther McCarty has consented to box Willard late in March or early in April in either Philadelphia of New York.

KLAUS AND PAKE READY.

Paris, March 5.—Frank Klaus and Billy Papke, the rival American fighters who are generally recognized as foremost among the world's middleweight boxers, are to meet in this city tonight for a twenty-five round contest. Both men are reported in the pink of condition. Seldom has a fight attracted so much attention among the followers of the sport in Paris and throughout France. The management of the club under whose auspices the mill will take place expects a record-breaking crowd. The extraordinary amount of interest may be attributed in a large part to the fact that the two Americans already have beaten Georges Carpentier and Marcel Moreau, who are considered the best of the French fighters.

BASKETBALL MANAGERS.

Managers George Leighs, of the Hope chapel team; Andrew Hetfield, of the Y. M. C. A. Ajax; Pierson Bailey, of the Y. M. C. A. first team, and William Peacock, of the First Presbyterian team, are requested to meet Physical Director Ostlin, of the Y. M. C. A., in the association parlors tonight at 8 o'clock. The organization of the city basketball league will be effected at that time and all of these managers will have to be on hand in order to get in the race.

NATIONAL COMMITTEE MEETING

Washington, D. C., March 5.—The members of the Democratic National Committee, nearly all of whom came to Washington for the inauguration, gathered at the New Willard Hotel today for their first formal meeting since the November election. The chief purpose of the meeting, as stated in the official call of Chairman McCombs, was to discuss general questions of organization.

SERIES TO DECIDE CITY CHAMPIONSHIP

A movement was inaugurated by Physical Director E. C. Ostlin, of the Y. M. C. A., last night, to launch a city basketball championship series here during the coming week. In speaking of the movement last night, Mr. Ostlin said that he was considering the Hope Chapel, Y. M. C. A. firsts, Y. M. C. A. Ajax and First Presbyterian teams as contenders and there would be some sort of a trophy to act as an incentive to competition. Although the basketball season is fast drawing to a close, Mr. Ostlin figures that if the idea was pushed to the limit and all of the four contenders co-operated with him, that there would be plenty of time remaining in which to decide the question. The matter of singling out a city champion has caused much agitation here during the last couple of seasons and in some instances various teams of strong calibre have not been considered in awarding the title.

Mr. Ostlin's plan of playing it off between this quartet of teams appears to be the only plausible solution to the problem and it is up to the teams themselves to see that they get a fair chance. It is planned to run off a double header every Saturday night and possibly work in a set of games Wednesday nights, when the Y. M. C. A., on which the games will be played, is not in use. The Y. M. C. A. Ajax have already won a title at the hands of Hope Chapel but were defeated by the Presbyterian five and have not as yet had an opportunity to show what they could do against the Y. M. C. A. first team. Hope Chapel has defeated the Presbyterians but has not played the Y. M. C. A. firsts, so little can be gleaned as to the probable outcome. The Y. M. C. A. representatives are much heavier than any of the other contestants and have been stacking up against aggregations of a higher calibre. Hope Chapel has lost but two games this season, both of these being won by the Ajax, and therefore are looked upon as formidable contenders.

CHAMPIONS AFTER TITLES.

New York, March 5.—Seldom if ever before has an indoor meet in the metropolis attracted such a galaxy of famous athletes as are entered for the American track and field championships, which are to take place in Madison Square Garden tomorrow night. Both the East and the West will be well represented. Among the stars who will be seen in the various events are "Mel" Sheppard, holder of the outdoor mile record; Abel Kiviat, the great little miler of the Irish-American A. C.; Hannes Kolehmainen, the Finnish Olympic distance champion; Howard P. Drew, the national sprint champion; Russell Beatty, the intercollegiate shot-put champion; Ben Sherman, the former intercollegiate champion at putting the hammer; E. F. Lindberg, the great quarter-miler of the Chicago A. A.; Tom Halpin, the star Boston runner; Ben Adams, the high and broad jumper of the New York A. C., and Harry Grumpelt, the holder of several titles for the high jump.

SCHEDULE COMPLETE.

Physical Director Ostlin, of the Y. M. C. A., has announced the completion of the Color League athletic schedule and the final standings will be announced in the course of the next few days. The winner of the point score will be presented with the Ritz loving cup at the physical department banquet, Friday evening, March 28.

TWO CHAMPIONSHIP BASKETBALL GAMES

An all Star Cast Will Endeavor to Wrest Title From Nonpareil Girls' Team.

Two basketball games, one a boys' and the other a girls', will be staged on the Saengerbund Hall court Friday night of this week and both promise to be unusually fast and interesting ones. In the boys' contest the Scotch Plains Parish House first quintet will lineup for the third time this season against the Plainfield five. In the two previous meetings both of which were effected on the Parish House court, the respective aggregations each managed to annex a victory and the third and deciding contest was therefore booked for the neutral North Plainfield court. A peculiar feature of the other two contests was the fact that both were won by a 29 to 25 score, the Plainfield team winning the first and the 'Plains' boys taking the second. Two combinations more evenly matched would be hard to single out and the playoff will probably bring out some good basketball on the part of both contenders.

In the girls' struggle, the Nonpareil five, of this city, which is at present tied for the State feminine championship with the Trenton Y. W. C. A., will play an all star team composed of former High School and Y. W. C. A. performers who have made a reputation for themselves on local courts in seasons gone by. The team consists of Miss Tice, the former Westfield High School forward; Miss Helen George, formerly of the Y. W. C. A. and North Plainfield High School fives; Miss Helen Southard, who is captain of the team, and the mainstay of the Scotch Plains Parish House girls' team; Miss Marion Mair, now playing on the North Plainfield High School and the Y. W. C. A., and Miss Reba Kline, another North Plainfield High School player, who is now attending the New York Normal School of Physical Education, where basketball comes in as a study.

It goes without saying that this combination will make the Nonpareils' hustle to hold fast to their coveted laurels won on courts of various cities this season and many are looking forward to a victory for the recently formed aggregation.

ELEVEN JUMPERS IN HIGH SCHOOL GYM CLASS EVENT

Eleven members of the Plainfield High School gym class at the Y. M. C. A., established some good marks in the two standing broad jump event yesterday afternoon. Morris Mann won the jump but had to do the remarkable stunt of leaping 18 feet, 9 inches, in order to beat Herbert Peacock, who did 17 feet, 1 inch. All of the contestants did good work in the event and the distances marked up were creditable ones.

Mann	18.9
H. Peacock	17.1
Warden	17.1
Roff	17
Lavere	16.10
Blair	16.7
Foster	15.4
Fairman	13.

LEAL BASEBALL PRACTICE.

Coach Wardlaw had a full squad of candidates out for baseball practice yesterday afternoon. The Leal boys expect to put a cracker-jack aggregation on the field this year and Mr. Wardlaw is busily engaged shaping out the abundance of new material.

WESTFIELD WOULD RATHER HAVE TIE

Mt. Ararat Pilot Refuses to Play a Third Game With North Plainfield H. S.

After the North Plainfield High School girls' basketball team was defeated at Westfield yesterday afternoon, by the High School representatives of that place, an effort was made by the borough manager to schedule a third game to decide the championship between the two schools which have always been the closest of rivals in basketball. The teams have met on the court twice this season and each has won a game to date, the North Plainfielders annexing a contest played at Saengerbund Hall, and the Westfielders taking yesterday's game played on their court. It would seem that a third game would be necessary to satisfy all hands, but when Manager Martin, of the Mt. Ararat delegation was approached on the subject he flatly refused to have anything to do with arranging a playoff contest, saying that he was satisfied that his team was the superior of the two.

It would seem from actual performances, that the two contestants were about as evenly matched as two teams could be, and although the Westfielders certainly outclassed the boroughites in every department of the game yesterday, the N. P. H. S. five were just as much in the limelight when they trounced the Westfielders some weeks ago on a "real" court. The suggestion was made to stage a deciding game on the Scotch Plains Parish House court, which is half way between here and Westfield and one of the best courts in this vicinity for girls' games, but the Westfield pilot was so enthused over the victory of yesterday that he could not be induced to condescend to a third game, preferring to let matters rest as they now stand, evened up.

MARSH OF THE YALE TEAM TAKES FIRST PLACE

A quintet of jumpers contested the two standing broad jump event in the boys' department college league at the Y. M. C. A. yesterday afternoon, Marsh winning out with a leap of 15 feet, 6 inches. Marsh represented the Yale team and by virtue of his good jump that aggregation will receive a substantial boost in the league standing. Krausse, of the Harvard team, was second, chalking up a mark of 14 feet, 10 inches.

The records established are as follows:

Marsh, Yale	15.6
Krausse, Harvard	14.10
Adams, Harvard	14.3
Walters, Yale	12.4
Stover, Harvard	11.7

CHANCE TO PLAY FIRST.

Chance will play first base and Chase second, according to what is described as official information today from the New York American League Club's training quarters in Bermuda. Chance, having become convinced that his legs will stand the pace, is credited with the definite announcement that he will play first when the season opens. He said he thought it easier for a manager on the firing line to call on his men to "come on" than to sit on the bench and say "go on." Chance is anxious to have Chase make the keystone of the infield, and in practice work he is declared to be making wonderful plays at that post.

DRISCOLL'S TEAM IS 'CLEANING UP'

Local First Baseman and E Crew Fail to Find an Aggregation of Strength.

Dave Driscoll, captain and first baseman on the Plainfield baseball team, who is now managing the All-National team on its tour through Porto Rico, has decided to call off the proposed Panama trip and will return home about March 10. A letter received from Dave says that four games had been played up to February 26, and three of them resulted in victories for the Yankees by scores of 9-5, 20-3 and 30-5. A fourth game was won by the Porto Ricans by a 4-3 count, but this looks like a bit of charity.

Dick Breen, a member of Driscoll's crew, one of the best second sackers in the International League, who was counted on to cover the keystone sack for the Jersey City club, broke his leg while sliding into second base in an exhibition game at Porto Rico. Breen's injury assumes the nature of a calamity to the Skeeter club, which has had one misfortune aftern another piled on it during the past year.

ELKS' BOWLING PRIZES TO BE AWARDED APRIL 8

A beefsteak dinner will be held in the Jersey City Elks' clubhouse, Tuesday evening, April 8, when the trophies and prizes won by the various teams in the league will be presented. As there are eleven teams in the league and the seating capacity of the hall is limited to 205, it was decided by the committee to limit each team to twenty tickets. The captains of the various teams have requested that those desiring tickets submit their applications as soon as possible.

CHRISTY MATHEWSON BREAKS PITCHING ARM

Christy Mathewson broke his arm in two places yesterday, but even though it happened to the pitching arm there need be no consternation among the New York Giants' "fans" because the accident befell Christy Mathewson, Jr., son of "Matty." Mrs. Mathweson is visiting her parents in Leuisburg, Pa., while her husband is on the southern training trip. An early report of the accident, which omitted the "Jr." from the name, caused a panic among baseball enthusiasts.

THE DEPARTMENT STORE OF ELIZABETH

GOERKE-KIRCH CO.

Broad and West Jersey Sts., Elizabeth, N. J.--Tel. "Elizabeth 2300"

LACES and EMBROIDERIES

One of the Leading and Most Complete Departments of Its Kind in the Country

Whenever you think of laces and embroideries think of the Goerke-Kirch Company. This is the department we're justly proud of, and we don't believe there's a novelty or piece of lace or embroidery that has been approved by Dame Fashion that cannot be found in this splendidly complete department.

SHADOW LACES AT 8c TO $5.98.

The laces that will be in greatest vogue this spring will be shadows. From the sombre suits to the elaborate evening gowns and dresses, shadow laces will be liberally employed. We have them in every conceivable pattern and width in white, cream and ecru. Shadow Venice and shadow bandings will also be found in a great variety; and with such wide assortments to select from the most exacting woman is certain to be pleased here.

CLUNY LACES 5c TO $18.00.

Here are splendid copies of the real cluny laces used so extensively for the new ratine and voile dresses. There is also a great showing of Pt. Venice laces.

EMBROIDERIES 5c TO $7.98.

This beautiful showing bound to win your admiration at a glance. From the plain cambric flouncings to the rich, bold Bulgarian voiles, there's a wealth of new, handsome patterns to satisfy every purse and fancy. Voile embroideries with bands to match are also in great demand this spring, and we carry a large variety of these goods.

BUTTONS 10c TO $5.00.

To set your eyes upon the hundreds and hundreds of dainty, little buttons here, will hold you spell-bound as if looking at the most brilliant jewels. The use of small buttons is a fad this spring—on plain white lawn waists to the most elaborate gowns.

TRIMMINGS 19c TO $5.98.

VEILINGS 25c TO $15.00.

The more we look at this stock, the more enthused we become of it. Nowhere will you find a daintier, more authentic or prettier display. Included are the magpie, Jack Doe, and crackled veilings; also the new fad, called "Vanity Veils" with a large dot that rests on the cheek. Waterproof chiffon veils and scarfs as well as the Nell Rose scarfs and hand-painted scarfs are also here.

"AWAKE, AWAKE, O ZION; PUT ON THY STRENGTH; PUT ON THY BEAUTIFUL GARMENTS."

BY

Rev. Dr. P. B. Strong

Pastor of the First Baptist Church

Strength and beauty cannot be separated. If a machine is ugly in any particular place, it will be found to be weak in that spot; and where it is found to be weak, it might have been more beautiful. This is no less true of a locomotive or a bridge or a building, than it is of anything else and particularly of Zion herself in which strength and beauty are indissolubly united.

The world is ever studying to economize power, and we are in the infancy of that study today. Men are devising methods of harnessing the rays to engines and of the power of the tides of the ocean and the falls of Niagara. The limits of what can be done by means of all these gigantic forces has never been guessed.

No more has the moral power of the world ever been guessed. O, the misguided wasted power in the hands of good men and women! How can this stupendous waste be utilized and brought to bear upon the bringing to pass the triumph of righteousness and peace?

Then the financial power. Do you know that the bulk of the world's wealth is in Christian hands? If only a reasonable and proper proportion of that wealth were turned to account in the Master's kingdom, what might not be accomplished? While money will not buy everything, it will do many, many things and its power is not to be despised.

What if all the intellectual power of christendom were laid on the altar? If the mental energy that goes into the management of political and industrial and educational enterprises was laid on the altar of Christ! If all the culture, the beauty, the social prestige and strength were made to count in the kingdom, then indeed would Zion be also arrayed in her beautiful garments! I believe that every piano, every violin, every voice, as well as homes and carriages and automobiles should be consecrated to the Lord Jesus Christ and that not one of these should be used in any way that is incompatible with the truest spiritual life of the person to whom these gifts are intrusted.

If all our spiritual force were brought to bear in the furtherance of the Gospel of Christ, with how much greater power could our ministers preach and our teachers teach and all our propaganda be energized! A little man, supported by great petitions can accomplish great things; vastly more than a man more richly endowed, but with no spiritual support back of him. The church is made up of individuals and the force that the church is to exert in the world depends upon how genuine and wholesouled is the consecration of each of these individuals.

When all the strength, moral, financial, intellectual, social and spiritual in the hands of every member of the church shall be utilized in the work of the kingdom and every part of every Christian's program be brought into subjection to the Lord Jesus Christ, then will the church be all beautiful as becomes the bride of Christ and then shall the world be brought to His feet.

THE PURPOSES OF LIFE

BY

Rev. A. E. Wilson

Pastor of All Souls' Unitarian Church

Life is growth, and the normal process seems to be growth in three ways, physical, mental and spiritual, in this order. During the period of mental growth we set for ourselves various goals, like wealth, pleasure, ease. These may all be rewards from certain ways of living but when treated as ends in themselves, we become conscious these are not life's true purpose. Out of experimenting with these allurements, and from ideals presented to us from without as well as within, we come to see that nobility of character, service, sacrifice of self are more in harmony with abiding satisfactions.

There has just come to us from the far off and little known antartic regions, an example of life's purpose. Amundson and Scott both had an aim in life, to discover and stand at the South Pole. Both started on their mission. Amundson came home, having attained his object. Do we say this was what life's purpose was, for him to stand at that desolate spot on the earth's surface? Scott will never return from his search. Yet he and his men, especially Capt. Oates, who sick and helpless, was keeping back three men and who went out into the raging blizzard, saying "I am just going outside; I may be gone sometime," went out to die and thus relieve them of his burden, these men who also found the object of their search but who succumbed to the hardships on the way back, these men demonstrated to the world what life's purpose is—to do one's duty bravely, to show a character which in the face of defeat still remains true to the highest ideals of manliness, brotherhood, of service and sacrifice, of Christ.

Life's purpose is to know God and do His will; to take the material, physical things of life and change them into spiritual, divine things; to make everything we do add to human stability and progress, deepen character, and transform selfish, sinful, loveless lives into the radiance of Christlike ones.

AFTER PRISONER'S RECORD.

Elizabeth, March 5.—The people are still investigating the record of Harry Goldberg, arrested Saturday afternoon by Sergeant George Rabig and Patrolman Springer. He had a jimmy and flashlight at the time. His arrest took place at a section where there have been several robberies of late. Detective Samuel Murphy, who looked up Goldberg's record in New York, says he has learned that he is a member of the famous "Jack" Zelig gang. The name Goldberg is believed to be an alias. It is said the prisoner also goes under the name of Campner. His capture is the third one of importance in which Sergeant Rabig has participated within a year, one of them being William Hunter, committed in Washington, D. C., for several burglaries.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas K. Apgar, of 24 Mariners place, are parents of a boy, born to them Monday night. He has been named Samuel Gordon Apgar. Mrs. Apgar was formerly Miss Laura Gordon, of Newark.

The WARE That Wears

It doesn't pay to buy cheap ware that soon peels, cracks, leaks, tarnishes, rusts or wears out. Even at a lower cost such ware is the most expensive because it is dangerous to health and unreliable in service—doesn't last.

is guaranteed. There is practically no wear out to it and scientific investigation proves it the most sanitary cooking ware made. Particles can't chip off and cause chronic troubles nor spoil the food. Germs do not breed on its smooth surface and odors can not be absorbed by it.

You'll have better food and save trouble, time and fuel by using only Pure Spun Aluminum Ware.

MRS. MEAD HEADS M'ALL AUXILIARY

MISS CARTER SPEAKS

Officers were elected at the annual meeting of the Plainfield branch of the McAll Auxiliary Association held at the home of Mrs. Frederick G. Mead, this morning, and the members listened to an interesting talk by Miss Grace Carter, of Montclair, of the fortieth anniversary building of the association in Paris, which was dedicated last June. Miss Carter was present at the dedication and was able to give much desirable information.

The new building is located in one of the poorer sections of Paris. It has a large auditorium accommodating 500 persons and a smaller auditorium seating 200 people. There is a roof garden and ample accommodations for both the boys and girls. Some of the rooms for the young women were dedicated in December last, and Miss Carter also told about this interesting event. She said that now there seems to be a special need of other new halls to take the place of the old ones. The association now wants to erect a new hall in place of the one in charge of Monsieur D'Aubrigne and plans are already underway for raising funds for the purpose.

The reports of the secretary and treasurer of the Plainfield branch show that during the past year more than $1,000 was raised toward the work, the members pledging themselves to contribute $1,000. There are between 300 and 400 contributing members and during the year forty new subscribers were secured.

These officers were elected for the coming year: President, Mrs. Frederick G. Mead; vice president, Mrs. Isaac L. Miller; treasurer, Mrs. John Gray Foster; secretary, Miss Ethel Millar; secretary of literature, Mrs. Isaac N. Field.

ORDER OF EAGLES PLAN FOR BIG CONVENTION

More than forty committees of the Fraternal Order of Eagles, of Baltimore, are working on the preparations for the big convention of the order which will be held in Baltimore, Md., during the week of August 4. During the last convention of this order over 25,000 visitors attended and it is conservatively estimated that more than 50,000 Eagles with their ladies and friends will attend this time. The executive committee, headed by Mayor James E. Preston, of Baltimore, is composed of the most prominent merchants, business and professional men of the city, and they are already at work arranging the preliminaries for the big gathering. Maryland hospitality and Baltimore welcome will be surpassed in the elaboration of the entertainment to be provided.

Among the features will be the grand parade of uniformed aeries with over a hundred bands in line, a great carnival night to be known as "A Night in Eagleland," which will rival the famous Mardi-Gras, of New Orleans, with its gaiety, masquerading, fireworks, mirth and music, a big crab and sea food feast at one of the riverside parks, a trip down the beautiful Chesapeake Bay on one of the big municipal liners and theatre and parties galore.

Y. M. C. A. RAISING $75,000.

Herbert E. Parker, general secretary of the local Y. M. C. A., will speak in Bayonne Sunday afternoon at a building campaign meeting. A movement was started in that city today for the erection of a modern $75,000 structure. Campaigns similar to this one have been conducted in more than 100 American cities. A large clock like the one used in the Muhlenberg Hospital campaign some time ago will be used by the Bayonne Y. M. C. A. committee.

TO PETITION BOARD FOR SCHOOL BUILDING

Netherwood Residents Association Wants Facilities in That Section.

Residents in the Netherwood section have received a letter from a committee comprising Stanley E. Gunnison, chairman; Lewis J. Geary, Walter S. Marder, Lloyd L. Osborn and Robert H. McCready, representing the Netherwood Residents' Association, explaining that a movement is on foot to present a petition to the Board of Education asking that a school be located where it will in the best possible manner provide for the territory included in the district bounded by the Jersey Central tracks, Carlton, Martine and Hillside avenues, and the Fanwood township and Fanwood borough lines. This section is now without school facilities in the district and there is but one school in the entire Second ward and that is crowded to the limit of capacity.

It is believed by the committee that no other territory of approximately the same area in the city is in such urgent need of proper school facilities and support of the movement is urged. Citizens receiving these letters are requested to sign a petition enclosed completing data as to the number of children with their ages.

BRONZE MEMORIAL TO GREAT CLERIC

The many friends of the late Dr. William R. Richards will be interested to know that the bronze tablet to be erected in the church to his memory is rapidly nearing completion in the workshop of Grove Hinman, who executed the tablet in memory of Dr. Bliss.

The design accepted is identical in size with the one already in place in the church and of the same general appearance. The bas-relief of Dr. Richards, which was suggested by some of his friends, has been omitted.

While some delay has resulted from not having placed the order for both these tablets at the same time, the committee having the matter in charge felt that the safer plan was to order them singly. Mr. Hinman's work has, however, been so generously praised that an equally satisfactory result may be expected in the new tablet soon to be dedicated.

The committee wishes to call the attention of the congregation to the fact that the sum of $220 is still needed to defray the expense of these tablets, and it is hoped that this may be raised by the gifts of friends who have not yet contributed. The desire from the outset has been to raise this tablet fund by a popular subscription in amounts of ten dollars or less, so that these tablets might represent the loving esteem of many friends. To accomplish this purpose and to make the tablets monuments erected by the congregation rather than by a few individuals, as might easily be done, it is necessary to receive a correspondingly larger number of subscriptions, and if this sentiment appeals to the members of the congregation, they are asked to respond accordingly.

PLAN CONFERENCE FOR THE MAYORS

Stewart Starts Movement to Protest Against Passage of Objectionable Bills.

CONCERNS THE SEWER

Plainfield, North Plainfield and Dunellen Are Interested in Fight Against Two Measures in the Legislature.

Mayor Stewart has decided to arrange a conference of Mayors from this immediate vicinity of the State with a view to securing their co-operation in the movement to defeat two bills in the Senate, which if they became laws would prohibit the adoption of the proposed plans for a joint sanitary sewage system undertaken by Plainfield, North Plainfield and Dunellen.

He has written to Governor Fielder requesting him not to sign these bills, if they should be passed, until the representatives of Plainfield, North Plainfield and Dunellen can be heard on the subject. It will be recalled that Mr. Fielder, when a Senator, voted against a measure similar to Senate 263 now up for consideration, which was vetoed by former Governor Wilson last year. The provisions of this year's bills are identical with those. One prohibits one municipality from locating a sewage disposal works in another municipality without getting the consent of the latter municipality.

Senate bill No. 239 prohibits the emptying of any foreign substance into any stream of the State, which would include water coming from sewage beds such as is proposed by the taree municipalities. Efforts are also being made to defeat this measure. It is recognized that there are strong forces at work to secure the passage of both bills, and those who have spent much time in pushing the local sewage proposition are particularly anxious that they should be defeated.

All three municipalities have expended considerable money in the preparation of plans, surveys, drafting of contracts, etc., and the State Board of Health has approved the plans, with the understanding that the sewage disposal works are to be built under the supervision of the board. It is proposed to place the works on the Darling farm in Piscataway township, and anything now that would tend to upset this arrangement would mean a serious loss in time and money.

P. C. C. TRUSTEES RE-ELECT MR. CALKINS PRESIDENT

Under the provision of the plan of re-incorporation of the Plainfield Country Club, the twelve trustees met last night in the rooms of the Charity Organization Society and re-elected these officers for the year: President, Leighton Calkins; vice president, J. P. Stevens; secretary, Dr. F. E. DuBois; treasurer, S. D. Lounsbery. Other details concerning the new by-laws, etc., were considered so that hereafter the club will have twelve trustees to look after the business of the club instead of nine as before.

TRESPASSER IN COURT.

John Long, 17 years old, of 823 George street, whose father was killed by a train several years ago while walking along the railroad tracks, was arrested yesterday afternoon for trespassing on the tracks of the Jersey Central Railroad. He was seen at Westfield avenue by Railroad Detective John Laverette, as he alighted from a speeding train, narrowly escaping death or injuries as his body struck the ground several inches from the revolving wheels. After a severe reprimand, during which he told the offender of the danger of trespassing on the railroad tracks, City Judge DeMeza suspended sentence.

NON-SUPPORT CHARGE.

Cornelius Perrine, 36 years old, of 186 North Front street, was arrested yesterday on complaint of his wife who lives at 39 East Fourth street. She charges him with non-support. Their three children live with her. According to investigations by the authorities Mrs. Perrine, it is said, was to blame for the separation. He was released to appear on Monday.

L. L. SHEPPARD DIES OF HEART TROUBLE

Broken in spirit and health since the death of his daughter, May, who succumbed to heart trouble four years ago, Lucian C. Sheppard, 72 years old, of 28 Somerset place, was stricken suddenly this morning with the same disease while sitting in the kitchen of his home after he had eaten a hearty breakfast. He died before the members of the family could summon medical aid.

Mr. Sheppard was a veteran of the Civil War and lived in this city for over twenty-five years, where he had been connected with many social and fraternal organizations. Although his health has been on the decline for a long time his death came as a sad and unexpected blow to his relatives and many friends.

Born in September, 1840, in Hamden, Hunterdon county, Mr. Sheppard learned the carpenter trade after receiving a fair education in the schools of that place. At the outbreak of the Civil War he enlisted in Company E, Thirty-first, N. J. Volunteers, and served until honorable discharged July 4, 1866. On January 17, 1867, he was married at Glen Gardner, where he lived for several years before coming to Plainfield.

Mr. Sheppard was a member of Winfield Scott Post, G. A. R.; Local Carpenters' Union, of which he was treasurer; Noah Dove Encampment, I. O. O. F., and was Past Noble Grand of Plainfield Lodge, No. 44, I. O. O. F. Besides his wife he is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Elmer Garretson, of Roselle Park; two sons, Luther L. Sheppard, of Brooklyn, and Edgar F. Sheppard, of this city, and three grandchildren.

Complete funeral arrangements have not been made although it is assured that interment will be made in Spruce Run cemetery, Glen Gardner.

PLAINFIELD GETS FIFTY THOUSAND

MAKES TOTAL $150,000

Amount Available for Structure's Erection is $120,000—Not Known When the Work Will Be Begun.

Among the last official acts of President Taft was the signing of the Public Buildings bill as passed by Congress, and by it Plainfield obtained an additional appropriation of $50,000 for the Federal building. The original appropriation was $100,000, and after $30,000 had been spent for a site, the remaining $70,000 was considered inadequate for the building. Senator Martine and Congressman Tuttle succeeded in having an item of $50,000 put in the general bill and now the postoffice building to be located at Watchung avenue and Second street will be erected at a cost of $120,000.

In response to a telegram sent by the Daily Press, which read: "Was Plainfield's $50,000 in bill as passed?" Senator Martine this afternoon made this reply by wire:

It is not know when the work will be started.

The committee will later meet with the Democrats and submit recommendations after the latter have determined the number of places which will be allowed to minority and what chairmanships will be accorded to minority.

PARLIAMENT DEADLOCK.

(By Telegraph to The Daily Press.)

Ottawa, March 6.—The deadlock in the Canadian House of Commons over the clause in the Navy Bill which authorizes a grant of $35,000,000 to the British Government for naval purposes still continues and the House has now been in session for three whole days. In well informed quarters it is declared that there are strong prospects of a general election in Canada very soon.

AFTER BEEF PACKERS.

(By Telegraph to The Daily Press.)

Chicago, March 6.—Federal Judge Landis opened today probably the most important government case since that against the beef packers, the attempt to defraud the government out of $10,000,000 in Alaska coal lands. Among the lawyers for the defence are A. C. Frost and Judge Robinson. The government is represented by Mr. Wilkerson and others.

FOR TARIFF ONLY.

(By Telegraph to The Daily Press.)

They claimed that thus the attention of the country would be forced on the tariff revision.

LOCAL MERCHANTS MUST BE PROTECTED

So Says Judge DeMeza in Fining a Newark Peddler $10.

"Our merchants must be protected," said City Judge DeMeza, when passing sentence this morning on four peddlers from Newark who were arrested yesterday for selling their wares on the streets without a license. "They pay high taxes," the court continued, referring to the local merchants, "and they pay high rents for their various places of business and this practise of out of town canvassers coming to Plainfield and doing business without first securig a license has got to stop."

The peddlers were arrested yesterday afternoon in Central avenue selling vegetables. John Lewis, 34 years old, was the "boss" of the quartette, and was fined $10. The others, Albert Brown, 20 years old, of 42 Mulberry street; Arthur Haller, 18 years old, of 92 Norfolk street, and John Weeder, 43 years old, of 207 Sussex avenue, all of Newark, were given suspended sentences.

Michael Dayon, of New York, who said he was a Spaniard, was also arrested yesterday on a similar charge. He was caught selling cigars and was fined $10. Incidentally Judge DeMeza was one of the many persons approached by the cigar peddler during his short stay in this city.

EXHIBITION BY P. S. C. OF STREET LIGHTS

Tungsten and Carbon Arcs Illuminated for Public Inspection.

The special street illumination being provided by the Public Service Corporation on West Second street, Central and Madison avenue, was inspected by a number of people last night. In the block on West Second street, between Park and Madison avenues, there are three carbon arc lights of 2,000 candle power, and in the block between Madison and Central avenues there are five high power Tungsten lamps. Tungstens of the same candle power are also used on Madison and Central avenues.

While there was a difference of opinion regarding the two style of lamps, the majority seemed to favor the Tungsten as giving possibly the greatest amount of white light. Beside these lights are placed nearer the ground and the illumination covers a greater area. The carbon arc being higher up, it does not appear to give an equal area of illumination.

This demonstration will be continued for the rest of the week so as to give everybody ample opportunity to see it and determine which in their opinion would be the best light for street illumination. It is undoubtedly the intention of the street lighting committee to provide arc lamps for the business section, unless it should be shown that the Tungstens would give as good service, while the present incandescent light in the residential section will probably be succeeded by the high power Tungsten.

DENTIST TELLS OF WORK IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Dr. William E. Stelle was the speaker at the monthly meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association of the Bryant-Lincoln Schools yesterday afternoon taking as his subject "The Care of Children's Teeth." He told of his work as school dentist in this city and the co-operation he had received from the parents of children examined. The relation of teeth care to the child's health was described. He outlined a plan for inducing children to clean their teeth regularly and thoroughly.

The nominating committee reported and the secretary stated that a petition had been sent to the Board of Education asking for an extension of the night school course. The reply to this request was read, the board have granted a continuance of three weeks providing the pupils pay the salaries of the teachers engaged in the work.

SUNDAY LETTER BOX COLLECTION

Postmaster E. H. Bird Gives Out List Showing Where Service Will Be Given.

ANOTHER CUT POSSIBLE

Note Whether One of the Eighty-eight Boxes is on Your Corner and Govern Yourself Accordingly—Orders From Washington.

Following the announcement of many changes at the local postoffice service and personnel, Postmaster E. H. Bird today made public the list of letter-boxes from which the Sunday collection of mail will be made in the future. Out of a total of 116, collections will be made from 88 boxes, cutting out 28 boxes which are located in the residential section of the city. When Mr. Bird was in Washington, recently, he asked for an appropriation of $124.80 to make these collections as before. This was refused, and he was further informed that Plainfield was one of the few places in the country where Sunday collections are made from all the boxes.

Even in the largest cities the collections are made only from the business sections, and the government official expressed surprise that collections were being made from all the boxes here. On the basis of this, Mr. Bird has revised his list, cut out 28 boxes which are strictly in the outlying districts and will make the collections from 88 boxes. This will mean an expense of $1.50 a Sunday per man, counting on the services of three men for five hours' work. It may be possible that the government may not allow Mr. Bird an appropriation to that extent and in case it does not a further curtailment of collection will be necessary. This Sunday collection will be started at 3:15 o'clock in the afternoon, so that persons having letters to send out should see that they are placed in boxes by that hour. The collections will be started in various parts of the city. They must be made by substitute carriers, as Mr. Bird cannot use the regulars unless they are given an equal amount of time off during the week. This he cannot do

American Youths Refuse to Be Sailors.

SHIPS USE CHINESE CREWS.

Lines Which Will Traverse Panama Canal Forced to Man With Mongolians. Sailors of Old Were Hard—New Breed Want Luxuries—Menace to Merchant Marine.

One of the serious difficulties for American shipowners who intend to build steamships to trade through the Panama canal from New York to the Pacific coast and to the far east and Australia will be to get qualified officers and men to man their vessels. At the present time the big Pacific mail liners from San Francisco to Japan and China carry Chinese crews with American officers. If they were to be compelled by law to change, as the Firemen and Sailors' union wishes, there are not sufficient men available at San Francisco or Seattle to man the ships.

If a big mercantile marine is built up for the Panama trade on the Atlantic coast the shipping men say that the vessel would have to be manned by Chinese or colored men from the West Indies and the officers would have to be taken from European countries by offering higher wages. At the present time local steamship lines to the West Indies have difficulty in getting a sufficient number of officers for their ships and have to carry Cuban or Spanish firemen and sailors.

In the American liners to Southampton, where cadets are offered every inducement to go to sea and learn to become officers, they cannot get the right kind of boys to take it up. The boys will go for two or three trips to see a little of the world, but the cold nights on deck, instead of being at home in their warm beds, dampen their ardor for a nautical career.

Veteran Relates Experience.

The first officer of a big freighter leaving New York for Australia recently via the Cape of Good Hope said:

"Sailors and firemen have to be handled with gloves now and pampered as if they were hothouse plants. They have jam, marmalade, butter, pickles, two kinds of fresh meat at a meal, vegetables, ham and eggs twice a week for breakfast, fish and oatmeal porridge with milk and other delicacies that were unheard of when I first went to sea thirty years ago. I can see the time coming when the chief officer of a liner addressing a sailor will have to say: 'Pardon me, Mr. Smith, but will you kindly step forward and request the gentleman who attends to the lamps to favor me with a few moments' conversation in my cabin? Do not disturb him, I pray you, if he is engaged, but let me know, and I will call upon him myself.'

"In my young days at sea we lived on salt horse and salt pork, with lots of hardtack and hard work," the chief officer continued, "and an onion was a luxury. The crews of the packet ships that made the record passages across the Atlantic and to China round the Cape of Good Hope were fed on the roughest rations, but they were as hard as nails and could stay on deck forty-eight hours at a stretch. As the old saying went in describing a sailor of the sailing ship times, 'Every hair of his head a rope yarn, each finger a marlinspike and every drop of blood in his body Stockholm tar.'

"Now the misfits that are sent to a ship to look for a job after every other chance ashore has gone wear white shirts, smoke cigarettes, chew gum and go before the consul to complain if they are asked to stop up on deck for one watch when the work has to be done.

Landlubber In Crew.

"Last voyage I had one young fellow who shipped as able seaman and did not know the difference between the forepeak and the lazarette, but he was an authority on Byron, the bo'sun told me, and read poetry to the men on their watch below. One day I told him to go on the foc'sle head and clear away some gear that had been left there by the previous watch on deck, and he looked at me in a pained way and said, 'What—in this rain, sir?' When I recovered from my astonishment I made a run at him, and he went right away without further hesitation.

"In less than five years from now you will find that all the big lines will be manned by lascars, Chinese or negroes. The day of the white seaman is passing quickly, and it will be difficult to keep up the supply for the navies too.

"The White Star, Cunard, Royal Mail Steam Packet and other big lines have great trouble in keeping up their supply of junior officers. They have raised the pay and started pension funds to tempt young boys of decent education to go to sea and also have sailing ships trading to Australia to train them to become officers. The Royal Mail company has been compelled to take cadets from the training ships stationed at Liverpool and London as junior officers until they have become experienced and able to pass their examinations. Of course they do not have charge of watches."

SMOCK DIVORCE TESTIMONY.

Elizabeth, March 6.—Testimony in the divorce action of Mrs. Susan B. Smock, of Asbury Park, was heard yesterday by former Chancellor William J. Magie, sitting as special master in the county court. Mrs. Smock is suing her husband, George B. Smock, a lumber and coal dealer, for absolute divorce. She names an Asbury Park woman. After testifying that she played detective on her husband in 1912, she said she followed her husband to the home of the woman mentioned, saw him enter, and after his return home accused him. She declared her suspicions of her husband were aroused as long ago as 1910. Mrs. Smock recently resigned as a teacher in the First Congregational church of Asbury Park, because, she said, she could not be at the same church where her husband is superintendent of a Sunday-school.

TO ELECT SUSSEX SCHOOL BOARD

Sussex, March 6.—The annual school meeting for Sussex Borough will be held in the public school building Tuesday evening, March 18. Five members of the Board of Education are to be chosen at this meeting. The Board of Education has decided not to raise any money for the school support at this meeting, as several bills now pending in the Legislature make uncertain the amount of local school tax that may have to be raised.

GOVERNOR TAYLOR?

It is rumored about the State House at Trenton, that Chancellor Walker may appoint Acting Governor Fielder to the Vice-Chancellorship made vacant by the resignation of Lindley M. Garrison, who has become President Wilson's Secretary of War. Should that come to pass Leon H. Taylor, Speaker of the House, would succeed Fielder in the gubernatorial chair, and Taylor would not only be the youngest Governor in New Jersey's history, but also the youngest among the governors of the forty-eight States. Taylor was born on December 22, 1882, and the State Constitution provides that a governor shall not be less than thirty years of age.

A STRONG CABINET.

Many of the leading newspapers of the country hold to the opinion that President Wilson's Cabinet is one of the strongest in history and ranks with those of Lincoln and Cleveland, the latter's Cabinet during his first term particularly having been an especially fine one. Regardless of sectional considerations, the new President selected the very ablest men he could find, men exceptionally well qualified for the particular positions for which they were chosen and who have been known to be thoroughly in sympathy with his progressive policies and ideals.

That there was severe criticism of the appearance made by New Jersey's troops in the inaugural parade is not surprising. While the men showed excellent military training, their overcoats spoiled everything for them. The State, it seems, will not purchase the olive drab overcoat, as worn by the guards of every other State, and the New Jersey citizen-soldiers are compelled to wear the old style blue overcoat.

No longer will the returns from Vermont be considered as a barometer by Presidential election forecasters for the Granite State's constitution has been changed providing that the State elections be held in November and not in September. But then, there will still be Maine elections early enough to satisfy those who figure out the political situation.

Richard Olney, who made a name for himself as a Cleveland Cabinet officer, is mentioned for the Ambassadorship to Great Britain, and as President Wilson desires men of Cabinet size for the chief foreign appointments, it would not be surprising to learn that the Massachusetts lawyer gets the most coveted billet.

SWORD OF BALBOA HELD BY MARINES

Ancient Blade Is Taken to Chicago.

IS FOUR HUNDRED YEARS OLD

Rusted and Eaten Away Weapon Still Capable of Being Bent Double—Made of Toledo Steel, Secret of Which Is Lost—It Was Dipped In Blood of Many Warriors.

A story of romance, of death and of adventure more strange than any yet written into fiction has been etched with blood and with rust upon a blade of steel.

Four hundred years have passed in writing the story, a story that had its beginning when Vasco Nunez de Balboa led his band of adventurers across the mainland of Central America to the coast of the Pacific and a story to which "finis" now has been written in the bringing of the rusted blade to Chicago. It is the story of the sword of Balboa.

On a trophy littered table in the Chicago headquarters of the United States marine corps the sword of the discoverer of the Pacific ocean is lying. It was recently taken to Chicago by Major W. N. McKelvey, who since last August has been in command of a battalion of the First regiment of marines that suppressed a revolution in Nicaragua.

Taken From Revolutionist.

"It has had a strange history, this sword," the major said as he fingered the ancient weapon. "I found it gripped in the fingers of a revolutionary leader who had been killed when we captured Granada. The sword had been dipped by this man in the blood of soldiers of the republic. Before it reached his hands it rested for a brief time in a museum in the city of Managua. That's how we know it was the sword of Balboa. A native recognized it as the blade once in the museum."

It was in Toledo, Spain, that the sword was hammered out. The secret of the manufacture of Toledo steel has been lost to the world forever. Rusted and eaten away by four centuries, it still is possible to bend the long blade double. With the releasing of the pressure it whips itself into a straight, true line.

Sword Carried to Pacific.

Balboa carried the weapon with him on his march across Nicaragua. Tradition and what little history has been written tell that the sword was plunged into the heart of many a resisting native. When the adventurer finished his march to the western coast of Central America the blade was bathed in the waters of the Pacific.

Balboa was slain close to where the town of Granada now stands. The sword he carried passed into the hands of his murderer.

The years rolled on. In the course of time the blade was carried by warriors in many revolutions. In the little wars of the Central American aborigines the sword, lost to them by the Spanish wanderer, was carried, their traditions say, by every victor of each generation.

More years came and went and a semicivilization supplanted the savagery found by Balboa in the early sixteenth century. But the war and revolutions still continued, and upon the blade of the sword still was written the story of death.

Taken From Museum by Rebels.

It was a quarter of a century ago, Major McKelvey says, that the blade, now rusted and worn, but still vibrant and steel true, found its way into the museum in Managua. It was during the last summer that the latest revolution disrupted the country. General Zeledon gathered about him a ragged troop, and an almost successful effort was made to overthrow the government.

Arms were scarce, and even the relics in the museums were confiscated by the rebels. Once more, 400 years after its first blood baptism, the famous sword passed into the hands of a fighting man.

"But its history of bloodshed is written," Major McKelvey said as he finished the tale. "It's only a relic now—a harmless relic."

As the sword fell upon the trophy table its blade hummed for a single moment in vibration.

EATS HAILSTONES AND DIES.

Acute Indigestion From Globules Causes Boy's Death.

The eating of hailstones is believed to have caused an attack of acute indigestion which ended fatally recently for five-year-old Luther Quinn, son of Mrs. Vivian Quinn of South Orange, N. J.

The boy went out after a storm and gathered up a lot of the stones. They looked so much like candy he was tempted to eat them. He devoured a number of the white globules and became ill soon afterward.

Grand Opera at Bedside.

Because Adolphus Busch of St. Louis and his wife were too ill to attend her concert one night at Los Angeles, Cal., Mme. Lillian Nordica next day visited them and sang at their bedside at Ivy Wall, their Pasadena home. Mr. Busch had a severe cold.

Automobile Omnibus Belt Line Service For This City

Interior View 32 Passenger Sauer Bus.

The promoters of the new auto bus service to be inaugurated in this city within a few days, are busy completing the details. The handsome car arrived in town a few days ago and has been the admiration of everyone who has seen it. It was built by the International Motor Company, of Plainfield, and represents the very latest type of construction in the bus line.

The bus will comfortably seat thirty-two passengers. The interior is not only roomy, but is well lighted and ventilated. It is proposed to operate the bus between the city and South Plainfield, making the trip each way in ten minutes, and to establish a belt line service in the city and borough to accommodate commuters in going to and from the trains to their homes. Manager Pritchard is well pleased with the arrangements thus far and the prompt response of the Plainfield people and he feels assured that the new venture will be a success. There is herewith shown an interior view of the new bus.

TO LAUNCH WORLD'S GREATEST VESSEL

Aquitania, 50,000 Tons, Will Be the Biggest Ship Afloat.

Glasgow, March 6.—During the past few months the work of building the new Cunard liner Aquitania has proceeded so rapidly that her builders, the firm of John Brown and Company, of Clydebank, expect to have her ready for launching in about four weeks. Owing to the extraordinary size of the vessel the Clyde River is being deepened and widened opposite the shipyard, in anticipation of the launching.

It is many years since there was the same amount of interest attached to the building of a new liner for transatlantic service as is shown in the Aquitania. This interest is due almost wholly to the extreme size of the vessel. In her present condition on the slips at Clydebank she presents a wonderful spectacle, appearing something like an eleven-storied skyscraper in course of construction.

The Aquitania will have a gross tonnage of 50,000 tons, or 5,000 tons greater than the Olympic, the largest ship now afloat. The Aquitania and the Hamburg-American liner Imperator, now building at Stettin, will have the same gross tonnage, though in other measurements the Cunarder will eclipse the German vessel. The dimensions of the Aquitania are 885 feet length and 95 feet beam, while those of the Imperator are 710 feet length and 90 feet beam.

Ever since the contract for the Aquitania was awarded to the Clydebank builders in December, 1910, it has been generally known that the new vessel was to be the largest ship ever built; but it has not been generally realized how very much larger the ship was to be than any of the huge liners which have excited wonder in the past by their great proportions. As already stated the new vessel will have a much greater tonnage than the White Star liners Olympic and her sister ship, the ill-fated Titanic. Those record-breakers of but a few years ago, the Baltic and the Adriatic, length 709 feet and tonnage 23,000 and 24,000 respectively, are not to be compared with the Aquitania.

Brought to land, the Aquitania would dwarf great works of which man has long been prone to boast. The Washington monument in the United States capital, whose 555 feet was for years the world's record for high construction, would make only a fair prop for the new steamer leaning against it. The big thing of the sea would overtop the famous Woolworth building in New York city by more than 100 feet.

The speed of the new vessel will be about 23 knots an hour. This is considerably less than the records of some of the transatlantic liners now in service, but is considered fast enough for all practical purposes. The interior furnishings and decorations of the Aquitania are planned on the most lavish scale, and she will in every way merit the description of a floating city. She will have accommodations for 650 first class passengers, 740 second class, and 2,400 steerage passengers. How greatly the new vessel will exceed all others in the nature of the passenger accommodations is shown by the fact that the first class staterooms are to be 50 per cent. larger than the customary size.

With so much space available features are possible that have never before been introduced. There will be a choice of dining rooms, a restaurant, grill, tea room, tea garden, rathskeller, palm gardens, women's salons in different decorative periods, swimming pool, Turkish baths, gymnasium and tennis courts. An entirely new feature will be a completely equipped theatre. It is said that a theatrical company with a repertoire of plays will be provided for the vessel by a New York manager.

The Aquitania will be as complete in her safety devices as in her luxurious equipment. The number of her life-boats and rafts will meet all the requirements of the new regulations of the British Board of Trade, while the number of her watertight compartments will be greater than those of any vessel now afloat. An automatic device on the bridge will control the great steel doors separating the compartments, making it possible for a single hand to close them all in case of danger. Furthermore the system will include an electrical indicator by which the officer on the bridge cannot fail to detect any defect in the working of the safety devices. Still another set of safety devices will guard against fire in every part of the ship. In addition, the vessel will be equipped with a powerful wireless system which will enable her to keep in constant communication with the land during the entire passage across the Atlantic.

CO.'S EXPERIENCES AT THE INAUGURAL

The Local Citizen-Soldiers Had a Good Time at Washington, D. C.

Company K, after participating in the inauguration parade at Washington, D.C., Tuesday, arrived home late yesterday afternoon tired out but happy because of the way the organization conducted itself during the line of march. Owing to the crowded conditions of the railroads leading into the National capital the trains were late to convey the Jersey boys were delayed from two to six hours. The train carrying the First Battalion of the Second Regiment, of which Company K is a unit, left Washington about 2:30 yesterday morning, but when it arrived about ten miles the other side of Washington was delayed until after 6 o'clock, due to the turning over of an engine attached to one of the special trains while passing through the tunnels.

The local boys arrived in Washington Tuesday morning about 6:30 o'clock and at 7 detrained. Col. H. M. Reading formed the regiment and accompanied by the Second Regiment band and field music the regiment marched around Washington to the armory annex, a distance of about seven miles, where breakfast was served at 9:30 o'clock. From the time breakfast was served until 11 o'clock the boys had to themselves to see the town and purchase souvenirs. At 11:30 the regiment reformed and were marched to their place in the line of parade.

Although the Jersey boys were the only ones to wear the old fashioned blue overcoats, garments that did not receive the approval of the people witnessing the event, they were greeted as being the best in line with the exception of the West Point Cadets and the Annapolis Middies. When the Second Regiment began to pass the reviewing stand where the President reviewed the troops every man made a perfect allignment and received the hand clap and applause of all in that vicinity. One person was heard to remark that it was not a militia organization but belonged to the regular army and had just arrived in town the night before from Galveston, Texas. Remarks of this kind kept the boys in good humor and as the result they did the best that was in them. When passing one of the large grandstands in the Court of Honor on Pennsylvania avenue, a man standing in a window on the opposite side of the street lost his footing and fell to the ground, a distance of about forty feet. A hurry call was sent in for an ambulance and the man was removed to a hospital.

Following the main parade the Second Regiment marched back to the armory annex and after resting for a half hour had a light lunch served to them. From 7 o'clock at night until 11 o'clock the boys had another breathing spell in which to visit the various places of interest and to attend the exceptionally high class fireworks, which took the place of the inauguration ball. At 11 o'clock the companies again formed and marched to the train at the end of Pennsylvania avenue and the Pennsylvania Railroad along the shores of the Potomac. The boys were immediately taken to their cars and within a half hour after boarding nothing could be heard but the regular breathing of the tired out men. The next thing that the majority of the boys knew was when the train entered the Baltimore station yesterday morning at 7 o'clock. The run from Baltimore took more than twice the time that the usual trains cover it in because of the jams caused by special as well as regular trains all along the road.

From Trenton, where the First Battalion detrained, breakfast was served to the hungry men at 11:30 o'clock. A special train conveyed Companies F, I and C, of Elizabeth, and K, of this city, to Elizabeth, and Companies H, of New Brunswick, and M, of Somerville, as far as New Brunswick. The Elizabeth station was reached about 1:15 o'clock, and the local boys returned to town from there on the first train available, arriving in town between 2 and 3 o'clock. As soon as the company was dismissed at the armory the men went to their various homes where they enjoyed a warm bath and then after eating a little retired to their beds so as to be in condition to resume their work this morning.

N. P. H. S. NOTES.

Miss Eva Terry, instructor of history in the High School, has been called to her home at Riverhead, Long Island, because of the serious illness of her sister. Her absence from school will be indefinite and her place is now being filled by the other members of the faculty.

The Sigma Gamma Kappa Club will hold a Salamagunde party at the Y. W. C. A. on Saturday, March 15. St. Patrick's Day favors will be given to each guest.

Owing to the absence of Miss Terry, guardian of the Camp Fire Girls Club, the ceremonial meeting that was to have been held last night at the Y. W. C. A., has been indefinitely postponed.

Forty baseball candidates reported at the call. The largest squad that has ever reported and most of it fine material. That's lots of encouragement for the captain and coach.

Only one more game and then basketball suits will be laid away. Nobody will be sorry either. Baseball has attracted the eyes of all the athletes.

Carroll Taylor, a post-graduate, has been detained at his home for the past few days with a severe cold. However "Curly" will appear in a basketball suit tomorrow afternoon.

At a meeting of the Freshmen Class yesterday it was decided to form a class baseball team and Harry Hand was elected captain. A manager will be elected in the near future. This may be the start of interclass baseball league.

Lucile Ewart, chairman of the Junior-Senior feed committee, has selected the following persons to aid her in preparing the banquet: Marguerite Woolston, Edna Green, Mary Bennett, Helen Woodruff, Lois Peck and Aline Giddes.

POTATO SOUPS.

VERY nice soups may be made with that homely vegetable, the potato. Served with dumplings they make substantial additions to a light meal. As they can be made without the use of meat they are convenient for use during Lent.

Two Savory Concoctions.

Potato Soups With Eggs.—Take three medium sized potatoes and boil until done. Mash fine, add a teaspoonful each of salt and white pepper, a tablespoonful of butter, three cupfuls of milk and one and one-half cupfuls of boiling water. Place on the fire and let come to boil before removing from fire. Stir in the beaten whites of two eggs and serve at once with crisp salt crackers.

Welsh Potato Soup.—Mince the white of two leeks and fry them in two tablespoonfuls of butter. Add three medium sized peeled and quartered potatoes and one pint of white stock and cook quickly. When the potatoes are tender, rub them through a sieve. Add the desired quantity of boiled milk or thin cream and heat to the boiling point, adding the potato puree, a lump of butter and some croutons of fried bread just before serving.

Sustaining Soups.

Cream of Potato Soup.—Take a pint and a half of milk, boil with a slice of onion and pour this over one cupful of cold mashed potatoes, pressing through a strainer. Melt one tablespoonful of butter and stir into it one tablespoonful of flour, letting the mixture boil, but not brown. Cool slightly and stir in the milk slowly until thickened. Add the seasoning of salt and white pepper and serve very hot with nicely browned croutons.

Potato Puree.—Peel, wash and slice a quart of potatoes. Put them into a saucepan and add a large onion in slices, a small bunch of soup herbs, a crushed nutmeg, three bay leaves, a level teaspoonful of salt, a few grains of pepper and two quarts of water. Boil until the potatoes can be reduced to pulp. Then rub through a fine sieve and return to the saucepan on the stove. Add two cupfuls of boiling milk and a large tablespoonful of butter. Stir until the butter is absorbed and the puree is very hot. Serve with a plate of thin dry toast cut into small cubes.

MOTHERS' WORK

Conducted by the Plainfield Mothers' Association. Every Thursday

Contributing Staff.
Mrs. G. Stuart Simons, Mrs. Jos. Smith, Mrs. Wm. M. Sandford, Jr.

The Daily Press for Thursdays containing the column on Mother's Work will be sent by mail for one dollar a year, in advance.

Plainfield Mothers' Ass'n.

The regular meeting of the Plainfield Mothers' Ass'n which should be held on the first Friday of each month, March 7, has been postponed until the afternoon of Thursday, March 13, at 3:30 o'clock. The meeting will be held as usual in the High School and everyone is welcome. The address will be by J. J. Savitz, of Westfield, superintendent of schools of Union county, on "The Conditions of Rural Schools in Union County." Mrs. A. H. Reeve, president of the New Jersey Congress of Mothers, spoke on the subject of Country Schools at the February meeting rousing the interest of the women and urging them to interest themselves in the small schools near Plainfield. Mr. Savitz's address will be followed later in the season by one from Mr. Krebs on "Rural Schools in Somerset County," and it is hoped that the association will, through these lectures, find some definite practical way in which to co-operate with the educational bodies in these two counties.

State Council.

The State Council of Mothers' Clubs and Parent-Teacher associations will be held in Trenton on Saturday, April 5, under the auspices of the Mothers' Congress of New Jersey. Every association that is a part of the Congress is invited to send its president or her representative. Those associations particularly which do not expect to have representation at the Boston Congress in May should make great effort to send a delegate to Trenton. The session lasts one day and is devoted to reports from the different clubs on work accomplished, plans, methods and discussion of problems, and is of inestimable value to leaders of Parent-Teacher associations.

Congress of Mothers.

The Seventeenth Child Welfare Conference of the National Congress of Mothers will be held in Boston, Mass., from May 15 to 20, 1913. Every Mothers' Association and Parent-Teacher Association that has joined the New Jersey Congress of Mothers is entitled to representation at this conference. Each club is entitled to send its president or her representative and one delegate. Clubs of fifty or more may send one additional delegate and one delegate for each one hundred members thereafter. Secretaries of clubs will receive instructions from the State secretary in regard to arrangements for delegates in due time, but it is advisable for all associations to take up the matter this month, securing their delegates and arranging for their expenses. All privileges of the Congress are open to delegates but entertainment is not provided.

Prof. O'Shea, of Wisconsin University, says, "The National Congress of Mothers is a very potent force in this country in developing an interest in child life. I think it has been more consistently faithful in urging the cause of the better training of childhood than any other organization or institution in America. It has accomplished more than any other national or international society for the betterment of the conditions of child life. It is entitled primarily to chief recognition in any proceedings relating to child welfare. It has done more in America than has been done throughout the world thus far. It has developed independently of outside aid; its influence is of immense importance and as an organization, it is the natural centre around which other organizations should be formed."

Christmas Leftovers.

The aftermath of Christmas cards and tags as well as odds and ends of holly ribbons from the different packages and boxes may be made into acceptable and very useful bookmarks as follows:

In the smallest tags make a narrow slit at the top, through which draw a six or eight inch length of ribbon, knotting it firmly with a short V shaped snipped end so it will hold. Tie three cards so mounted together at the farther end in an ornamental knot and you will have a dainty, useful and appropriate bookmark for your holiday books.

For the Children

Happy Girl on Roller Skates With Her Doll.

The unusually warm winter has been a great time to thousands of children in various parts of the country because of the lack of frosts that should come in Jack Frost's train. But old Boreas has so far failed to live up to his reputation. His frigid breath he has kept to himself or blown it so gently that it has lost its power. The grown folks probably like the mild weather, but not the little ones. Coasting and skating are sports too enjoyable to give up without protest. To have them cut out by the grumpy old south wind is almost a calamity. Thousands of pairs of new skates and gayly painted sleds have yet to feel the touch of ice and snow. However, grumbling will not help matters, and it is well to enjoy what you may. That is evidently what the girl in the picture thinks. She has strapped on her roller skates and taken dolly out for an airing.

How Tigers Are Caught.

Tigers are captured as cubs and also when fully grown. Often the animal hunter, to the delight of the natives, will entrap some much dreaded man eater. The tigers are caught in large pitfalls, and various methods of securing the animals are adopted. In some cases a strong wooden trap is fixed in the pit, and when the animal falls through the lightly covered mesh at the top it traps and cages itself automatically. In others it merely falls into a big hole and has to be secured and dragged out by ropes.

In certain parts of India the natives are so daring that they will place a collar, from which hang a number of twenty foot ropes, around the neck of the newly caught tiger. To the end of each rope a man will hang for dear life and by pulling against each other guide the infuriated brute along the path they wish to follow. In this manner they literally walk the tiger to market.

A Queer Story.

One day—one day Willie Jones went out in the back yard, and there he saw a rope hanging over the alley fence—a big rope—and Willie Jones just took hold of that rope and he pulled and he pulled and he pulled and he pulled, and after awhile he pulled the yard full of rope, and it reached up high in a pile, and it all fell down on top of Willie Jones and buried him, but Willie Jones didn't care, and he just kept on pulling and pulling and pulling and pulling at that old rope, and pretty soon he pulled so hard that he pulled the end off the rope, and Willie Jones saw that there wasn't any end to the rope and he'd have to go on pulling and pulling and pulling and pulling forever, but he didn't want to do that, and so he stopped pulling and went in to breakfast.—Chicago News.

Game of Fly Away.

Five or more children may play this game either in the schoolroom or playground. The children are seated with their hands in their laps. When "it" says, at the same time raising his hands, "Fly away, mosquito," or "Fly away, robin," or "Fly away," followed by the name of any other thing that flies, the rest of the players are to raise their hands. When he says, "Fly away," followed by the name of some animal that does not fly, the players are not to raise their hands, although the leader raises his. Any one making a miss, either by not raising his hands at the right time or by raising them at the wrong time, becomes "it."

Mary Ann.

I studied my tables over and over and backward and forward, too.
But I couldn't remember 6 times 9, and I didn't know what to do
Till sister told me to play with my doll and not to bother my head.
"If you call her 'Fifty-four' for awhile you'll learn it by heart," she said.

So I took my favorite Mary Ann (though I thought 'twas a dreadful shame
To give such a perfectly lovely child such a perfectly horrid name),
And I called her my dear little "Fifty-four" a hundred times till I knew
The answer of 6 times 9 as well as the answer of 2 times 2.

Next day Elizabeth Wigglesworth, who always acts so proud,
Said "6 times 9 is 52," and I nearly laughed aloud.
But I wished I hadn't when teacher said, "Now, Dorothy, tell if you can."
For I thought of my doll and—sakes alive, I answered, "Mary Ann!"

GOOD GIRLS' GAME AT SCOTCH PLAINS

Plainfield Y. W. C. A. Girls Will Meet the Parish House Representatives.

The postponed meeting of the Y. W. C. A. and Scotch Plains Parish House girls will be staged on the latter's court tonight in the nature of a basketball game. These two teams were scheduled to meet two weeks ago, but because of the interscholastic contest on that date the affair was called off almost at the last minute. The 'Plains' girls have been aching to get a chance to display their basketball prowess against the association quintet all season and the game tonight will without doubt be a hotly contested one from every point of view.

While the Parish House girls have played a good many more games than the Y. W. C. A. team to date, the latter has shown some fine basketball in the two games played with outside teams and will make the home team play to their best advantage in order to come out ahead in tonight's game. A number of the same players who will take part in the championship game against the Nonpareils at Saengerbund Hall tomorrow night are scheduled to play on the Parish House court tonight and the final result will throw some light on the Nonpareil's chances of victory in the game tomorrow night. Both teams can boast of some star performers and as is generally the case in feminine contests individual goal shooting will likely play a prominent part in the contest.

"MAC" SAYS

P. H. S. basketball players had the use of Saengerbund Hall yesterday afternoon. Wonder if this will have any effect on the outcome of that deciding game Saturday afternoon?

Captain Dunning, of the N. P. H. S. baseball team, was quite overcome yesterday afternoon when forty candidates reported to his initial call for practise. Dunning is getting a start on other nines as his first practise was held out of doors. The weather looks like something else besides baseball this afternoon.

Some satisfaction for the interscholastic official who wants to bet on the third match. The New York Legislature has passed a bill that would forbid betting "with or without the exchange of money." Soon we'll all be able to pay our rents without handing our landlords any money. What is this "land of the free" coming to?

Although it is getting pretty late in the season that proposed city championship league sounds like good dope. Four games a weeks would soon dispose of the situation.

Because of injuries to players, all girls' basketball has been called off at Dunellen. At least one team has finished its season on time.

March 1 was the end of the basketball season (according to rule books), but what can you do when the weather man says more basketball and no baseball?

Coach Martin, of the Westfield High School basketball team, claims that he does not like to referee. It is hard to believe that any man of sound mental faculties dislikes to earn money in this easy fashion. However, Martin continues to accept those championship jobs around here occasionally without much of a kick.

Basketball at Scotch Plains tonight—Y. W. C. A. vs. the Scotch Plains girls.

The popular indoor game has produced more feminine quintets in and about this city than ever before this season. Rivalry is keen and each aggregation wants to dispose of the other along the shortest and quickest route.

The next thing the suffragists will demand of POOR MAN is membership in the Amateur Athletic Union, which now bars them. Get ready, James E. Sullivan.

HIGH SCHOOL TRAINERS PUTTING ON THE FINAL TOUCHES FOR LEAGUE TITLE GAME

Coach W. R. Wriston, of the Plainfield High School, and Coach George Webster, of the North Plainfield High School basketball team, are busy putting on the finishing touches for the much touted playoff in the interscholastic league carded for next Saturday afternoon. Both of the contenders are said to be on edge for the final battle of the scholastic season and both will put their strongest and most formidable lineups on the field. Everyone of the ten regulars due to take part in the fight are in the finest kind of condition and ready to put up the game of their life. The local schoolboys have long ago forgotten their sorrow over the announcement of the place on which the third and deciding game would be played and have turned all of their thoughts toward shaping out an aggregation that will be well qualified to give the boroughites the tussel of their life on the Saengerbund Hall court.

North Plainfield, on the other hand, is by no means idle because of the fact that the big struggle is scheduled to be played on its home floor. They look forward to the toughest kind of a battle, but like P. H. S., expect victory. Mr. Webster has had his players out on the court every day drilling in the fine points of the game, and developing the repertoire of trick plays in which the boroughites proved so proficient in the previous meetings. Taylor has been detained from practise during the last few days with a severe cold, but the little N. P. H. S. point getter will be right on deck Saturday afternoon, when the referee's whistle sounds. Townley, who has also been suffering from a slight injury, will be as good as ever by Saturday and ready to put up the best guarding game of his life against the lithe little Johnny Heron.

P. H. S. men are all well and intact, none of them having the slightest sprain of illness to look after. Yesterday afternoon the team, through the courtesy of N. P. H. S., was accorded the use of Saengerbund Hall for practise, and during the short time they had, familiarized themselves to a degree of satisfaction with the borough court.

Both of the High School coaches interested in the big fight are hearty advocates of the plenty of sleep plan and have ordered their men to be under the cover at 8 o'clock tomorrow night so as to get enough sleep before they go into the final tussel for a cup and seven medals. Although a number of the players have already made engagements for that night they have all displayed confidence in their respective trainers by taking the advice handed out and have called off all other conflicting dates. The local coaches' methods are not wholly original as some of the finest trainers in the country advocate the same idea along the sleep line, although some have had their troubles trying to enforce their restrictions.

Prof. Nicolson, secretary of the National Collegiate Athletic Association, who some time ago sent out questions on training to colleges all over the country, deduce from the replies he has received that getting students to go to bed early is the hardest thing trainers have to do. The questions sent out were on eligibility, training, physical condition and finances. By way of the summary Prof. Nicolson says:

"Ninety-two colleges (about 60 per cent.) enforce the one year rule. Of these thirty-one enforce the rule in modified form, debarring only those who have represented on an athletic team the college they first attended, and four administer the rule only for half a year. Forty-two colleges of 155 (about 27 per cent.) enforce the freshman rule, eleven enforcing the rule for a half year only, one for nine weeks, one for one month and two in the case of conditioned freshmen only. Ninety-two out of 150 colleges (more than 60 per cent.) debar students from their teams. Forty-eight out of 106 colleges (less than 50 per cent.) debar students in professional schools. Fifty-one out of 134 colleges (less than 40 per cent.) debar special students."

Concerning the answers on training Prof. Nicolson has this report: "Fifteen colleges report that they enforce the rules 'absolutely;' 31, 'strictly;' 17, 'fairly;' 4, 'not very well;' 2, 'as much as possible;' 1, 'not as strictly as we wish;' 2, 'cannot enforce them;' 1, 'do not know;' 12 report that they succeed in enforcing the rule against drinking, but are doubtful about the rule against smoking; one reports that the rule requiring the students to go to bed early is the hardest to enforce."

AMERICAN PLAYER NEEDS ONLY A DRAW TO WIN CUBAN TITLE

Havana, March 6.—A clean sweep was made of all the adjourned games in the chess tournament here yesterday, so that everything is in readiness for the final round today. Frank J. Marshall, United States champion, will enter the final stage with a full point advantage over Jose R. Capablanca, the Cuban champion, so that he needs to only draw his final game with Janowski in order to win the chief prize. Both Marshall and Capablanca won their unfinished games from the thirteenth round, the former defeating Blanco after a hard game lasting 58 moves, while Capablanca downed the French champion in 52 moves. This gave Marshall a total of 10½ points and Capablanca 9½ points. The best the latter can do now is to tie for first, in case he should win today and Marshall should lose. Janowski, who has all along been an unknown quantity, as he had lost comparatively few games, was put out of the running yesterday in consequence of his defeat by Capabalanca.

He also lost to Chajes in 45 moves, but defeated Blance in 47. In the other games Chajes won from Jaffe in 62 moves, and the Jaffe-Corzo game was drawn in 71 moves. The score to date:

Marshall	10½	2½
Capablanca	9½	3½
Janowski	8	5
Kupchik	6	7
Chajes	5½	7
Jaffe	5½	7½
Blanco	4	9
Corzo	3	10

The final pairing will be: Janowski and Marshall, Blanco and Marshall, Corzo and Chajes, and Kupchik and Capablanca.

HOW BOUND BROOK MEN GOT RACCOON

Little Animal Put up a Stiff Fight But Lucky Shot Caught Him Napping.

Owing to the many trappers who hunt the raccoon for his skin, which is becoming more valuable each year, the little animal is fast becoming very scarce, especially in this section of New Jersey. In the Watchung mountains the raccoon used to be seen. There is at present a bill before the Legislature to make a closed season on raccoons during the breeding season which will no doubt be passed.

On a recent coon hunt, Dr. J. Hugh, Vincent Bache and Claude Fisher, of the Public Service Corporation, of Bound Brook, nephew of Dr. C. R. P. Fisher, of Bound Brook, discovered a raccoon in a hollow tree.

Fisher climbed the tree to a limb opposite the hole and at a considerable height from the ground. Biting off the end of a shell he set off the powder within the hole, singeing the tail of the coon. That enraged animal came fiercely forth and forced Fisher out upon the limb. Had not a lucky shot from Bache brought the animal to the ground the consequences might have been serious for Fisher.

The Jersey raccoon is a pretty animal. Its body is about two feet long and is thick and stout. Its tail is about a foot long, large, bushy and distinctly ringed. Excepting bats and flying squirrels it is the most strictly nocturnal of animals. When hunting with a gun it must be sought on moonlight nights or in the very early morning.

FORTY CANDIDATES FOR N. P. H. S. NINE

Baseball Will Be Started at the Borough High School in Earnest.

Frank Dunning, captain of the North Plainfield High School baseball team, has taken advantage of the warm weather and in response to a call for candidates issued yesterday, had about forty very promising young ball tossers on the field. The material is exceptionally good this year and a strong nine will be put on the field. With Townley, Taylor, Levitz, Van Mater and Abrams covering the field positions not a ball should ever touch the ground. Smalley will probably preside behind the bat while Spencer and Stall will do most of the slab work. Larison and Parsch, both Freshmen, are very promising men for pitcher and shortstop respectively. Dunning will cover the initial sack and "Lefty" Burner will guard the second station. Unless some new man arrives Warren Townley will again play third. The shortstop position is still open and the best man will be chosen in the near future.

Principal Phelps will coach the squad. Regular practice on Hyde Oval will be started next Monday and a team will be rounded out for the first game with Montclair H. S. in the latter part of this month. A DRUBBING HANDED OUT BY GRACE BOYS

Dunellen Whittier School Team Vanquished on Local Court by Big Score.

Another one-sided victory was annexed by the Grace church boys' club basketball team on their home court last night with the Whittier School representatives, of Dunellen, as victims. The final count, which was 35 to 7, plainly showed the loose kind of a game that the visitors put up. The Grace boys scored at will from all angles of the floor running up a score of seventeen to one in the initial period of play. During the first half the Dunellenites were held to one point, and two came on a throw from the foul line.

The school boys picked up some in the final half, however, when the church representatives sent in substitutes and Pennock managed to cage Dunellen's only two field goals of the game.

The score:

RAHWAY NOW CLAIMS BASKETBALL TITLE

That High School Has a Fine Record but Has Not Played "Every Team in State."

Many and varied have been the calibre of basketball teams laying claim to the Northern New Jersey High School championship for the present season and nearly every day a new aspirant springs up in a new town. The latest team of High School boys seeking the title honor is Rahway and they advanced their claim yesterday afternoon in a form of a letter to surrounding High Schools conceded to be in the race. Rahway has been playing such teams as Barringer, East Orange, East Side and Camden High Schools and has been more than usually successful in its games this season. Rahway's claims have been fostered and pushed to the limit of prominence by those interested in Rutgers College athletics as the High School of that place has turned over to the Jersey college a number of fine athletes who have become prominent on the varsity track, baseball and football teams and the class basketball teams. In fact much of the Rahway High School's success in athletics is due to the coaching of Mr. Short, of Rutgers College.

Although Rahway has met neither Plainfield nor North Plainfield High School on the court this year, it is safe to say that either of the two High Schools would extend the Rahwayites to the limit in order to get away with the game. Claiming a championship and being really deserving of it are two different things, and the Rahway High School would have to consider a good many other surrounding High School aggregations before it got a clear title to the claim. Rahway recognizes Benedict Preparatory School as the real champion and is now trying to arrange for a home and home series with that team to decide the championship. As far as the Benedict Prep and Rahway athletes are concerned this solution of the problem is all right but it will be inflicting kind of a raw deal on the other likely aspirants at the same time.

THREE MANAGERS AT Y. M. C. A. MEETING

All of the Teams in Favor of Starting the League With Certain Concessions.

Although Physical Director Ostlin, of the Y. M. C. A., announced a meeting of the managers of the teams proposed as contenders in the city championship league about to be organized, only three out of the four aggregations were represented at last night's gathering. George Leighs, Jr., represented Hope Chapel; Andrew Hetfield, the Ajax, and E. C. Ostlin, the Y. M. C. A. first team. Nothing definite was done toward starting the organization but from the attitude evidenced last night it seems more than possible that the league will become a reality in the course of a week. The fact that the First Presbyterian aggregation was not representeed does not mean that they will not be in it, for this combination is one of the most enthusiastic backers of the project and will no doubt do their part toward pushing it.

The Hope Chapel manager favored the series for the city title but said at the same time that he, as manager of the Hope quintet, felt obligated to turn over a certain sum to the Chapel treasury at the end of the season which could be obtained in no other way than to complete the schedule that he has mapped out at present. He suggested that one of the games be played on the Hope Chapel court every Saturday night while the other two contestants were playing on the Y. M. C. A. court, but none of the other three teams favor the idea of playing games on the Hope court, which they claim is inadequate for championship purposes. This wrangle will, of course, have to be straightened out before anything definite can be done toward drawing up a schedule of games. If the league is started at once the series could be finished by the middle of next month and that would be in plenty of time so as not to interfere with the baseball season.

The Y. M. C. A. first team and Ajax are also heartily in favor of the proposition and want to see it started within the next week. The Y. M. C. A. will furnish gold medals for the contenders to fight for and the enthusiasm aroused ought to be keen and of the kind that is seldom evidenced in the popular indoor game.

Fashion Will Unmask Tomorrow—When

Gimbel Brothers

Launch the New and Authoritative Modes of Paris

in

La Promenade des Toilettes

A LITTLE more than a fortnight ago the atmosphere of the Rue de la Paix and the Place Vendome was filled with fascinating suspense—for all of Paris eagerly awaited the modes that the famous dressmakers would give to the World of Fashion for Spring. And when the crucial hour arrived, the models in every Salon were delightful surprises, for each artist seemed to have found different inspiration at the Muse of Fashion this season.

¶ Fearful that fascinating suspense surrounds the House of Fashions, for tomorrow GIMBELS will introduce to America the authentic Paris modes—the original models by

Paquin — Bernard — Beer
Drecoll — Bechoff-David — Poiret

¶ This presentation emphasizes once the fact that the Gimbel Store has the most efficient Fashion Organization in the world! Our Paris Bureau has kept in constant cable-touch with us, telling us about every model and all the important details for the preparation of this Exhibition. Indeed, it seemed as though Paris was but across the way! And, in turn, Old Neptune was kind, for all the express steamers that brought these models arrived on schedule time.

¶ And while the models were en route, we made ready for their reception here by reproducing a Scene on the Riviera, on our Eighth Floor—along the paths of which the thirty charming women who wear the Gowns and Wraps will promenade, so that many thousands of our friends may see this Exhibition of Modes, which will also include

And the New Accessories of Dress

¶ You are cordially invited to these exhibitions tomorrow at 10:30 A. M. and 2:30 P. M.—also on the days following.

INTERPRETER DISMISSED BY ELIZABETH COURT

Elizabeth, March 6.—Judge Connolly has notified Ferdinand Wasserberger, of 729 East Jersey street, who has been interpreter in the county courts for several weeks, that his services will not be required after April 13. Wasserberger will have served three months at that time and under the civil service rules can be dismissed on a question of conduct or inefficiency.

Wasserberger, it is said, gave wrong interpretations at two recent Polish trials. At a trial Monday, Ellis Cohen, one of the jurors sitting in the case, who understood the language of the witness, declared that Wasserberger had given a wrong meaning to the witness' answer. Others have made similar complaints.

Judge Connolly said yesterday that three men who had passed the examination besides Wasserberger are eligible for the place. They are: Alexander Beyerline and Karl Schaffer, both of this city, and a Trenton man.

EXTORTION CASE STILL ON; TWO PLEAS TAKEN

Trenton, March 6.—Taking of testimony was resumed before Judge Rellstab yesterday in the trial of August Clauss and Harry Tillotson, accused of sending a letter demanding money to John Walthery and Raffael Montafour, of Ridgewood. John Clauss, a son of August, was also indicted for the same offense, but pleaded guilty.

Joseph Villoni yesterday retracted a plea of not guilty and pleaded guilty to a charge of violating the federal white slave law. He will be sentenced March 17.

George W. Tracey retracted his former plea of not guilty and pleaded guilty to impersonating a United States officer. He will be sentenced next Monday. Tracey was before the court at the last term on a similar charge, but sentence at that time was suspended. He was arrested in Hoboken forty-eight hours later for practically a similar offense.

A jury late Tuesday afternoon returned a verdict of not guilty in the case of Edmund Buttakkay, indicted for alleged abstraction of $50 from a registered letter in Passaic.

STOCK DELIVERY SUIT IS UP TO COURT OF ERRORS

Trenton, March 6.—Argument was heard before the Court of Errors and Appeals yesterday in the suit brought by William M. Sheehan to compel Frank L. Humphreys and others, of Morristown, to deliver eighty shares of the capital stock of the Morris and Somerset Electric Company at the stipulated price of $85 a share. The Court of Chancery refused to order the stock delivered and Mr. Sheehan appealed from this decision.

The suit was based upon a plea to compel specific performance of an option on the stock alleged to have been given in 1911. A dispute arouse as to the terms of the contract and the defendants refused to deliver the stock when demand was made accompanied by a cash tender.

BERNARDSVILLE ACTS TO GET BOROUGH RULE

Bernardsville, March 6.—Asking that the town be incorporated as a borough, sixty citizens of this municipality have signed a petition for presentation to the Legislature, as the culmination of a mass meeting held at the Old Stone Hotel. The leaders in the movement were the committee of twelve which has agitated the change under the guidance of Peter B. Stryker.

Bernardsville, it was stated, pays more than fifty per cent. of the taxes of Bernards township, and on that ground, it was argued, should have the right to ask for separate incorporation. The moving reason for the petition, however, the speakers stated, lay in the opportunity Bernardsville would secure, under a borough form of government, to initiate changes that would make the town more attractive to all-year residents.

BACKES WILL SIT AT JERSEY CITY MONDAY

Trenton, March 6.—It was announced yesterday that Vice-Chancellor Backes will hear motions in Jersey City next Monday, while Vice-Chancellor Lewis is engaged in the trial of a case in this city.

Beginning next Tuesday Vice-Chancellor Backes will sit regularly in Trenton to hear both motions and arguments. The cases already referred to Vice-Chancellor Lewis and set down for trial by him will be transferred to the new vice-chancellor. Vice-Chancellor Lewis, however, will conduct adjourned trials.

Beginning next Tuesday, Vice-Chancellor Lewis will sit in Jersey City to hear cases on the chamber of Vice-Chancellor Garrison and he will also hear motions in Jersey City Monday morning.

Arrangements have been made by which Vice-Chancellor Backes will be given a room in the new wing of the State library. This will make available at the State House, at all times, a vice-chancellor, who may be reached for emergency business.

For Sale advertising will bring you cash for that unused office furniture.

BLUM MEANT WELL.

He Was Only Living Up to the Rules of His Club.

Under the second empire bores were so rampant that a sort of society or club was formed to fight them under the name of the "Rachat des Captifs." It was a mutual aid society, every member of which was bound to come to the rescue of any other in the clutches of a buttonholing bore. The signal of distress was given by unobtrusively scratching the side of one's nose, and a colleague on seeing this was expected to intervene and deliver his friend from captivity.

The society was so useful and so popular—even humanitarian, it may be said—that it flourished exceedingly for many years and grew rich in members and subscriptions. Among its members was the veteran journalist Ernest Blum, who, however, was rather clumsy at his work. He used to relate the following story:

"One day in passing the Gymnase I saw two men talking. I knew one of them and took off my hat to him, whereupon he at once scratched his nose.

"I, of course, thought, he was a member of the club in distress whom I ought to deliver, so approached and, not knowing what to say, cried out: 'My dear X., I am delighted to meet you. I have an important piece of news to tell you. Allow me,' turning to the other man. 'Certainly,' replied this gentleman. I took my comrade aside, saying: 'You know I have nothing at all to tell you. I only wanted to rescue you. That is all.' 'Rescue me from what?' 'Why, from the bore.' 'What bore?' 'The man you were talking to, naturally.' 'But he is my father.'"

Poor Blum had chanced upon somebody who was not a member of the society and who had merely scratched his nose absently or because he wanted to, which may happen to any man.—Paris Annales.

Fitted For the Part.

When a new member of the Irish house of commons made his first speech, Sir William Osborne asked who he was, and being told he replied: "Well, I think he will do. If the opposition have enlisted him, they are perfectly in the right, for he seems to have the finest face for a grievance of any man I ever beheld."—National Monthly.

A Remington Story.

On Thanksgiving day a number of years ago the late Frederic Remington was in London, his first visit to England, where he announced to his friends he intended to "have a real vacation, away from mustangs and Indians." As a tribute to the noted artist, American residents in London joined in arranging a splendid Thanksgiving feast, Remington, of course, to be the guest of honor. The chef of the Hotel Carlton was told to spare no expense in obtaining fat gobblers, bluepoints, sweet potatoes and other trimmings for the genuine old time dinner.

Not a hitch occurred to mar the occasion excepting that Remington failed to turn up. While London was raked fore and aft for the celebrated artist, the guests politely waited, waited until their stomachs quaked and their mouths watered for the luscious turkey. Late that night, when the feast was long since despoiled, one of the guests wandered into Buffalo Bill's wild west show at Earl's court. Remington sat there drawing.

"Do not disturb him," ordered Colonel Cody. "He's getting some good local color from these Creek Indians. He's been here since 10 o'clock this morning."—Philadelphia North American.

Missed a Fine Chance.

A well known doctor and a certain minister are great friends, but they dearly love a joke at each other's expense.

The latter once delivered a series of lectures, and one of them—on Palestine—was not interesting enough to please the audience, which gradually withdrew before its conclusion. Not long afterward the minister's house was entered by a burglar. He gave a graphic account of the affair to his friend, the doctor, and ended by saying:

"I had him on the flat of his back. I held him so that he could not move an inch."

"Good!" exclaimed the other. "But, my dear sir, what a splendid opportunity that was to have delivered to him your lecture on Palestine."

A New One on Him.

It was in one of those thriving southwestern cities where railroads abound that a tired and weary traveler accosted a policeman and asked the way to the Y. M. C. A. The copper was puzzled. He took off his hat and scratched his head. Finally he burst out: "Stranger, you've got me. I know where the Frisco is and the M., K. and T., but that Y. M. C. A. is a new one on me."—Everybody's.

DEMANDS MONEY, GETS TERM IN JAIL INSTEAD

Red Bank, March 6.—Charged with disorderly conduct, Harry Forney, of Camden, was arraigned before Recorder Harry C. Badeau yesterday and committed to the county jail for sixty days. The other night, it is alleged, Forney called at the home of several Maple avenue residents and demanded clothes and money. When he arrived in Red Bank in the afternoon he fell from the train and suffered a severe cut on the right leg, near the knee.

The police here are looking for a "Jack the Peeper." Complaints have been received that a man wearing a brown overcoat and a black slouch hat has been peeping through windows of houses on Maple avenue. The peeper is supposed to be a companion of Forney.

JERSEY CITY DEMOCRAT FOR VICE-CHANCELLOR

Trenton, March 6.—The new Vice Chancellor to succeed Lindsley M. Garrison, now Secretary of War in President Wilson's cabinet, will be a Democrat and will come from Jersey City. This definite information is contained in a statement just made by Chancellor Edwin R. Walker, of Trenton, in connection with the resignation of Vice Chancellor Garrison. Chancellor Walker will have the appointment of the new Vice Chancellor. The Chancellor received the resignation of Vice Chancellor Garrison yesterday afternoon.

Chancellor Walker's decision to name a Democrat is based upon the unwritten law that the Chancery Court shall be non-partisan, with the political parties as nearly equally represented as possible. Not counting the vacancy, there are four Democrats and four Republicans on the Chancery bench. The Democrats are the Chancellor and Vice Chancellors Stevens, Stevenson and John H. Backes, the latter just appointed. The Republicans are: Vice Chancellors Emery, Leaming, Howell and Lewis. The salary of a Vice Chancellor is $10,000 and the term seven years.

ANTI-SUFFRAGE.

(With double apologies to Mr. Kipling)

By Janet McCallum

"What are the bugles blowin' for?" said young Inquiring Head,
"To wake you up, to wake you up," old Votes-for-Women said.
"What makes you look so bright, so bright?" said young Inquiring Head.
"I've waited many years for this," old Votes-for-Women said,

For they're hangin' Anti-Suffrage, you can hear the dead march play,
The citizens are roused at last and celebrate today.
They've stripped her of her sophistry—her custom-made array—
An' they're hangin' Anti-Suffrage in the mornin'.

"What makes the rear-rank tremble so?" said young Inquiring Head.
"They fear a change of any sort," old Votes-for-Women said.
"What makes that queer old codger frown?" said young Inquiring Head.
"That's only Peter Pessimist," old Votes-for-Women said.

They are hangin' Anti-Suffrage, for she's blind as well as lame,
Her weapons all are rusty and her armour is the same,
An' she'll swing in half a jiffy for an antiquated dame—
Oh, they're hangin' Anti-Suffrage in the mornin'!

"She was the Leader of Out Set," said young Inquiring Head.
"Her leadin' days are over now," old Votes-for-Women said.
"I've heard her talk a score o' times," said young Inquiring Head.
"Well, common sense has silenced her," old Votes-for-Women said.

They are hangin' Anti-Suffrage, with a judgment calm and cool,
She's a poor benighted body, and her sex's ridicule,
So they're hangin' Anti-Suffrage in the mornin'.

"What's that so black against the sun?" said young Inquiring Head.
"That's Anti's cloak of ignorance," old Votes-for-Women said.
"What's that that whimpers overhead?" said young Inquiring Head.
"That's Prejudice a-takin' flight," old Votes-for-Women said.

For they're done with Anti-Suffrage—hear the march of progress play!
We are all lined up for duty, and we're startin' on our way,
An' we've many things to see to that are cryin' out today,
After hangin' Anti-Suffrage in the mornin'.

BANQUET ENJOYED BY BUSINESS MEN

FORCE TOASTMASTER

Loyal S. Wright, of New York, William Jeffery and Harry C. Runyon Among the Speakers — Wright Discusses Business of the Day.

Business in its crudest stages to the highest point of scientific perfection and the theory of successful enterprise, were discussed by Loyal S. Wright, of the Sheldon School, of New York, and other able speakers, at the banquet last night of the Business Men's Credit Association, held in the Waldorf Hotel, in East Front street. The dinner was up to the usual high standard of Henry Windham's hotel.

When the last demi-tasse had passed the lips of the diners who represented some of Plainfield's leading business houses and mercantile establishments, A. E. Force, who acted as toastmaster, introduced the principal speaker of the evening, Mr. Wright, whom he said was "a speaker of words and a doer of deeds."

Mr. Wright showed a keen insight into the essentials that spell success. His address was not a theoretical talk, but a practical one. It was the message that business success is largely dependent upon the proper development and character of the business man himself. "Good service to your customers," was the speaker's foremost motto for success, coupled with proper salesmanship and a keen power of constructive imagination. "The wagging tongue of a satisfied customer," he said, "is the business man's best advertisement."

Following a few introductory remarks Mr. Wright said in part: "We are living in an age of tremendous action, science and wonder-working; we are compelled to face this age that calls for the survival of the fit-

FUNERAL SERVICES OF G. T. HODGE TOMORROW

The funeral service of Goyn Talmage Hodge, of Somerville, who died yesterday at the home of his son, Peter B. Hodge, of Plainfield avenue, will be held tomorrow afternoon at 1 o'clock at the latter's home and at 2:30 o'clock at the Second Reformed church, Somerville. The burial will take place at Somerville. Mr. Hodge was visiting his son here when he died. He had been ill for the past two weeks.

Mr. Hodge was 82 years of age, and had lived in Somerville or vicinity practically all of his life. He was one of the oldest members of the Second Reformed church, Somerville, and a regular attendant at the services until ill health prevented. Mr. Hodge was for many years an assessor of Somerset county. During his younger days he was an expert accountant, but retired a few years ago. He was a cousin of the late Rev. Dr. DeWitt Talmage. Those surviving are Mrs. Huss, of Somerville; four sons, Peter B. Hodge, the East Front street druggist; Myers H. Hodge and Goyn T. Hodge, of Somerville, and Charles F. Hodge, of Point Pleasant.

The members have been inspecting the lighting system now being demonstrated on West Second street. Any complaints or suggestions that citizens may desire to make will be gladly received at the meeting. The reports of various committees will be made at the meeting and new members will be elected.

FISK IS PRESIDENT OF TUNNEL COMPANY

He Succeeds Wm. G. McAdoo Who Resigned to go in Cabinet.

New York, March 7.—Wilbur C. Fisk, vice president of the Hudson and Manhattan Railroad, in charge of operation of the Hudson tunnels, was elected yesterday to the presidency of that company to succeed William G. McAdoo, the new Secretary of the Treasury. Mr. McAdoo's resignation was acted upon at a meeting of the directors in No. 30 Church street. His place in the directorate will not be filled until the annual meeting.

The new president of the railroad has been closely associated with Mr. McAdoo since his brother, Pliny Fisk, head of Harvey Fisk & Sons, many years ago undertook the financing of the company. Wilbur C. Fisk was graduated from Princeton in 1890 as a civil engineer, and his technical knowledge was of great assistance to Mr. McAdoo in the construction of the tunnels. He has been general manager and has had the direct charge of train operation since the tunnels were opened. Therefore he is largely responsible for the efficiency of the system, although he gives the credit to Mr. McAdoo.

As for age, Mr. Fisk describes himself as "somewhere in the forties."

The new president is a brother of former Mayor C. J. Fisk, of this city. Leon R. Thurlow, former health officer here, is secretary to the president of the company.

TRUSTEES OF P. C. C. HOLD BUSY SESSION

After Officers Are Elected Plans Are Made for Golf Season.

The incorporators of the Plainfield Country Club organized at a meeting held in the Babcock Building on Wednesday evening. Organization was perfected by the incorporators electing themselves as trustees, in accordance with the vote of the club at the annual meeting. The certificate of incorporation was reported filed with the Secretary of State on February 28, and duly recorded in both Union and Middlesex counties. The incorporators adopted as by-laws the constitution of the old club, amended so as to provide for a board of twelve instead of nine trustees. G. P. Mellick, one of the new trustees, was elected for a one-year term; W. T. Kaufman, another new trustee, was elected for a two-year term, and A. A. Tilney was chosen for the three-year term.

On the adjournment of the incorporators' meeting, the trustees met and organized by re-electing Leighton Calkins as president. John P. Stevens was re-elected vice president; S. D. Lounsbery, treasurer, and Dr. F. E. DuBois secretary. The committee chairmen were also re-elected: R. H. Cox, house committee; R. S. Rowland, golf committee; S. W. Merrihew, tennis committee; J. E. Erickson, green committee; A. M. Collens was chosen chairman of the buildings committee.

The award of the second Junior Metropolitan Golf Championship to the local club was announced. The date will be the latter part of June. The date of the opening of the clubhouse was left to the house committee. The clubhouse will probably be opened early in April, with full restaurant service as early as the season permits.

The Metropolitan Women's Golf Association was awarded the usual one-day a month privilege. A special appropriation was made to cover the cost of a retaining wall for the driveway, and crushed stone surfacing. Committee chairmen were directed to present to the April meeting detailed written estimates of their requirements for the year. The secretary was authorized to issue a new club book.

An active season is anticipated with Mr. Eke, the superintendent, in full charge of all departments. Applications for membership should be sent to Dr. F. E. DuBois, secretary, 28 Washington avenue, who will supply application blanks on request. If filed this month, candidates can be elected so as to secure playing privileges without extra dues prior to the formal club opening in the last week of April.

SOCIETY'S PLANS FOR AFTER LENT

Dances and Other Events Scheduled to Take Place Following Easter.

STARTING ON MARCH 24

Mr. and Mrs. McWilliams, Miss Flanders, Mr. and Mrs. Depew and Mr. and Mrs. Megrew Issue Invitations.

Plainfield society will be unusually active immediately following Lent, the particular form of entertainment being a number of dances planned for both the city and borough by those who are prominent in society circles. So many of these affairs have been planned that in a few instances the dates will conflict, but there has been a desire to fix upon early dates after the Lenten season and the conflict seems to be unavoidable.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard McWilliams, of Hillside avenue, will give a large dance at the Hartridge Auditorium, on Easter Monday night, March 24, and on Wednesday night, March 26, at the same place, Mr. and Mrs. R. Henry Depew will give a dance. A large number of invitations have been issued for both of these affairs.

Miss Elizabeth Flanders and her brother, William D. Flanders have issued invitations for a large dance to be given at the Park Club on Thursday night, March 27, and another private dance is announced to be held at the Park Club on Friday night, March 28.

Another dance of widespread local interest will be gien at the Hartridge Auditorium on Thursday night, April 4, by the combined dancing classes which are in charge of the Misses Florance, of Elizabeth. Several of these dancing classes have been formed by society folks, meeting regularly throughout the winter, and the affair promises to be a delightful one.

Mr. and Mrs. George Megrey, of Central avenue, have issued initations for a dance to be given at their home on Friday night, April 4, and a second one on Thursday night, April 11. The second function will conflict to some extent with the large subscription dance to be given at the Hartridge Auditorium on April 11, under the auspices of the same committee that gave a subscription dance early in the winter, of which J. Hartley Mellick is the chairman. This affair was originally planned for March 28, but that conflicted with a large subscription dance to be given at the Park Club.

An enjoyable affair was given Monday night at Mrs. Lena Hellstrom's on East Seventh street, it being a dance arranged by Miss May Rodman and Miss Louise Booth. There were about sixty guests.

HIGH SCHOOL INSTRUCTOR DESCRIBES MAINE'S WOODS

Henry R. Hubbard, science instructor in the Plainfield High School, delivered his annual lecture in the school auditorium this morning describing his annual summer canoe trip. He was accompanied on the trip last summer by Jack Zerega, Walter Harrington, Eynon White and George E. Webster, manual training instructor in the North Plainfield High School. Mr. Hubbard illustrated his talk with a number of excellent stereopticon views which were reproductions of snapshots taken at various points of interest on the trip through the lakes and streams of Maine.

The Plainfield campers started out early in August, spending all of that month paddling through the White Pine State and doing a great deal of fishing and trapping. The talk this morning was of particular interest to the High School students as all of the characters involved in the trip were familiar to them, either being members of the Plainfield High School or prominent in the work of that institution. Mr. Hubbard's talk came from a naturalist's point of view and was an extremely interesting one.

FIRST WOMAN LAWYER TO APPEAR IN OUR COURTS

Elizabeth, March 7.—Mr. and Mrs. John Goodman, of Plainfield, appeared in the Union county court this morning, for the purpose of adopting a child formerly in charge of the State Board of Children's Guardians. The couple was represented by Miss Leanore Gebhardt, of Flemington, daughter of State Senator Gebhardt, it being the first time on record when a woman lawyer has appeared in court in a similar capacity.

MURRAY IS HEAD OF Y. M. C. A.

And He Will Manage Campaign for Institution Similar to One for Hospital.

JAS. E. KIMBALL RETIRES

New Executive Was President From 1888 to 1897—Encouraging Reports Heard at the Annual Session.

William D. Murray was elected president of the Young Men's Christian Association at a meeting of the Board of Directors, last night, James E. Kimball declining a re-election after serving four years as the head of the association. He will continue as a director, however. Philip S. Suffern, former vice president, was also obliged to withdraw because of pressure of business, and Howard McWilliams was chosen as his successor.

The new officers are as follows: President, William D. Murray; vice president, Howard McWilliams; secretary, C. W. Spicer; treasurer, John H. Doane. Mr. Murray and Mr. McWilliams are both recognized association leaders. Mr. McWilliams was for nine years chairman of the great Brooklyn Central Association and Mr. Murray is vice chairman of the International committee of the Y. M. C. A.

Mr. Murray has already served the association as its president, holding that position from 1886-1897. It was during that period that the present building was erected. The board of directors has decided upon a new and modern building, the present structure being inadequate for the association needs. Mr. Murray has been called upon to take the leadership in this campaign for volunteer subscriptions, which will be inaugurated in the fall.

As one having expert knowledge of association work and equipment all over the world, Mr. Murray is convinced that the present association building restricts the usefulness of the work. Among the urgent needs are dormitories, larger space for social work, a swimming pool twice the size of the one now in use, a much larger gymnasium, three times the present number of shower baths, more space for the work of the large club for street boys and for the class for employed boys. The association believes that with new equipment the present membership of 607 could be speedily doubled.

Reports received at last night's meeting showed that the work of the association is larger in volume than ever before. During February more than 8,000 persons participated in or were directly influenced by association activities. This included thirteen meetings for men in the shops and in the theatre, meetings for boys, twelve Bible classes, seventy-five gymnasium classes, five educational motion picture exhibitions, four sessions of the Boys' Club and it was reported that thirteen young men had decided for the Christian life at association meetings held during the past six months and six had united with churches.

MRS. FISHER TALKS ON ISLAND NATIVES

Before a large audience in the Washington School auditorium last night, Mrs. Lillian Fisher delivered her lecture on "Cocoanuts, Coral and Cannibals" in connection with the course of public lectures, and her talk was enthusiastically received by those present. Mrs. Fisher is the wife of a former trader who spent many years in visiting desert islands as a representative of a large business trading concern. He was always accompanied on these trips by his wife who spent her time in collecting curios and first hand information.

Mrs. Fisher's lecture last night was illustrated by a series of stereoptican slides depicting her wanderings in the wonderful Pacific Islands, Hawaii, Fiji, Samoa, Gilbert and other points of interest in the land of mystery and romance. She described the habits of the natives, their modes of dress, their means of conveyance and religious views. Mrs. Fisher lived among the natives during her trips and learned much concerning their personal inclinations and ways of living.

CHILD TESTIFIES IN DIVORCE CASE

HOUSEKEEPER NAMED

Little Daughter Principal Witness and Justice Hendrick Says He Believes the Story She Told Was True.

New York, March 7.—Two girls, dressed in white, were in Justice Hendrick's part of the Supreme Court yesterday, where the action brought by Mrs. Hattie Wolbach Arrowsmith for a divorce from James Lawrence Arrowsmith is being tried. The girls are the daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Arrowsmith and on the testimony of Eleanor, the older of the two, Mrs. Arrowsmith bases her action for divorce.

Eleanor is eleven years old, Mildred is eight. The events which Mrs. Arrowsmith alleges in her complaint are said to have occurred nearly two years ago, when Mr. Arrowsmith, who owns an automobile repair shop, was living with the children at No. 634 West Seventh street, Plainfield, N. J. Miss Matilda Gannon, who is young and who also boasts of her beauty, kept the house for Mr. Arrowsmith and the children. She is named as the corespondent.

Allegations that Mr. Arrowsmith had frequently held Miss Gannon in his arms, that while in this position he had carried her down the stairs, that he had often trimmed the toe nails of the young woman, and that Miss Gannon seemed to enjoy these little attentions were made in the testimony of Eleanor. While Eleanor was in the hands of the lawyers Mildred sat beside her mother.

When Eleanor was first called as a witness she said, replying to questions of Moses I. Falk, of No. 99 Nassau street, counsel for Mrs. Arrowsmith, that she was eleven years old and was in the sixth grade of the public schools.

"Do you go to church?" asked the lawyer.

"Oh, yes," replied Eleanor. "I go sometimes. I went to Sunday-school when we lived in Plainfield."

"Do you know what will happen to you if you don't tell the truth?" asked Judge Hendrick.

"Yes, mister," replied Eleanor, as she looked the Justice in the eye; "God won't like me and I might be sent to prison."

"That is quite right, my dear," commented the Justice, as he ruled that she was a competent witness.

Mr. Arrowsmith denied the testimony of his daughter and said that his relations with Miss Gannon had been entirely proper.

"How do you account for the story of this girl?" asked Justice Hendrick.

"It is a fabrication," replied the witness.

"I don't believe that it is," said the Justice. "She has no reason to tell a lie about this matter."

Miss Gannon also denied all charges of wrongdoing. She said that she came to this country from Ireland three years ago.

Mr. Arrowsmith had filed a counter action for divorce, charging his wife was guilty of improper conduct with John Mortimer, a hotel keeper, of No. 445 West 124th street.

The case was not ended.

MR. AND MRS. HARRY BUTLER GIVE DINNER AND DANCE

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Butler, of Cushing road, gave a delightful dinner-dance at their home, last night. Covers were laid for ten at the dinner which preceded the dance, those present beside Mr. and Mrs. Butler being Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Rowland, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Runkle, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Collens and Mr. and Mrs. Lewis E. Waring.

There were about thirty guests at the dance, mostly from Plainfield. Among those present was Mr. Butler's brother, Allen Butler, of Philadelphia. Music for dancing was furnished by an orchestra, the program being a popular one. Last night's affair was one of a series of similar ones, the others to be given after Lent.

WHAT THE WIND DID.

March winds were responsible for more or less damage about the city yesterday. A large pane of glass was broken into a thousand pieces at Cohen's antique store on West Front street, opposite Grove; a packing case standing in front of Tepper Brothers' dry goods store was blown into the street in front of a passing automobile. The machine hit the box, one of the mud guards being slightly damaged. Throughout the city and borough trees were damaged more or less, many small branches being broken and blown about the streets.

DETAIN A SUSPECT IN EXPLOSION CASE

A strange colored man, who, it developed, had been seen in the West End section of the city in the vicinity of the scenes of recent looting of quarter gas meters, was seen today by Chief Kiely pacing up and down the sidewalk in front of police headquarters, peering through the windows and glazed doorway. The Chief's suspicions being aroused, he had the man brought before him, as it was considered that he possibly knew something of the explosion on last Monday night, which destroyed the house at 627-A West Fourth street and injured Mr. and Mrs. Burrell Harvey.

Several people who have been victims of quarter gas meter thieves were invited to the station house in an effort to identify him as the man wanted. One vistor who said he saw a "black man" coming from his cellar after his meter had been torn from its connection and the quarters taken from it, declared he believed that the man apprehended by the police was the same individual, but would not swear to the fact. He said he wasn't sure. He was a foreigner and in the opinion of the police was afraid to disclose any information for fear that his house would be blown-up in revenge if he did so.

The colored man refused to give any information of himself. His while attitude was one of defiance and he was heard to remark, "I'll make somebody sweat for keeping me here."

N. B. SMALLEY TALKS ABOUT NEW COUNTY

Former Mayor of Boro Tells Chamber of His Scheme for Washington Co.

Providing the suggestions of former Mayor Newton B. Smalley, of North Plainfield, made before members of the Chamber of Commerce last night, would receive approval, the problem of the consolidation of North Plainfield and this city would be solved. In a lengthy and instructive talk he argued that a new county should be made in New Jersey, to be called Washington county, which would be approximately eight miles long and four miles wide. The new county would embrace Union Village, Smalleytown, Warrenville, Washington Rock, North Plainfield borough and township, New Market, Dunellen, South Plainfield, Oak Tree, Alton and this city, which would be the county seat, as he would have it.

The speaker exhibited sketches of the proposed scheme showing that he had given the idea considerable thought and preparation.

Mr. Smalley said: "Legislation must be brought about to make the change and the chances seem remote, but it can be accomplished if sufficient agitation is aroused and our best efforts put forth."

Among the benefits he said this city and the borough would derive would be taxes. He asserted that the two municipalities pay over $100,000 in taxes for which they receive comparatively no return. The relationship between the cities and towns involved he added was so close that it is only a matter of justice to his mind that they should be combined in one county. The population of the proposed Washington county would be about 50,000. He also pointed out that the successful solution to the sewer, water and light problems now confronting the municipalities mentioned, would be reached by the formation of the new county.

Speaking of the widening of several of the principal streets in the city, the ex-Mayor earnestly urged that something be done immediately to bring about this much needed improvement in Madison avenue, Somerset street and Park avenue. By way of illustration he said if the city should purchase all the property fronting on Park avenue from West Front street to North avenue inclusive and made the improvement the land could be resold again at a profit greater than the total cost of the work.

Winfield Angelman, chairman of the Chamber of Commerce lighting committee, reported regarding the exhibition of high powered Tungsten and carbon arc lights installed at Madison and Central avenues and in West Second street. He urged that concerted action be taken to have better lights placed in the business section of the city.

GAVE HER BLOOD TO SAVE SISTER

Miss Eva Terry Heroine at an Operation in a New York Hospital.

BORO SCHOOL TEACHER

Transfusion of Blood Leaves Her in Weakened Condition, But Physicians Say She Will Be all Right Again in Few Days.

Miss Eva Terry, history instructor in the North Plainfield High School, who was summoned to her home at Riverhead, L. I., during the early part of the week, submitted to an operation at Rossevelt Hospital, New York city, yesterday afternoon, for the transfusion of blood into her sister's veins. Miss Terry's sister had been dangerously ill for some time and during the past week was removed to the New York hospital from her home at Riverhead and yesterday morning the physicians at that institution said that the transfusion process would have to be resorted to in an effort to save the patient's life. When Miss Terry was informed of the proposed operation she volunteered to give up some of her blood as a means of saving her sister's life, as did also Ralph Young, of Riverhead.

At the hospital last night it was stated that Miss Eva Terry was still in a very weak condition following the loss of blood but that her complete recovery would only be a matter of a few days. The sister is still in a very precarious condition and grave doubts are entertained for her recovery. No official statement would be given out by the Terry family in regard to the nature of the young woman's illness or her condition this morning and those who knew Miss Eva Terry, in Plainfield, say that she did not confide in her friends regarding her sister's illness.

Miss Terry is one of the most popular teachers in the Borough High School and much sympathy was expressed over the sad incidence this morning.

WILSON "HANDS ONE" TO FORMER PREST.

He Will Approve Sundry Appropriation Bill for Same Reasons Taft Vetoed It.

(By Telegraph to The Daily Press.)

Washington, D. C., March 7.—That President Woodrow Wilson will pursue a policy diametrically opposite to that of President Taft was made plain to a number of visitors to the new executive today, when he indicated that he would advocate the passage of the Sundry Appropriation bill for exactly the same reason that his predecessor had vetoed it. Mr. Taft based his veto of the bill on the provision which it contained an appropriation of $300,000 for the enforcement of the Sherman Anti-Trust law, but which specifically exempted from prosecution all labor organizations and associations of farmers. The vetoed bill carried appropriations of about $118,000,000.

President Wilson also indicated to his visitors that he would support J. Hamilton Lewis in the fight for the Senatorship in Illinois.

Inquiry and speculation are writ large upon official Washington. As every one indulges in his own particular line of wonder as to what the new administration is going to do. Nobody can forecast it in a sentence and policies will have to be discovered as they unfold. But it is realized that the tendencies and drift of sentiment are so that the course of events may be charted in a general way. It is known for instance that the new administration will turn a stern face toward trusts and violators of the Sherman law. President Wilson, who will direct, and Attorney General McReynolds, who will carry out the prosecution of the trusts, are easily located from their acts in the past. The question in doubt is, however, where will the line be drawn against good and bad trusts and what in fact will the administration deem to be in compliance with the Sherman law.

FERRO WAS DISORDERLY.

MISS RICHARDS TALKED POLITICS

DISCUSSES THE CHANGE

The New National Administration Occupies Attention of Talented Lecturer.

President Wilson's Message Referred to as Greatest State Paper Since Lincoln's Gettysburg Address.

Coming direct from Washington, where she witnessed the interesting ceremonies attendant upon the inauguration of President Woodrow Wilson, Miss Janet Richards addressed a large assemblage of women at the Hartridge Auditorium, yesterday afternoon, bringing the latest information regarding world-wide affairs of which she keeps herself so well informed.

Miss Richards referred to the many changes about to be made at the Capitol as a result of the new administration. She spoke of the new faces that would be seen in Congress. While many of these men at home are considered prominent as leaders at home, when they reach Washington they appear in public life as one would look through the reverse end of the telescope. The important question in the opinion of Miss Richards is what will these men do, what will be their policy and what will be the policy of President Wilson.

With the mention of President Wilson's name there was a marked absence of any applause, which led Miss Richards to remark that wherever she has mentioned the President's name outside of New Jersey it was greeted with enthusiastic applause, and it seemed strange that New Jersey people should treat it so indifferently. It was the belief of Miss Richards that the President wants more democracy in all things, and it is the verdict of the people generally that he has done well thus far.

The policy of the President that he does not intend to waste time in office, that office-seekers must go to the heads of different departments meets with general approval. Many persons who are seeking positions as consuls, are eventually glad to accept places as doorkeepers for consuls.

Miss Richards also spoke of President Wilson's desire to extend the Civil Service reform and Interstate Commerce departments. In her opinion the inaugural address has never been read with so much interest and pleasure. One person had said, "It was the greatest State paper since Lincoln's Gettysburg address." Miss Richards then discussed the address somewhat in detail.

Turning her attention to foreign affairs, Miss Richards referred to the distressing condition in Turkey, which has led to another appeal for a peace conference in the hope of saving some of that country's territory. The speaker thought a successful outcome doubtful. Since February 15, 1898, when the Maine was blown up, Miss Richards said there had been many changes in Cuba, China and other countries. By way of comparison between Turkey and China she thought it would be better to allow affars to remain statue quo. The Chinese dynasty came back, but there were radical changes, and so it might be with Turkey, but the subdivision of territory taken from Turkey will mean much trouble.

Austria and Russia were almost on the verge of war, but through diplomacy Francis Joseph and the Czar were finally glad to come to terms.

Referring to the retirement of President Taft, Miss Richards paid a fine tribute. She said that he made many valuable recommendations to Congress, some of which were enacted into laws. One person high in authority in commenting on President Taft had said: "President Taft is the best loved, worst whipped and least sore man in the United States." During her talk Miss Richards describes many interesting scenes in connection with the inauguration on Tuesday.

JERSEY'S RED MEN HOLD A CONVENTION

Atlantic City, March 7.—The sixty-second annual session of the great council of New Jersey, Improved Order of Red Men, opened yesterday in Morris Guards' Armory, New York avenue. The following officers were elected yesterday:

We have an increase of 2,172 in our membership, an increase in tribal wealth of $17,381.59, while $96,838.75 has been paid for relief of brothers, $40,316.91 for burial of the dead, and $3,488.24 for care of orphans, or a total of $140,643.90 for relief purposes."

test. Bleeding tactics have been followed by many, especially the large trusts and corporations, but we are fast reaching a stanza in life when this evil will be eradicated and substituted by an ambition to serve. And the science of business is the act of serving. The problem of making good is not a matter of heredity but is the desire of oneself to succeed.

"Every error or incident of bankruptcy that is brought to our attention can be directed to the destructive qualities that exist in the individual. In the matter of salesmanship much depends. Understand your customer, place your arguments before him in a logical way; let the figure of the 'almighty dollar' disappear from your vision of success and be supplanted by your efforts to please, and money will follow in time, like heat after you build the fire."

Continuing Mr. Wright told of the advances of the time in mercantile and industrial life and lauded Thomas Edison. He told his hearers to travel the straight line in all business affairs and illustrated the necessity of securing the earnest co-operation of their employes. After concluding his highly instructive talk which was interspersed with humorous stories of business life, Mr. Wright was given a rising vote of thanks at the suggestion of William Jeffery, the next speaker.

"We are the joke of New Jersey," was one of Mr. Jeffery's remarks, when speaking on the much heralded subject, "What's the matter with Plainfield." "To call this city the 'Queen City of the East,'" he continued, "is to make one laugh, but it can be made so with proper action on the part of this and other organizations of the municipality."

Mr. Jeffery particularly attacked the poor lighting system of the city and said Plainfield is the darkest city at night of its size in New Jersey. He urged that immediate action be taken to eradicate this condition which he said hampers the growth of the city, and added that he did not believe the better lighting system would be secured unless the people went to the Council and demanded it. He scored the Councilmen of the past for not improving conditions heretofore and criticized the alleged indiscrimination in the matter of taxation shown to unimproved property, which costs the city many thousands of dollars in revenue each year. In crosing Mr. Jeffrey predicted that the people of Plainfield would witness a radical revival in interest toward civic improvements for the city and the successful solution of the problems of water, light and sewers which the city fathers are now considering.

Harry C. Runyon in a short address gave some interesting figures which he has compiled, showing the unpaid bills which local merchants have entered on their ledgers for 1912 business. They are given in detail in another column. Mr. Runyon strongly attacked the "dignified lady," who does her shopping in seven-passenger automobile style; "squanders the money at bridge parties which hubby has given her to pay the grocery bill," and added that the storekeeper need not fear the street laborer or the hod-carrier who he said paid their bills from the pay envelopes given them on Saturday.

Mr. Force, who urged that sterner action be taken to collect bills, also told of the system conducted by the association's secretary, V. W. Nash, Jr., of keeping tabs with delinquent payers which enables any member of the organization to investigate the credit-standing of any resident of the city. Other speakers were J. F. Drummond, also of the Sheldon School, and Harry W. Marshall, who told of the effort to introduce the commission form of goernment in this city.

The officers of the Credit Association, who with the aid of Richard Parrott, Jr., the local coal dealer, arranged the banquet are Mr. Marshall, president; vice president, Isaac Schwed and secretary and treasurer, V. W. Nash, Jr. The next business meeting will be held Monday, March 17, when officers will be elected for another year.

THEY TELL WHICH SHOW THEY PREFER

Responding to the invitation of the management of the Plainfield theatre as to which two plays they would like to see Robert Mantell present here on Tuesday afternoon and evening, April 2, many theatre-goers have expressed their choice in letters and postal cards to the Plainfield Daily Press, as requested. An official of Dunellen writes as follows:

"I note in your issue of the fifth inst., your very excellent proposition, that persons interested suggest the name of a play selected from Robert Mantell's repertoire, the play, which seems to be most favored, to be presented by that well known tragedian on the occasion of his coming appearance in Plainfield.

"In accordance with your published invitation, I respectfully suggest, that 'Macbeth' be selected for that occasion.

"In my opinion, there are several reasons in addition to the purely personal one of individual preference.

"As compared to Hamlet, Macbeth has the advantage of being acted less frequently, and the same comparison applies to the Merchant of Venice. Also, Macbeth deals with historic, although remote personages, whereas the Hamlet and Shylock characters, while typifying attributes of our common humanity, are personally fictitious. In this connection an insight into actual history is afforded which is of value, particularly to juvenile attendants.

"Richelieu is a powerful play and so is King Lear, but in my humble opinion each is of lesser magnitude than the three above mentioned.

"I desire to commend you for your idea in allowing the public an opportunity to influence this production."

A prominent educator has expressed his preference as follows:

"I hope Robert Mantell will present 'Richelieu' when he comes to the New Plainfield theatre on March 17. This splendid play is seldom given outside of New York, and has not been seen in Plainfield for many years. Mr. Mantell, Ben Greet and others have given in this city all the Shakespearean plays mentioned in today's 'Press,' some more than once; and I should like to have our people have the opportunity of seeing Bulver's famous study of the great cardinal, one of the unique characters of all history."

One young woman said: "The role which I should like to see Mantell take is that of 'Macbeth' in the play 'Macbeth.' My sister and brother express the same desire."

Another postal reads: "A party of us were talking over the plays of Mantell—and wish to submit our twelve votes: Eight for 'Macbeth,' four for 'Hamlet.'"

Still another postal card says: "Robert Mantell in 'Merchant of Venice.'"

The theatre management requests that all replies be sent to the Daily Press on or before Saturday, Mar. 15.

"RUMP" FREEHOLDERS TAKE SELVES SERIOUSLY

Elizabeth, March 7.—The old Board of Freeholders met here this morning and increased the appropriation for Bonnie Burn Sanitorium from $10,000 to $20,000 and appropriated $500 for the National Guard. This latter appropriation was omitted when the others were made.

The board received a communication from the Plainfield Common Council stating the expense for repairs to South avenue to be $100. This section repaired is a county road, but an agreement was made with Plainfield to keep it in repair. Owing to the fact that the Democratic members of the board have declined to serve pending a decision in the freeholder matter, it has been found necessary to make some changes in committees, the Republicans being named for the vacancies.

Runyon, a prominent lawyers, said, that "after a careful investigation I find 496 local merchants have a total of $190,600 on their books for the year 1912—and most of this is uncollectable." My store sells for cash only—thus eliminating losses in that direction. Wouldn't YOU want to share in that saving?

True Loyalty.

Jenkins, a newly wedded suburbanite, kissed his wife goodby the other morning and, telling her he would be home at 6 o'clock that evening, got into his auto and started for town.

At 6 o'clock no hubby had appeared, and the little wife began to get nervous. When the hour of midnight arrived she could bear the suspense no longer, so she aroused her father and sent him off to the telegraph office with six telegrams to as many brother Elks living in town, asking each if her husband was stopping with him overnight.

Morning drew near, and the frantic wife had received no intelligence of the missing man. As dawn appeared a farm wagon, containing a farmer and the derelict husband drove up to the house, while behind the wagon trailed the broken down auto. Almost simultaneously came a messenger boy with an answer to one of the telegrams, followed at intervals by five others. All of them read:

Yes, John is spending the night with me.

The New Thought.

When hope recoils I clear a path
For mortals where the road is hard.
I reap from failure's aftermath;
I enter where the gates are barred.

O'er seas unsailed I hold the helm.
I cleave a passage through the air.
I find the goal of every realm.
My questing foot is everywhere.

I raise the burden for the faint
And press his shoulder to the wheel.
Train him to scorn the weak complaint
And bruise distrust beneath his heel.

Who woos me finds his boon at length
Unaided, while for other's sakes
He shares the brotherhood of strength
And to his helpful self awakes.

—John Troland.

A Comfortable Position.

When Fraulein Braune came to this country she discovered that she had not yet mastered English as it is spoken, though she had studied her English grammar carefully. "Ach, yes, I shall remember," she said. "This window above the door is the transom, the transom. I did not know that word. And you call this a register? Yes, I shall learn that name." Not long after the dignified German lady astounded some visitors by asserting: "Oh, no, I have not found this country cold. I have been very comfortable. I sit all day with my feet over the transom."

FEATURE PICTURE.

"The Little Minister" will be the feature picture at the Plainfield theatre tomorrow afternoon and evening. This film is full of sensationalism and its thrills will hold interest from start to finish. The difficulties the little minister gets into are at one time mirth provoking and then again bring tears to the eyes of the onlookers. The film is one of the most emotional ever thrown on the screen and should attract a large audience.

Plainfield, N. J., March 7, 1913.

The Chamber of Commerce is directing its attention to the future of Truell Hall and in that it is to be congratulated. The hotel is on the market and naturally every public spirited citizen is anxious that it be kept open as an all the year around resort under capable management. From its earliest days when it was known as the Hotel Netherwod, the resort has been a great benefit to the town for it has been the means of attracting hundreds of people to the place. Year in and year out people have come to the hotel with the intention of making it their temporary residence and have been so pleased with the community that they have located here permanently. The importance of this fact is appreciated particularly by the real estate agents and it is gratifying to know that the Chamber of Commerce is interesting itself in the hotel's future.

The celebration of the tercentenary of the accession of the Romanoffs to the imperial throne of all the Russias was begun yesterday. A requiem service in the Cathedral of St. Peter and St. Paul at St. Petersburg, for the Emperors of the Romanoff house, was attended by Emperor Nicholas and the Dowager Empress. An imperial ukase sent to the Senate provides for public privileges and benefactions in honor of the occasion, including amnesty for minor political offenders, students and newspaper writers and commutation of death sentences. The Emperor conferred decorations on his principal Ministers. Seventy thousand petitions have been received in connection with the tercentary. It will require several years to deal with them.

William E. Tuttle, Jr., will not be a candidate for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination for he says so himself and he is the kind of man who means exactly what he says. The Westfielder has made good at Washington and it would not be at all surprising, although this is a Republican district, to see him returned to the Lower House should he consent to accept a renomination.

LeRoy J. Ellis will be the contributing editor for tomorrow's issue and his subject will be Commission Government. Saturday contributed editorials are a regular weekly feature of this paper which voices the opinion of others, in other words, gives the public the benefit of the views and opinions of representative citizens on timely topics.

Following the example of Muhlenberg Hospital's governors who raised $137,000 in voluntary contributions by such means, the Y. M. C. A. directors propose to inaugurate a campaign in the fall. The Y. COMMISSION LIABLE FOR EMPLOYE'S DEATH

Elizabeth, March 7.—Judge Connolly in the Union county court, today, gave a decision in the case of Mrs. Victoria C. N. Croney, who sought to recover damages from the Union County Mosquito Commission for the death of her husband, George Croney, on October 11, last, while working in the east end of the city for the commission. The widow was awarded $1,200 to be paid in one sum. William R. Codington represented the commission, and William Newcorn the widow.

The argument in the case was heard by Judge Connolly two weeks ago, the point to be determined being whether the commission was liable or not. Judge Connolly decided that it was. The case will probably be appealed. Mrs. Croney is now living in Elizabeth.

RIVALS IN MUSCLE

Augustus of Poland and His Saxon Captain Were Strong.

BUT THEY MET THEIR MATCH.

The Young Swedish Count Whom They Sought to Impress With Their Feats of Strength Took a Hand in the Game Himself and Dazed the King.

On a bitterly cold evening in February, 1707, a little company of Swedish dragoons, huntsmen and grooms leading extra horses rode across the drawbridge of the castle of Liebeverda, on the banks of the river Elster, in Saxony. They were evidently expected, for the officer who headed the huntsmen was conducted into a brilliantly lighted chamber, where was gathered a large company of men at arms. His glances around the room told him that a drinking bout was in progress, and in the center of the gay gathering the visitor beheld the former king of Poland—King Augustus, a title he afterward regained.

Advancing to the place where the rollicking royal personage sat steeped in wine, the Swedish officer, a young man, but tall and broad shouldered, reported that his master, King Charles of Sweden, would arrive at the castle the following morning to take part in the boar hunt to which he had been invited.

Whereupon the ex-king, looking the young Swedish nobleman over with appraising eye, frowned, then recovered his composure as he noted the skill with which the messenger addressed him without once using the title of "majesty." He was happy, he said complacently, that King Charles was coming, and he added, "I have been told that Count Gustaf Bertelskold"—for this was the noble messenger's name—"was a valiant participant in my royal friend's boar hunt."

As the evening wore on the company became boisier and the wine flowed more freely until at length August, with a gesture that commanded attention, took from the table a silver plate. Without apparent effort he bent the plate to a roll in his right hand and tossed it as drink money to a servant.

Loud cries of "Bravo!" followed this princely achievement. The example challenged imitation. A stockily built Saxon cavalry captain took from his pocket a copper coin. Turning aside the tablecloth, he laid the coin on the table and with a mighty blow of his fist drove the coin so deep into the oaken surface of the table that it stuck there. New shouts of applause shook even the heavy beamed ceiling.

King August then ordered several horseshoes brought in. Looking them over carefully, he selected one that suited him and passed it round the company so that all could see it was strong and perfect in every way. Then he stood up and, bending the shoe backward and forward in the middle, broke it in two equal pieces and held them out in either hand to show his muscles were harder than iron even.

Shouts of approval rose louder than ever, goblets were filled and emptied again, and the stocky Saxon cavalry captain was heard to proclaim that the king of Poland should one day break his enemies' weapons as easily as he breaks an iron horseshoe, at the same time giving the Swedish count a knowing look.

Count Bertelskold rose to go, this being the only reply he considered appropriate. But the aggressive Saxon captain blocked his way and shouted:

"Upon my honor, I believe the little Swedish count is afraid of us. Gently, gently, my young friend. Your delicate fingers would certainly never break a horseshoe in two. Drink, drink, I say, to the health of his majesty the king of Poland!"

Count Bertelskold's hand went to his sword hilt like a flash. But he checked himself, seized a goblet and, draining it to the last drop, exclaimed: "At the request of this gentleman I drink to the prosperity of his majesty King Stanislaus. May he live long and reign happily." No deeper insult could have been offered, for it was King Charles of Sweden who had caused Stanislaus to be chosen elector of Saxon in place of Augustus.

"Draw," shouted a Polish nobleman, confronting Count Bertelskold, "or, by heaven, I will write this toast, letter for letter, in red upon your blue coat!"

It was King Augustus who interrupted with the gentle reminder that the Swedish count was their guest.

"Let us," said King Augustus, "rather ask him if in the Swedish camp they do not amuse themselves with any interesting experiments of the kind we have just been having."

"If my honored host will permit," replied Count Bertelskold, "I will attempt something that is customary with us."

"Yes, do so, my dear count," replied the king, glad to turn the threatened bloodletting into jest.

"By all means!" roared the bystanders.

Bertelskold looked around him a moment without replying. Then, suddenly seizing the two husky Polish noblemen who had been so ready to draw swords against him, Count Bertelskold raised them both up at once and, holding them, kicking and sprawling, at arm's length, bore them twice round the table and with perfect solemnity sat them down at the feet of the astonished King Augustus.—Kansas City Star.

A Stroke of Business.

Years ago in Jamaica, West Indies, before artificial ice was very well known, a shopkeeper who tried to keep up with the times thought he would outclass his rival across the street and purchased a thousand pounds of fine "cool" ice, paying about $12 for it. He did a wonderful business the next day. All the town trade came to get a cool drink, while the shop opposite was empty. When she shopkeeper shut up that night he had made good profits and had about 800 pounds of ice left.

The next morning his brilliant black boy, who opened up the shop, greeted him with a happy grin. "Morning, boss," he said. "I's done a good bit of business this morning, sah."

"How's that, boy; how's that?"

"Well, sah, I sold that fool nigger in the store across the street all that stale ice that was left for 4 shillings, and he never knew the difference, sah!"—Everybody's.

Content With Little.

Some murmur when their sky is clear
And wholly bright to view
If one small speck of dark appear
In their great heaven of blue.

And some with thankful love are filled
If but one streak of light,
One ray of God's good mercy, gild
The darkness of their night.

In palaces are hearts that ask
In discontent and pride
Why life is such a dreary task
And all good things denied.

While hearts in poorest huts admire
How love has in their aid
Love that not ever seems to tire—
Such rich provision made.
—R. C. Trench.

Must Have Been a Terror.

Gene Stevens, being asked if he knew a new story, deposed and said that he did not, but that he had a friend who was very sick and that the friend had had a good doctor, but that the doctor was puzzled about the case. So a consultation was held. Four other doctors came, looked wise, shook their heads, talked it over together and went away. Then the first doctor summoned the patient's wife.

"I am sorry to tell you that your husband is in a bad way," he said. "If he is religiously inclined I should advise that you send for a minister without delay."

"Yes, doctor. Shall I get just one minister or will he need a consultation?"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Look at the Difference

6 GALLONS DEVOE — 6 GALLONS OTHER PAINT

One-third of the paint-money goes for the paint, two-thirds for the painter. It all goes by the gallon; look out for the gallons. The least-gallons paint is Devoe.

Fewer Gallons or No Pay

Paint half of your house with any other paint; paint half with Devoe. The other-paint half will take the most gallons; if not, we will make no charge for Devoe.

Wears Longer or No Pay

Here's another offer.

Paint half of your house with lead-and-oil: the other half with Devoe lead-and-zinc.

In three years the lead-and-oil half will need repainting, while the Devoe half will be about like new.

LOW BIRTH RATE ALARMS FRANCE

Danger of Depopulation Is Disclosed.

NEED 450,000 MORE YEARLY

Bertillon Analyzes Problem of Shortage, Its Causes and Remedies—Race Has Fallen From 16 Per Cent to 10 Per Cent of Civilized Peoples of Earth—Urges New Laws.

In an interesting and lucid lecture before the Society of Friends of the University of Paris, of which M. Raymond Poincare is president, Dr. Jacques Bertillon has analyzed at length the problem of the depopulation of France, its causes and remedies.

In 1815, said the doctor, the French amounted to 16 per cent of the civilized people of the world. They now represent only 10 per cent, and against 50,000,000 people who speak French there are today 120,000,000 who speak German and 150,000,000 who speak English. This condition is becoming more accentuated since in 1911 the number of deaths exceeded the number of births in France, while in other countries the excess of births over deaths kept at an average of about twelve per thousand. Some people see a remedy in efforts to decrease mortality, but the doctor declared this method to be of little or no value.

450,000 More Births Needed.

What was wanted, he said, was an extra 450,000 births every year. The present deficit involved economic consequences of the most dangerous character. Malthus was quite wrong when he attempted to show that at life's banquet there was room only for a limited number of guests. The guests, explained Dr. Bertillon, were also cooks, contributing their share to the banquet. That is why people with a high birth rate show a much more rapid economic advance than does France.

The consequences of depopulation are even graver in the realm of intelligence and culture. Technical and scientific works whose readers are limited in number, but which nevertheless mark the essential condition of progress, are necessarily published in languages spoken by the greater number.

There are many factors responsible for the voluntary and dangerous imitation of families in France. The growth of individualism among others plays a considerable part. The civil code, which prohibits the free testamentary disposition of property, also favors small families. This is clearly demonstrated by a little village in the outskirts of Dunkirk. According to the terms of a foundation dating from the seventeenth century, every family living within the village boundaries is entitled to twenty-four areas (about three-fifths of an acre) of land. The result is that births exceed deaths by 44 per cent.

Laws Help Birth Rate.

Instances of the birth rate being heightened by judicious legislation are numerous, notably in Bavaria and Roumania, where by the suppression of some of the vexatious formalities attending marriage thousands of births were gained every year.

The doctor would like to see the public taught to honor and favor large families instead of subjecting them to mockery, as is so often the case nowadays. He recalled that M. Poubelle, when prefect of the Seine, would not employ any officeholder unless he had at least three children. He also thought that every mother who had four children living should be entitled to a grant of $100. This would, no doubt, involve a large sum of money, but it must not be considered as money expended on experiment.

TO BUILD NEW MARBLE CITY.

Jack London Has Project For Aesthetic Community In Arizona.

A great marble city, intended as the seat of a postgraduate school of sculpture and the home of the aesthetic and beautiful, is projected by Jack London and several residents of Los Angeles. It is to be built on a plateau not far east of Dragon, Ariz.

Plans for the city have been drawn by Henry Busse, a Los Angeles architect. The Arizona site was selected because of its rich deposits of marble. Within a few miles of the place are billions of cubic feet of exposed marble of many shades and varieties.

FORGER GOUGES EYES OUT.

Manufacturer Blinds Self With Knife as Self Punishment

Arrested for a series of small forgeries, A. J. Heinn, founder of a manufacturing company of Milwaukee, Wis., gouged out both of his eyes with a small knife in Los Angeles recently.

"I do not believe in suicide," said he, "but I shall never see daylight again or forge another check, and I am more at peace than I have been for some time."

Mothers' Pension Bill Passes.

The mothers' pension bill, providing for a minimum pension of $10 a month to mothers having one child dependent on them for support and $7 a month for each additional child, was passed by the Utah senate recently.

The WARE That Wears

It doesn't pay to buy cheap ware that soon peels, cracks, leaks, tarnishes, rusts or wears out. Even at a lower cost such ware is the most expensive because it is dangerous to health and unreliable in service—doesn't last.

"Pure Spun Aluminum Ware"

is guaranteed. There is practically no wear out to it and scientific investigation proves it the most sanitary cooking ware made. Particles can't chip off and cause chronic troubles nor spoil the food. Germs do not breed on its smooth surface and odors can not be absorbed by it.

You'll have better food and save trouble, time and fuel by using only Pure Spun Aluminum Ware.

IN WOMAN'S REALM

By JUDIC CHOLLET

Tunic suggestions are very modish this season. This skirt gives the tunic idea by trimming portions arranged over the sides. The main portion of the skirt is cut in six pieces. The panels at the front and at the back are extended to form the lower portion, and the side panels are joined to them.

SKIRT WITH TUNIC SUGGESTION.

The model is an excellent one for the coat suit, for the gown and for the odd skirt to be worn with separate waists and is well adapted to wash materials as well as to woolen stuffs.

For the medium size this skirt requires seven yards of material twenty-seven inches wide when made of one material. The width of the skirt at the lower edge is two yards.

This May Manton pattern is cut in sizes from 22 to 30 inches waist measure. Send 10 cents to this office, giving number, 7757, and it will be promptly forwarded to you by mail. If in haste send an additional two cent stamp for letter postage. When ordering use coupon.

MAHARAJA HAT.

OF SATIN STRAW IN BLUE TONES.

The hat pictured is of satin straw braid in graduated shades of blue, with trimmings of blue and white fancy ribbon and a white wing ornament banded with black.

DON'T BE A FAULTFINDER.

It is very easy to get into the habit of finding fault. Nothing can be as easily acquired as the complaining spirit, and nothing is so difficult to rid oneself of as this same spirit after it has once gained control over us. Nothing seems right to some people, and if it happens to be a father who is afflicted with such a disposition his home-coming at night is dreaded rather than welcomed.

Popular people are not chronic complainers.

Go through the list of your friends for proof of this.

The basis of popularity is a cheerful heart and a sympathetic soul, and a carping critic never has either.

What if the chairs do need dusting now and then? There are far more important things in the world than an undusted chair, and to shout about it doesn't accomplish the dusting.

It only accomplishes ill feeling, and ill feeling leads to harassed nerves, and harassed nerves lead to the grave just as surely as does cancer or tuberculosis or yellow fever.

It is selfish to make those around us miserable by our petty faultfinding, and soon our very presence becomes a menace.

Constructive criticism helps; destructive criticism injures.

The Spring Motor Girl.

Buff sponge, or sponge cloth, is the material used for this motor costume. It is in Norfolk style and trimmed with metal buttons and a patent leather belt. The little motor bonnet is of deep cream hemp veiled with buff colored chiffon and adorned with a fancy feather in buff and white colorings.

THE KITCHEN CUPBOARD

HOT BISCUIT.

MANY persons who are otherwise successful cooks do not make good biscuit. Their biscuit may taste of the soda, be heavy or hard and indigestible. All these are faults that may be overcome with a little care. Biscuits which are too heavy are not necessarily without enough baking powder. Their heaviness may be due to the heat of the oven, hardening the crust before the gas formed by the chemical change in the baking powder has had time to expand the dough.

Tempting Hot Breads.

Baking Powder Biscuit. — Take a quart of flour, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder and a teaspoonful of salt. Sift these together three times. Rub in quickly and thoroughly one tablespoonful each of lard and butter combined. Add one cupful and a half of milk. Mix and turn out on the molding board, roll into a sheet a half inch thick, cut out with a small, round cutter and lay in a greased baking pan so they will not touch. Bake in a hot oven for about twenty minutes.

Whole Wheat Biscuit.—Take a quart of whole wheat flour and sift with it a teaspoonful of salt and two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Work into this prepared flour a heaping tablespoonful of shortening, and when this is well combined add enough sweet milk to make a soft dough. Mix quickly and lightly, touching as little as possible. Roll out, cut into rounds and bake to a golden brown.

Useful Recipes.

Beaten Biscuit.—Take a pint of flour, two and a half tablespoonfuls of lard, a level teaspoonful of salt and enough water to make a stiff dough. First mix the flour, lard and salt together. Then add water carefully, for the dough must not be too thin, and to use more flour mars the proportions. Beat the dough until it is thoroughly smooth and pops as you roll it. The biscuit should be about a third of an inch thick. Bake about twenty minutes in a moderate oven.

When the housewife wishes to make biscuit in a hurry this method is recommended:

Emergency Biscuit.—Select the ingredients in the proportion of any good recipe for biscuit. Then add milk or water enough to make the dough soft enough to drop from the end of the spoon. Drop on a buttered pan in spoonfuls an inch or so apart. Brush over with milk and bake for eight minutes in a hot oven.

NEW YORK AMUSEMENTS

A. E. Anson, who is playing one of the leading roles in "Romance" at Maxine Elliott's theatre has no less than three wounds, all of which were received on the stage. One was inflicted with a bread knife in the "big scene" of a modern emotional drama and the other two are results of stage duals.

Arnold Lucy, who is playing one of the leading roles in "Fanny's First Play," at William Collier's Comedy theatre, gave his 788th performance of "Mr. Knox" a few nights ago.

PROCTOR'S PROGRAM.

"Lightning" Weston, the novelty cartoonist at Proctor's this week, sketches a realistic reproduction of his idea of the sinking Titanic. The picture is the work of a vivid imagination and the people are seen leaving the fated vessel in life boats just as the big ocean liner is sucked in by the mountainous waves. "The Maid of Nicabar" is presented by a company of ten performers and the leading character, the king of the island, keeps the house in a continuous round of laughter. His jokes are orignal and the real thing as laugh provokers. The leading lady has an unusually fine voice and her singing is a feature of the sketch. Oliver D. Bryon and Company in their comedy sketch "The Better Way," depicit a scene common to everyday slum life in New York, the rising of a family from the lowest level to one of high moral standing through the aid of a volunteer mission. An old acquaintance drops in on the scene and tries to induce the reformed ones to return to their old mode of life but is ushered from the house. This scene is one of an emotional character that appeals to people of any age or standing. Lynn and Mitchell in their singing and dancing act attract no little attention and southern dialect is a pleasing feature of their part. Favor and Sinclaire in their musical comedy act also come in for a generous portion of the applause.

RULINGS BY UTILITY BOARD.

Trenton, March 7.—Approval has been given by the Board of Public Utility Commissioners to the application of the Pennsylvania Railroad as lessee of the United New Jersey Railroad and Canal Company, for permission to sell a lot in Harrison containing .246 of an acre. The lot is located on the southwesterly side of Gloucester street. The board has also given its approval to the application of the New Jersey Northern Gas Company, giving the concern the right to construct its mains in Delaware township and the borough of Stockton, Hunterdon county. The application of the Public Service Electric Company for approval of the lease of the property and franchise of the Cinnaminson Electric Light, Heat and Power Company, was also sanctioned by the board. The board approved the lease for one year, and recommended that the Public Service make a study of the situation, with a view of arriving at a plan which would result in the simplification of the corporate relations of the Public Service and the Cinnaminson company, by merging the latter concern with some one of the operating companies belonging to the Public Service.

CHAMP CLARK 63.

Champ Clark, Speaker of the National House of Representatives, was born in Anderson county, Ky., March 7, 1850. Mr. Clark is a man of many parts. In his youth he worked on a farm and later clerked in a country store. He attended Kentucky University and Bethany College and later took a law course at the University of Cincinnati. Soon after completing his education he became president of Marshall College in West Virginia, being at the time the youngest college president in the United States. He went to Missouri in 1875, edited a paper and held various offices. For the past twenty years he has represented the Ninth Missouri district in Congress. At the final session of the Sixtieth Congress he succeeded John Sharp Williams as minority leader in the House and at the beginning of the Sixty-second Congress he was elected to the speakership. SAVED FROM THE FIRE

Being Sacrificed at 25 CENTS on the Dollar

This magnificent stock is fast melting away under the pressure of ridiculously low prices. Our gigantic FIRE-SWEPT WAREHOUSE with its FIVE GREAT FLOORS is yielding up its bargain treasures. The further we go into this stock less grows the material sign of damage. We ourselves are astounded at the excellent condition in which we find most of these goods after passing through torrents of water, billows of smoke and a sea of flames. The INSURANCE COMPANIES paid their loss in full, and we in turn pass the goods along to you, regardless of the fact that in most instances THEY ARE AS GOOD AS NEW, at

Savings of From 60 to 80 Per Cent. to You

DRESSERS

There are fully a hundred Dressers, each one of which represents a tremendous bargain; the patterns are all the very latest. The damage in most cases is simply by smoke and water, in no way injuring the beauty or durability of the merchandise.

CARPETS, RUGS, OILCLOTH & LINOLEUM

In removing the wrappings from our massive stock of Carpets, Rugs, Oilcloth and Linoleum we were surprised at the splendid condition in which we found them. There is a splendid assortment to choose from and all will be sold at less than the actual cost of manufacture. Come early and secure the choicest patterns.

REFRIGERATORS

Not a single Refrigerator was damaged on the inside—the part that counts. A few were water spotted, but the majority are as good as when they left the factory. There are dozens of styles to select from; some have galvanized linings, others are enameled—but all go at about the prices of the unfinished wood.

DAVENPORT BEDS

Many of these Davenport Beds are slightly scorched, but a coat of varnish will make the worst one look almost as good as new, while others are in perfect condition—but, regardless of condition, we will place all of them on sale at a saving to you of 75c on every dollar.

CHAIRS

Chairs by the thousands—a forest of them—all kinds and all descriptions; chairs for every room in the house; cane seats, leather seats, upholstered seats. Most of them in perfect condition. They are yours at about one-quarter their regular prices

BRASS BEDS

There are some hundreds of Brass Beds still here, representing the highest examples of the bed-making art; all finishes, bright, poulet and satin, in patterns embracing the very newest and most sought designs. The damage is so slight that no eye can detect it, yet we were allowed three-quarters of their value, and, as a consequence, you can now buy brass beds at less than the actual cost of the materials.

RANGES AND HEATERS

Our entire stock of Ranges and Heaters was on the ground floor in our warehouse at the time of the fire. Some were water-damaged and have since rusted; a good blacking will make them look like new. Others were untouched, but the insurance companies have paid for them, and, as in all cases, the savings will be passed on to you.

ENAMELED BEDS

Some of the greatest bargains of the sale are here. The fire didn't get anywhere near our bed stock, and the wrappings were sufficient to protect the beds against any real damage. The insurance companies paid, however, and the saving to you is enormous. Never before in the history of the furniture business have such high-grade beds been sold at prices so low.

CHIFFONIERS

Some of the Chiffoniers are pretty badly damaged, but there are dozens of styles that are as good as when we purchased them. You'll find dozens of styles to select from in all woods. The insurance companies paid for this stock as a total loss, and paved the way for a saving to you of fully 75 per cent.

REED CARRIAGES

We have just reached our Reed Carriages, Pullmans and Go-Carts. In most cases the wrappings were of sufficient protection to prevent the carriage suffering any material damage. The insurance companies have paid for these goods as a total loss, and you can now purchase Reed Carriages, Pullmans and Go-Carts at a fraction of their worth.

PARLOR TABLES AND LIBRARY TABLES

Nearly all of these Tables are as good as when they left the factory, the varnish on some being slightly spotted. They come in golden oak and mahogany finish. A truly remarkable bargain at these prices.

SEWING MACHINES

Not a single sewing machine was materially damaged, some were slightly scorched, while in most cases the wrappings were of sufficient protection to prevent the mechanism from getting touched. We have placed the good with the bad, and regardless of cost we will sell the entire line of sewing machines, included in which are the latest models, at a saving to you of ¾.

ROCKERS

Thousands of Rockers in mahogany, golden oak, Early English and maple finishes. Some upholstered in leather, some have loose cushions. The slight damage was wholly by smoke and water, but the insurance companies paid in full. You save fully three-quarters.

The Pianola is a Source of Ever-new Pleasure

THE crowned heads of every important European nation are Pianola owners and Pianola enthusiasts. Time and again have these wonderful instruments passed between members of different Royal families as wedding or birthday gifts. Tsar Ferdinand of Bulgaria has purchased no less than seven Pianolas. H. I. M. William II. and five ranking German Princes have arranged or Metrostyled Pianola rolls for their own and their friends' use.

These men of Royalty can command the performances of the greatest musicians of the age. At their beck and call are the supreme artists of the music-world. Still they turn to the Pianola for their daily hour of recreation and inspiration.

Why?

Deep down in the heart of every man, King and peasant alike, is the yearning for self-expression in music.

And so it is that even Kings and Princes, and not only these, but men and women in every walk of life, in every country of the world, turn to the Pianola, that wonderful instrument—that marvelous mechanism of "Fingers of Air" which provides them the means to complete and satisfying musical expression.

But only the Pianola

Not because of mechanical perfection, not because it plays the piano's notes correctly, has the Pianola achieved world-wide pre-eminence and distinction. If this were the case, the Pianola would share its celebrity with other instruments.

The Pianola stands unequalled and alone, because it is the only instrument of its type ever devised which permits of perfect musical expression. It is the only instrument which enables those, who have not had a life-long music-training, to play any and all music artistically and with sound musical ideas and feeling.

And because it is the only instrument which does these things, it is the only instrument which every great musician in the world endorses, which leading educational institutions have installed and which the most important European Rulers, as well as all those who know and can command the best, invariably select.

As pianos and as "player" instruments, the six genuine Pianola Player-pianos are not even approached in value by any other player-pianos. The unanimous verdict of the world proves this. The names of these six celebrated instruments are—Steinway, Steck, Wheelock, Stuyvesant, Stroud and famous Weber. Their prices range from $550 upwards. They may be bought on small monthly payments.

AD. BRINGS DELUGE OF BEDBUGS TO A SCIENTIST

Entomologist Calls For Specimens and Result Is Embarassing.

Professor A. L. Quaintance, economic entomologist of Washington, whose discoveries for preventing the ravages of the many insects common to orchard trees have been of worldwide value, has been having the ordeal of his life as the consequence of his professional zeal.

Professor Quaintance employs college graduates on entomological problems. One of them is to try out a parasite for the Cimex lectularius (get the dictionary). Recently a sign, "Wanted—Bedbugs; Any Quantity; Price 1 Cent Apiece," was tacked up.

It worked like magic on the small colored boys of the vicinity. They were soon wearing a deep path to the place, bringing small paper bags and boxes with the desired live stock.

A newspaper paragraph was printed not long after that Uncle Sam wanted any quantity of bedbugs and would give 5 cents apiece for them. The result was nearly a bushel of letters came to Professor Quaintance's desk every morning from people all over the United States who have an abundance of the insects for sale at the price offered.

$3,000,000 DRYDOCK IN MUD

Notwithstanding optimistic views in regard to the possibility of going on with the construction of the drydock at Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, there is a well settled opinion among expert naval engineers that the whole project is threatened with failure.

Rear Admiral W. C. Cowles, who is in charge of the coustruction of the dock, has told in his reports to the navy department, since the middle section was wrecked by the upward pressure of the unstable mud foundation, that the entire floor of the dock appears to be intact, that the foundation piling has remained in place, but that the piling for the cofferdam around the other two sections has been badly injured.

Naval engineers say that the principal trouble with the dock is that it has been placed in a site where the mud is apparently unfathomable and, like the formations at the Culebrat cut at Panama, will be continually shifting.

The Pearl Harbor dock is one of the largest and most costly that have been authorized by congress. The final expenditure for its construction, with buildings, machinery and equipment, will be $10,000,000, if it can be finished. Over $3,000,000 has already been expended in dredging, and of the $3,400,000 appropriated by congress for the actual work of construction 60 per cent has been spent.

FAST PARIS-LONDON FLIGHT.

French Aviator Crosses Channel In Fog, Making Fast Time.

A new and notable record of 3 hours 5 minutes for a flight from Paris to London was made by the French aviator Marcel G. Brindejonc des Moulinais recently.

The aviator started in his monoplane at 9:15 o'clock in the morning from Paris, landed at Calais at 10:50 o'clock, resumed his flight at noon and descended in London at 1:30 o'clock, crossing the channel in a fog.

The distance between Paris and London is 287 miles. During his actual flying time of 185 minutes the French aviator maintained a speed of ninety-four miles an hour, more than a mile and a half a minute.

NO HAIR OR TEETH IN FUTURE.

Professor Says Man Is Losing These Physical Attributes.

Professor Frederick Starr of the department of anthropology of the University of Chicago told his class recently that some time in the future hair, teeth and the little toes would be missing from the members of the human race.

"Predigested foods, hats and shoes have rendered hair, teeth and the little toe useless," he said. "The time will come when the man, woman or child possessing these will be a curiosity.

"The natural man needs hair as a defense and protection against the struggle of life," he declared.

NEW MATERIAL FOR PAPER.

Suggestion Made That Plant From India Be Used Instead of Trees.

A new material for the production of paper was suggested at the Royal Society of Arts in London recently. It was stated that if a plant named Hedychium coronarium, which is a native of India, were cultivated over vast tropical or semitropical spaces mankind should have no need to cut down the forests and make them into paper.

The forests, it was said could go on fulfilling their natural purpose and newspapers could be printed on the substance which looked just like what is now called paper.

Live Eels by Parcel Post.

The Rev. [illegible] M. Hallock, pastor of the Methodist church in Bakersville, Conn., recently received an elongated package by parcel post from his old home on Long Island. On opening it he found a squirming mass of eels an inch or two in diameter and about two feet in length. The eels were frozen when sent, but thawed out after being left at the parsonage.

WINTER AND WAR

ARMIES WRECKED BY FROST.

In Most of the Great Conflicts For a Century Past Icy Weather Has Played a Prominent Part—Napoleon's Disastrous Invasion of Russia.

War is bad enough under the best of climatic conditions, but when war and bitterly cold and icy weather mix the suffering is woefully intensified. And yet there has hardly ever been a European war on a big scale in which General Jack Frost has not taken a hand.

Go back a century. Eighteen hundred and twelve was the year when Napoleon made up his mind to invade Russia. Before starting he was careful to inquire of the experts at what date winter usually set in in southern Russia. They told him the middle of December.

It was on June 24 that he invaded Russia with 600,000 men, and he reached Moscow on Sept. 14. That night fire broke out, and within five days the city was burned to the ground. Even then he remained until Oct. 18 before commencing his retreat.

In the last week of October began the worst frost which Europe had known for three generations. The Thames froze from its source to the sea. The Seine, the Rhine, the Danube, were all icebound. On the Adriatic, off Venice, was seen the amazing sight of floating ice floes. The Dardanelles and nearby waters were frozen. Jack Frost's icy finger lay heavy even upon North Africa. Drift ice appeared in the Nile, and there were snow storms in Tripoli and Morocco.

As for Napoleon's huge army, it was almost wiped out. Four hundred thousand men perished. They froze to death in battalions as they bivouacked, and when at last, on Dec. 6, Napoleon reached German soil, out of his whole vast host but 130,000 men were left alive.

During the winter of 1853-4 the Turks were battling for dear life along the Danube against hordes of Russians. In the following September 25,000 British troops, a similar number of French and 8,000 Turks were landed in the Crimea.

Again came a terrible winter, and from the west of Ireland right across into Asia frost fell heavy on land and sea. In London it froze for six weeks without a break. From Jan. 14 to Feb. 24 the thermometer was below freezing every night. In the Crimea the cold was fearful, and the English army, disgracefully catered for, suffered horribly. In all the British forces lost 20,056 men, and of these only 42 per cent fell in battle. The rest were destroyed by cold and disease, aggravated by a rotten commissariat.

In 1870 came the biggest war of the latter half of the nineteenth century, the titanic conflict between France and Germany. By Oct. 29 there were 850,000 German troops in France. Paris was besieged, and there began the four months' investment, with furious fighting on both sides.

Again Jack Frost came to the aid of the Germans. A long spell of intense cold made life almost impossible for the half starved French, while the Germans, who had the whole country to draw on, besides their own excellent commissariat, suffered very little. By January the city was in such a terrible condition that it surrendered.

The date of the last great war before that of 1912 in which Turkey was engaged was 1877. The Turks were attacked by an enormously superior force of Russians, with the czar himself in command. Osman Pasha, with 40,000 men, hurried inland to Plevna, a village which stood upon a hill, and there hastily entrenched himself. The Russians had 100,000 men, but Osman and his dauntless band defeated them in four successive battles.

In November winter set in three weeks earlier than usual. The Turks had no winter clothing and little to eat but maize porridge and horseflesh. They suffered fearfully. At last, on Dec. 9, they determined to break out. There were only 30,000 left, but their rush was so tremendous that they carried three lines of Russian trenches before they were surrounded and forced by enormously superior numbers to surrender unconditionally.—London Answers.

Napoleon's Piano.

A curious footnote to history is found in G. L. de St. M. Watson's book, "A Polish Exile With Napoleon," to the effect that the emperor's evenings at St. Helena were solaced with music from a piano which was imported from England at a cost to Napoleon himself of £122 ($610). The musician was perhaps Mme. Bertrand. At any rate, the piano was bequeathed to her and was removed by her from the island after Napoleon's death.

Disillusioned.

The young man was figuring out ways and means. "They say two can live as cheaply as one."

"Do not delude yourself, Ferdinand," said the girl. "For one thing, I shall positively have to have a separate car."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Typhoid Carriers.

As many as 10 per cent of patients convalescing from typhoid fever are known to be typhoid carriers, who may start fresh infections at any time.

MARATHON CLUB MET TO TALK BASEBALL

Junior Organization Takes First Step Toward Organizing a Nine.

The members of the Marathon Athletic Club met at the home of Roy Adams, on Duer street, last night for the purpose of discussing and arousing interest in baseball. Those present advocated the idea of effecting the organization of a permanent baseball nine to represent the club on local diamonds this year and the proposition was accepted with much enthusiasm by the junior athletes. A number of exceptionally good baseball players are enrolled in the club and all are desirous of combining their strength to represent the Marathon organization.

The success the club has had along the basketball line during the past season assures it of an equally successful baseball season. A junior court quintet has played under the Marathon colors all season lining up against such teams as Holy Cross and various other juvenile advocates of the indoor sport.

BRRR, BASEBALL WEATHER?

SCARES IN LONDON

When Cranks Predicted the Destruction of the City.

TERROR RULED THE PEOPLE.

Bell, a Lunatic, Had the Entire Population in a Frenzy of Fear Awaiting the End by Earthquake in 1761—The River Thames Panic of 1524.

Men, it has been well said, think in herds. It will be seen that they go mad in herds, for innumerable instances can be given of a whole people suddenly shaking off the trammels of reason and running wild under the delusion of some impending calamity.

A panic terror of the end of the world spread over London in 1736 by the prophesy of the famous Whiston, who predicted that the world would be destroyed on Oct. 13 in that year. Crowds of people went out on the appointed day to Islington, Highgate, Hampstead and the intervening fields to witness the destruction of London, which was to be the "beginning of the end."

Again in the year 1761 the citizens of London were plunged into excitement by two earthquake shocks, and the prophecy of a third, which was to destroy them altogether. The first of these shocks was on Feb. 8 and threw down several chimneys; the second was on March 8. Public notice was directed to the fact that there was exactly a month's interval between the two shocks, and a crack brained fellow named Bell was so impressed with the idea that there would be a third in the forthcoming month that he completely lost his senses and ran about the streets predicting the destruction of London on April 5.

As the awful day approached the excitement became intense, and great numbers of credulous people resorted to all the villages within a circuit of twenty miles, there to await the doom of London. Blackheath, Islington, Highgate, Hampstead and Harrow were crowded with panic stricken fugitives who paid exorbitant prices for accommodations in these secure retreats. Such as could not afford to pay for lodgings at these places encamped in the surrounding fields.

As is usual in panics, the fear became contagious, and hundreds who had laughed at the prediction a week before packed up their goods and chattels when they saw others doing so and hastened away. The river was thought to be a place of great security, and accordingly all the available merchant vessels and barges were packed with people, who passed the night between the 4th and 5th on board, expecting every moment to see St. Paul's totter and the towers of Westminster abbey rock and fall amid a cloud of dust. But on the following day the greater part of the fugitives returned, convinced that the prophecy was a false one. A few months afterward Bell was confined in a lunatic asylum, where he died.

Great consternation was caused in London in 1524 by a prediction that on the 1st day of February the waters of the Thames would overflow the whole city of London and wash away 10,000 houses. The prophecy was implicitly believed, and many families packed up their goods and removed into Kent and Essex. As the time drew near the numbers of these emigrants increased. In January droves of workmen might be seen, followed by their wives and children, trudging on foot to the villages within fifteen or twenty miles to await the catastrophe. People of a higher class were also to be seen in vehicles bound on a similar errand.

By the middle of January at least 20,000 persons had quitted the doomed city, leaving nothing but the bare walls of their homes to be swept away by the impending floods. Many of the wealthier class took up their abode on the heights of Hampstead, Highgate and Blackheath, and some erected tents as far away as Waltham abbey on the north and Croydon on the south of the Thames.

On the fateful morning the wondering crowds were astir at an early hour to watch the rising of the waters. It was predicted that the inundation would be gradual, not sudden, so that they expected to have plenty of time to escape as soon as they saw the waters rise beyond the usual mark.

The day grew older, and the Thames flowed on quietly as of yore. The tide ebbed at its usual hour, flowed to its usual height and then ebbed again, just as if twenty astrologers had not pledged their word to the contrary.

Blank were their faces as evening approached, and as blank grew the faces of the citizens to think that they had made such fools of themselves. Night set in, and the obstinate river would not lift its waters to sweep away even one home out of the 10,000. Still, however, the people were afraid to go to sleep. Many hundreds remained up till dawn of the next day, lest the deluge should come upon them like a thief in the night.

On the morrow it was seriously discussed whether it would not be advisable to duck the false prophets in the river. Luckily for them they thought of an expedient which allayed the popular fury. They asserted that by an error they had fixed the date of this awful inundation a century too early. The present generation of cockneys were safe and London would be washed away, not in 1524, but in 1624.—London Family Herald.

There is no witness so terrible, no accuser so powerful, as conscience.—Polybius.

Many a towering business success owes its first strides to the little modest want ad, timidly bidding for customers.

Your little business may be helped to success in the same way by the Daily Press.

Mail ads are the "Bargain Counter" of newspaper space, and you should have your share of the benefits.

NEW YORK NOW HAS AN ANTI-PROFANITY CAMPAIGN.

A great American anti-profanity campaign began so far as New York is concerned, and hundreds of men took the pledge. A. S. Colborne, president of the Anti-profanity league, held forth under the shadow of Ben Franklin's statue on Park row.

Mr. Colborne's observation during the past ten years has led him to classify some of the swearers as follows:

Stevedores—Worst of all.
Truck drivers—Very little better.
Cafe loungers—Bad in spots.
Strap hangers—Almost justifiable.
Baseball fans—Picturesque vocabulary.
Reporters—Almost hopeless.
Structural iron workers—Bad.
Miners and factory workers—Very bad.
Brokers—Improving.
School children—In need of reform.

BRITISH LINE HAS TO PAY FOR TRAINING OF CADETS.

Company Which Once Had Waiting List Now Short of Men.

The Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation company, which has a subsidy of $5,000 a day from the British government for every day in the year to operate the Indian, China and Australian mail service, has been compelled to pay for the education of cadets on the training ships on account of the scarcity of officers. Ten years ago the same company and the Royal Mail had long waiting lists of applicants, and in addition to having second officer's certificate at least the applicant had to come of good family and also possess some slight income.

The meanest cargo steamship owners at ports like Hull, Glasgow, Shields and Newcastle have had to increase the pay of their officers and crew and give them better food and quarters in order to get men for their ships. Under the union rules in England now the captains cannot stop the wages of the crews as they used to do for trivial offenses, such as not being shaved, washed and dressed for muster, two days' pay; not being in uniform on the promenade decks, two days' pay; answering an officer impertinently or expectorating on the quarterdeck, a penalty of the same amount. If money is stopped today the sailor or fireman can go before a magistrate and compel the owner to pay him.

This is the result of years of injustice to the sailor who had no friends and no redress. The superintendents of the English or Scotch board of trade offices where the men were paid off were despotic tyrants and would not allow a man to speak up for his rights. The captain was a god.

French Expedition Leaves In June For Franz Josef Land.

Important results are expected from the French arctic expedition which will set out from Havre in June for the exploration and scientific examination of Franz Josef Land under the command of Jules de Payer, an Austrian by birth, whose father was the discoverer of this archipelago in 1873.

De Payer's ship will carry, besides himself, a navy lieutenant, an ensign, two captains, two medical men, naturalists, geologists and an army aviator, who will have two aeroplanes, as exploration by air will, if practicable, be an important feature of the expedition.

A wireless station will be erected, which will be in communication with the Eiffel tower. When the polar winter breaks the expedition will divide into two parties, one of which, headed by De Payer and provided with several sledges, dogs, small boats and kites, will make a dash for the northeast to ascertain the starting point of the unfathomable abyss which bounds the north European submarine continent, according to the researches of Nansen and the Prince of Monaco.

WOULD BOX FOR NEW LAW.

Legislator In Illinois Proposes Demonstration With Pugilist.

That ocular demonstration will aid in passing the boxing bill before the state legislature of Illinois is the belief of Representative George C. Hilton, who drafted the bill.

Representative Hilton recently challenged "Packey" McFarland to meet him in a four round exhibition before members of both houses soon in the arsenal at Springfield.

Hilton is a skilled amateur boxer and declared he was prepared to receive a majority of the punches if he could convince the lawmakers that boxing, as regulated under his bill, is a clean, scientific sport and should be permitted in Illinois.

Another Big Fire In Japan.

Two thousand houses, almost the entire town, were burned recently in Numadzu, south of Tokyo. These included the government buildings. A number of lives were lost. The loss is estimated at $3,500,000.

YOU CAN'T STUMP SCOOP--HE GOT THE INTERVIEW

"MAC" SAYS

That P. H. S. will have no "sinecure" in the third game with the Borough High School boys without the aid of "Skipper" Woodhull tomorrow is a foregone conclusion. The local captain says that he will not be able to play.

The question now arises "Who will be the substitute?" P. H. S. has not made a specialty of developing second string men this year and it may be difficult to fill in the gap.

Several from this city attended the A. A. U. championships at Madison Square Garden last night. The meet was one of the biggest ever conducted by that organization.

Basketball at Saengerbund Hall tonight: Nonpareil girls will lineup against an All Star cast organized to wrest the title from the unbeatable local feminine five.

Bowling is getting to be a popular pastime at Scotch Plains. The Parish House has a pair of fine Brunswick alleys and five back tourneys are held there every night.

Jack Martin appears to be burning things up on the Yankees' training trip. The local youngster is Chance's first choice for the shortstop berth.

None of those P. H. S. track athletes have sent in their entries to that DeWitt Clinton meet in New York tonight. They must have had too much of that Dickinson High School affair last week.

Watch these columns for Manager Ernest Dorflinger's story of the Central New Jersey Baseball League tomorrow afternoon. Dorflinger is well qualified to hand out some inside information on the subject.

It's about time somebody got busy on that Sunday-school Baseball League idea. An early start is not to be despised.

Hope Chapel is now out to get another whack at the Y. M. C. A. Ajax. Looks as though the only way they could do it was by getting into that city championship league.

Basketball at the Y. M. C. A., Saengerbund Hall, Hope Chapel and the Scotch Plains Parish House tomorrow afternoon and evening. The sport has evidently held its own through the warm spell and is beginning over again with the advent of cold weather. If fostered the popular indoor game will last until the middle of April.

It does not look as though that city championship league was going to be started off this week. No games have been scheduled in the organization for tomorrow night anyway.

Some say that interest would be lacking in a league of this nature. Competition is the life of trade. That's just as true in basketball as in any other business. A four team league playing with a title at stake ought to arouse some competition.

WORLD'S RECORDS AT A. A. U. GAMES

Madison Square Garden was crowded from floor to ceiling last night when the cream of the athletic world competed for the indoor championships of the Amateur Athletic Union. Many of the competitors had earned fame in the Olympic games at Stockholm and it was the conscensus of expert that never in the history of track and field sports had such a collection of brilliant performers been gathered together to test their speed and skill in an indoor arena. That records would go by the board was expected, but even in the first event enthusiasm reached a high pitch when old Father Time was noticed to be tottering on his perch.

In the very first heat of the 75 yard dash Howard P. Drew, the colored sprinter from Springfield, spread-eagled his field and won by two yards from Frank L. Stephenson of the Trinity Club. The time, 7 4-5 seconds, equalled the championship record held by R. Cloughen, W. J. Keating and A. T. Meyer, all members of the Irish American A. C.

There was an anticlimax in the semi-final when Drew met Rice, the Powder Point School boy, who had been specially primed for the event As in his trial, Drew was in his running like a flash and had a yard on Rice before the men had travelled twenty yards. From that point to the worsted, Drew held his own and again finished in 7 4-5 seconds. Alvah T. Meyer, the hope of the New York division qualified for the final by winning the other semi-final, with O'Hara, of Boston, second. All got away to a splendid start in the final, but Drew again picked up his running with lightning rapidity and squeezed out a yard's advantage before the men were fairly steadied down. The others were level, Meyer and Rice chasing the flying Springfield man almost on even terms. They closed a shade in the last ten yards, but Drew dashed through the tape strong as a lion in 7 3-5 seconds, which equalled the world's record for the distance, made by such old time flyers as Luther Carey, Archie Hahn and Bernie Wefers. Meyer beat Rice on the tape for the place.

Seven started in the two mile walk, in which Al Voellmeke, the seen mile champion, cut out the pace for a mile with Dick Gifford, the mile title holder, at his heels. Voellmeke tripped on the curb just after completing the mile and this was the signal for Gifford to make his effort. The McCaddin man opened a gap of five yards in the next lap and Voellmeke, in his efforts to keep up the hot pace, lifted often enough to earn disqualification. This left F. R. Plant, of the Long Island A. C., to chase Gifford. At one time Plant was twenty yards behind, but a spurt in the last lap landed him in second place, ten yards behind Gifford. Neundorfer, of the New York A. C., was third. Gifford's time of 14:32 2-5 is a new record, as this is a new event in the championship.

Abel Kiviat showed his heels to a small field in the 1,000 yard race and incidentally set up a new indoor record by winning in 2 minutes 15 4-5 seconds, two-fifths of a second faster than his best previous time. E. T. Marceau, Boston A. A.; Homer Baker, New York A. C., and Myles McHugh were the only ones who had the temerity to oppose Kiviat, who had the incide berth, with the others lined up as named. McHugh shot across at the start and collided with Marceau, who also tried to gain the pole advantage. Kiviat dropped in comfortably behind these two and allowed them to lead him for three laps, when he passed McHugh and followed the excellent pace set by Marceau until the bell rang. Kiviat then shot to the front and the issue was never in doubt. In the final 150 yards Kiviat opened up a gap of ten yards, while Baker, who started to race in the final furlong, passed Marceau and beat the Boston man by ten yards for the second position.

Another record was equalled in the hurdle race, in which James I. Wendell, the Wesleyan boy, who holds the intercollegiate championship, dethroned Jack Eller, last season's titleholder. The Wesleyan boy won his trial heat in 9 2-5 seconds, tieing the mark to the credit of Eller and J. L. Hartranft. In the final Wendell was the only one of the four starters that hurdled cleanly. He was in front after clearing the first obstacle and never was in danger. Eller, who finished second, toppled over two of the flimsy hurdles, while Potter, the third man, and Trenholm kicked over one apiece.

Big Pat McDonald, one of the finest, started the crowd yelling when at his first attempt with the twenty-four pound shot he sent the sphere out 39 feet 3¼ inches, beating his own outdoor record of 38 feet 10 11-16 inches, as well as the indoor figures of 38 feet 1 inch, also standing to his credit.

P. H. S. AND N. P. H. S. IN THE DECIDING BASKETBALL LEAGUE STRUGGLE TOMORROW

Saengerbund Hall will be crowded to its limit capacity tomorrow afternoon when the North Plainfield and Plainfield High School basketball teams appear in their third and deciding game of the interscholastic league series with a silver loving cup and seven medals at stake. Both teams will present their strongest lineups and the game is due to be one for blood, the boroughites now ruling a slight favorite. The fact that the game would be played on the North Plainfield team's home court has placed that five in the favorite's role since the toss of the coin to decide the court on which the game was to be played, but their stock soared to an even higher degree yesterday afternoon, when the announcement was made that Edson Woodrull, captain and forward on the Plainfield High School team, would be out of the game, having been forbidden to play by a physician. This naturally disheartened the local school boys to some exient but they will go into the fray tomorrow with the determination to win nevertheless, and it would not be surprising to many to see them turn the trick even with a crippled lineup.

Both the teams involved in the affair have been holding secret practises all week and when they appear in public to contest the all important game each will have something new to spring on the other. The keen rivalry that has always existed between the borough and local High Schools is never brought out to a better advantage than in the annual basketball clashes. N. P. H. S. has won the title four out of the last five years and the Plainfield boys are out for revenge this trip even if they are playing on a court that is new to them and a direct contrast to the one they have to practise on.

Each aggregation has one of the best basketball coaches in this vicinity, George E. Webster, of N. P. H. S., and George W. Wriston, of P. H. S. Both of these men are competent trainers and have worked wonders with teams of seemingly raw recruits this season. The trainer's position is one of the hardest to play but one that merits little praise after the victory is earned.

The two contestants have put the final edges on their training and have been ordered to rest up in preparation for the big fight tomorrow afternoon. "Early to bed" was the last order handed out by either coach and their commands will be complied with by everyone of the ten players.

HOPE CHAPEL GAME.

An aggregation of huskies representing the Dunellen Baraca class will oppose Hope chapel on the local court tomorrow night in a basketball contest and it will undoubtedly be a speedy one from every point of view. Both teams have been traveling along at a fast clip and each is out with a determination to annex a victory.

HOLY CROSS FIVE WALLOPED GRACE

A basketball team floating the colors of the Holy Cross Boys' Club trimmed the Grace Church representative by a count of 51 to 28 last night in a game featured by plenty of field goal shooting and loose guarding. High scores on the part of Conroy and Day sewed up the game for the North Plainfield aggregation, while Krom and McDowell ably upheld the standard of Grace, but their team-mates failed to cooperate and the game went the other direction.

At the end of the initial administration the count stood 29 to 8 in favor of the Holy Cross boys and they increased their lead even greater in the final period. Grace played the game with several substitutes in the lineup and this in part accounted for their lack of team work and general defensive play.

'PLAINS BOWLERS DEFEAT WESTFIELD

Low Scoring Games on Parish House Alleys All Won by Home Team.

Scotch Plains Parish House pin smashers recorded a triple triumph over the Westfield bowlers on the Parish House alleys last night by virtue of some consistent pinning on the part of Joe Alberts and Vanderbilt. The 'Plains representatives hung up scores of 754, 806 and 711 against the marks of 659, 729 and 695 made by the visiting wood smashers. No very remarkable high scores were chalked up in any one of the trio of contests and the Parish House delegation was not forced to bowl double century tallies in order to overcome the Mt. Ararat combination.

Westfield's scores were exceptionally low, none of the men scoring over 170 with the exception of Allegar, the Westfield High School boy, who made 172. Vanderbilt got the highest mark of the evening when he rolled 190 in the second game.

A pair of basketball games were contested by the juvenile basket cagers in the Y. M. C. A. junior college league yesterday afternoon, the athletes representing Yale trouncing Pennsylvania to the tune of 26 to 17, and those representing Princeton defeating the Harvard color bearers by a count of 19 to 8. CHANCE PICKS JACK MARTIN FOR SHORT Plainfield Youngster Tearing Things up in Southern Training Camp.

Private letters received from the training camp of the New York American baseball team at Bermuda indicate that Chance has already arrived at several important conclusions after his first few tryouts with the youngsters. Jack Martin, the local boy, who was brought back from the Rochester team, of the International League, has been the peerless leader's first choice for the shortstop berth, over Barry, the other contender for the position, who has proven a wonder in the field but lacks the seasoning Martin has undergone. An exhibition game will be played between the regulars and the Yannigans at Hamilton, Bermuda, tomorrow, and Martin has been selected to cavort around short for the first team.

Ever since Jack has been in the camp he has been doing great stunts and has called forth a large amount of newspaper comment.

The New York Sun says: "Jack Martin, who has lots of pepper, has made a hit with Chance. Martin says he is going to prove to Chance that he is the right man for the shortstop job. Jack is as enthusiastic as ever and showed plenty of speed yesterday. Chance likes Martin's spirit and says the youngster has the makings of a good infielder."

The New York Sun this morning printed the following about Jack Martin:

"Derrick, so far, hasn't struck his best gait at shortstop but Jack Martin already has favorably impressed Chance with his ginger hustling. If Martin's arm is strong enough to make the long throw across the diamond it will not be surprising if Chance gives him a thorough trial at third base before the New Yorks come home."

NO STEEPLECHASE WILL BE HELD HERE

None Booked for Watchung Hunt Club—Official Date List for Circuit.

Official announcement is made of the dates for the racing and steeplechase meets to be held during the early spring and summer. Owing to the fact that the Watchung Hunt Club has no suitable place now for its annual steeplechase the local club has lost its date for the meet, and it is a foregone conclusion that the meet will not be held. What the club proposes to do is not known at present. It may combine with the Monmouth County Hunt. This is generally regretted by the friends of the sport, as the Plainfield meet was considered one of the best on the circuit.

The biggest meet of the season will be given by the Piping Rock Racing Association at Locust Valley, L. I., on June 5, 7 and 9, the association having offered unusually large purses, as well as valuable cups. It is regretted that this meet will interfere to some extent with the Plainfield Horse Show which comes in that same week.

April 26, Rockaway Hunt Club, Cedarhurst, L. I.; April 30 to May 3, Meadowbrook Hunt Club, Meadowbrook, L. I.; May 7-10, United Hunts, Belmont Park; May 12-20, Philadelphia Hunts; May 22, 24, 26, Washington Hunts; May 28, 29, 30, 31, Maryland United Hunts, Baltimore, Md.; June 5, 7, 9, Piping Rock Racing Association, Locust Valley, L. I.; June 10, International polo match, America vs. England, Meadowbrook, L. I.; June 14, 18, 21, Brookline, Mass. The above schedule of meets is considered one of the strongest ever arranged. It will be noticed that practically all of the meets are held prior to the one at Locust Valley, so that the entrants will go there with their horses in fine condition to compete for the big prizes offered by the Piping Rock Racing Association.

Callahan Belittles Jackson.

Jimmy Callahan is quoted as saying that Joe Jackson hit .342 in Cleveland and .007 on the road. Still other teams could use that sort of hitter and leave him at home when on the road.

NONPAREIL'S TITLE AT STAKE TONIGHT

All Star Cast Will Endeavor to Lower Formidable Standing of the Local Team.

A girls' basketball game that will probably excite considerable interest will be played on the Saengerbund Hall court tonight between Manager Burnett Brodziak's all star aggregation of feminine basket cagers and the Nonpareil five, of this city. Ever since the Nonpareils established their first claim to the New Jersey feminine basketball title teams of all calibres have been trying to get a chance to lower the local quintet's colors and in order to allay all of these possible contenders' yearnings it was decided to form an all star team of composite strength to endeavor to wrest the local and State title from the Nonpareils. The team that Mr. Brodziak has gothered together is probably the strongest that could be obtained in this vicinity and the newly formed combination have been holding regular practises in anticipation of lowering the Nonpareil's colors.

Players will be in the lineup from the Y. W. C. A., Scotch Plains Parish House and Westfield High School teams and the formidable crew organized will force the Nonpareils to extend themselves to the limit in order to finish in the lead. Saengerbund Hall presents one of the best courts in this vicinity for a girls' basketball game and for that reason the North Plainfield rendezvous was selected as the battle field.

The two teams will face each other tonight as follows:

Y. W. C. A. TRIMMED 'PLAINS MAIDENS

Easy Victory Chalked up by Local Team in the Parish House Gym.

Five delegates from the Y. W. C. A. gym department went to Scotch Plains last night and administered a 39 to 16 trouncing to the girls' team of the Scotch Plains Parish House without much exertion along the basket caging line. The game was played with girls' rules governing, but no lines were used, and from a spectator's point of view was an unusually slow and uninteresting contest to witness. Little brilliant playing was evidenced on the part of either aggregation and for the most part the players played slow and listlessly.

What real signs of basketball were displayed came from Miss Sadie Lee, of the 'Plains' aggregation, and Miss Helen George, of the Y. W. C. A. team. Miss Lee got in some pretty shots from the field and Miss George scored an even dozen of the field variety.

BOROUGH COUNCIL OFFENDS WHITE

THREATEN TO RESIGN

"M[illegible] work of myself and col[illegible] held in such small esteem [illegible]ed so trivial by the Mayor re[illegible]cil as to only appropriate [illegible] for our work for the en[illegible] year, whereas last year we [illegible] over double that amount, then [illegible]esign and you can place the work [illegible]e hands of the children of the [illegible]ough." Thus spoke Henry C. [illegible]hite, chairman of the North Plain[illegible]ld Shade Tree Commission before members of the Borough Council at their regular monthly meeting last night. In the budget for 1913, the Council had appropriated but $250 while $516 spent in 1912 was found insufficient.

Mr. White added, "The members of the commission are perfectly willing to continue their good work for the benefit of the borough if we have sufficient funds to work with, but if our efforts which consume a great deal of our time, is taken as a joke, we no longer wish to serve." As the councilmen leaned back in their easy chairs and covered their features with their hands to hide the smiles which had overcome their countenances during Mr. White's recital, the latter grew indignant, but finally had to laugh himself. In conclusion the Shade Tree Commissioner requested that the Mayor and Council take action in the matter before the meeting ended. Neither the Mayor or Council, however, answered his request one way or another and Mr. White left the Council chambers. And the councilmen laughed some some, but did not mention the subject again, during the evening, nor did they say whether the resignation of the commission would be accepted or refused.

On motion of Councilman Alexander Milne, a resolution was adopted that the borough pay for the bonding of the mashals in amounts which are for $500 each. At the last meeting Mr. Milne offered a resolution making the marshals exempt from being placed under bonds, but it was defeated. In the past the members of the police department have been abliged to furnish bonds themselves, which has proved a hardship in some cases.

A resolution was adopted to urge the Somerset county legislators to have the Police Tenure of Office Act revised to contain a provision to the effect that in case the membership of a police department becomes two large, it can be made smaller. A petition was received and filed from the residents of Manning avenue, asking for better lighting facilities in their neighborhod. The fire department will profit by several resolutions that were adopted. Lieutenant Albert Fritz was promoted from Class 3 to Class 2 and will receive $5 more per month in salary. He has served in the department for over three years. Driver William Hogan also received a similar advance. Ten pairs of rubber boots and ten cats will also be purchased for the callmen and bids will be secured on 300 feet of hose to be purchased.

The bid of the Plainfield Trap Rock Company was accepted for crushed stone to be used in the borough during the ensuing year, at figures identical with those of last year. The following building permits were issued: Manning avenue, 2½ story frame dwelling, owner T. J. Hughes; 102 Duer street, two story frame addition, owner E. D. Genung; 212 Grove street, frame addition, owner S. O. Driver; Howard street, one story frame shop, owner Lewis Stulz; Whitewood avenue, 2½ story frame dwelling, owner George S. Robson; Watchung avenue, two story frame addition, owner M. L. Chamberlain; 29 Craig place, one story fireproof garage, owner Andrew Wilson.

O'BRIEN IS NOW OUT OF HIS COUNTY JOB

Elizabeth, March 8.—The Union County Mosquito Commission met last night and discussed the question of filling vacancies existing in the commission, including that of chief inspector, which was held by John O'Brien, of Plainfield, who resigned some time ago. No decision was reached, but a Summit man is likely to succeed Mr. O'Brien. The terms of Dr. Fred Sell, of Rahway, and Dr. James S. Green, of Elizabeth, have expired, and they will propably be re-appointed by Justice Bergen.

O'Brien recently resigned as health officer of Plainfield.

WON'T HAVE MOVIES HOUSE ON DUER ST.

Borough Council Unanimously Refuses Application for a License.

When members of the Casino Amusement Company, represented by Francis J. Blatz, appeared before the North Plainfield Council last night to urge favorable action on their application for a license for an open air theatre in Duer street, several hundred feet from Craig place, they were met by a storm of protest, in the form of written petitions and verbal statements from many citizens who crowded the meeting room. As had been announced at the last meeting of the Council all who wished to protest against the proposed moving picture establishment in the borough were given a chance to voice their disapproval last night. Some brought petitions with them and others lined up behind former Mayor Newton B. Smalley, who said he had come there to object in the interests of residents of Duer street.

Although, as pointed out by Councilman Alexander Milne, Mayor Robert Clark, Jr., has the power to grant or refuse all licenses of this kind, the matter was placed before the Council for decision. After both sides had been heard, Councilman Allan Cowperthwait as a matter of form made a motion that the license be granted. When the vote was taken it was found that every Councilman present had voted "no" including Mr. Cowperthwait, and the first proposition inaugurated for a moving picture theatre in the borough was defeated.

The defeat of the amusment company and the victory for those opposed to the project was complete and overwhelming. Not a person present but those affiliated with interests of the Casino Amusement Co., was in favor of having the license granted.

Mr. Blatz presented arguments why the license should be granted. He said the entertainment would be confined to motion pictures and that an up-to-date ice cream parlor would be a feature. He endeavored to prove that the erection of the building would be an improvement to the locality.

When the opposition was asked to present its side, Clerk Charles M. Dolliver read a petition signed by nearly every citizen living in the vicinity of the proposed amusement establishment, protesting against the granting of the license. A similar communication was sent in by John H. Van Winkle. Andrew Wilson who had signed the first mentioned document addressed a communication to the Council asking that his name be crossed off the petition, saying that after learning the character of the project, he was heartily in favor of it.

Newton B. Smalley then took the floor, and said in part: "The citizens having their homes and property in Duer street should have their interests protected by the Mayor and Council who are appointed for that purpose. And when a building is proposed to be erected in their midst their wishes on the matter should be considered and adhered to. I am surprised that the Mayor and Council should consider this proposition for one minute. The objection of the people is unanimous. The Duer street people paid for the opening of that thoroughfare and to form a precedent by granting a license of this kind against the wishes of the people living on the streets affected, would be a dangerous step to take."

Several other citizens also took the floor one saying, "Mayor I'll leave this matter to you, I know you will stand by us and do the right thing." Former Councilman W. J. Buttfield told of the risk due to fire, etc., and said as a resident of the borough he could not help but actively oppose any movement that was detrimental to the borough at large.

There is also a New York concern endeavoring to secure permission from the Mayor to erect a moving picture theatre, in whose application it is stated that they are willing to conform with the wishes of the Council and citizens in respect to location. If a site for this amusement should be selected along the business section of Somerset street, it is the common belief that the opposition would be small, if any at all.

WILL ADDRESS MACHINISTS.

George Preston, of Washington, general secretary and treasurer of the International Association of Machinists, will address the members of the local association in Eagle Hall, Monday night at 8 o'clock. The meeting has been arranged especially for the machine tool workers and an effort is being made to secure a large attendance of machinists. The meeting will be open to all interested.

CONLIN STARTS ON 15,000-MILE TRIP

Frederick Conlin, of Kensington avenue, left today on the United Fruit Company's steamer, "Sixola," bound for Panama. His point of destination will be Coquimbo, Chile, where he goes as the representative of the Bethlehem Steel Company, for the purpose of inspecting one of the most valuable ore mines in the world, which was acquired by the company three months ago. En route Mr. Conlin will touch every port on the West Coast of Africa to Patagonia. The trip to and from Coquimbo will cover a distance of 15,000 miles and will require about three months' time.

The property acquired by the Bethlehem Steel Company is known as the Tofo mines. They are located about four miles from the coast at an elevation of about 2,500 feet, and the product is carried from the mine to the coast by a cable system. The company proposes to begin operations at the mines within a year. They will be able to ship millions of tons of ore north and for that purpose is now planning to build ten modern steamers each of 15,000 tons burden. The route to and from Coquimbo will be by the way of the Panama Canal, which it is declared will change the balance of trade in favor of the United States.

It is impossible at this time to estimate the value of the steel company's new mines, it being almost incalculable, he says. The company is now having plans prepared for the ten new steamers which will be employed in this new trade, and this of itself will represent an outlay of millions of dollars. Mr. Conlin will visit the mines for the purpose of obtaining all the data concerning the property and making a complete report to the company.

BORO TO PAY FOR INDIGENT PATIENTS

Arrangements to have Muhlenberg Hospital care for the indigent patients sent from the borough of North Plainfield, were made at a meeting of the North Plainfield Council last night when resolutions were adopted that a contract be entered into with the institution and $500 was taken from the contingent fund and placed on account of the "hospital fund." The borough will pay to the hospital $2 per day for each patient, but a maximum amount for one year is placed at $600.

The contract provides that Muhlenberg Hospital shall receive and care for all indigent patients sent by the borough of North Plainfield during the year 1913, and that in payment the borough of North Plainfield shall "from time to time set aside appropriations to be kept in a separate fund known as the Hospital Fund, which fund shall be drawn upon by warrant or voucher the same as other funds of the borough of North Plainfield. The sum of said appropriations, insofar as is now authorized by law, shall be in the same ratio to the real and personal ratables of said borough of the year 1912, as the amount which shall be paid for the purposes herein stated to said hospital during the year nineteen hundred and thirteen by the Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, bears to its real and personal ratables of the year nineteen hundred and twelve."

The appropriation for hospital purposes was made possible by a recent bill passed by the State Legislature and introduced by Assemblyman W. W. Smalley, of Bound Brook, which in substance allows a borough to make appropriations to a hospital in another town or city to care for its poor patients.

ALLEGED SWINDLER CLEARED OF CHARGE

When Councilman Francis J. Blatz, now of the law firm of Codington & Blatz, of counsel for 19-year-old Irma Bendotti, of Mt. Bethel, who was arrested several months ago in this city on an indictment charging her with complicity in swindling a wealthy man of San Francisco of $7,700, he said in a statement to a Daily Press reporter:

"I had a long and confidential talk with Miss Bendotti in her cell in police headquarters, and I thoroughly believe she is but a victim of circumstances and wholly innocent of the charges preferred against her."

Yesterday Joseph Bendotti, the girl's brother, who still makes his home in the Mt. Bethel Hotel, received a telegram from San Francisco saying that his sister had been acquitted. It is probable that Miss Bendotti will come to this city and make her home again.

Sensational revelations followed Miss Bendotti's arrest in this city. She had been trailed for several weeks by a private detective and when evidence of her supposed guilt had been secured, she was taken to headquarters. She admitted that she had been touring Europe and this county with Rinaldo de Pietro, who posed as her husband. de Pietro is also wanted by the San Francisco authorities on the charge as lodged against her. Frank DeBois, another Italian, said to have assisted in the alleged swindle, was captured several weeks ago in Chicago and is awaiting arraignment in San Francisco. It is thought that Miss Bendotti was used as a tool for the two men, whom the western detectives classed as expert bunco men who have operated all over the country.

Miss Bendotti was taken to San Francisco by Detective Gallatian from that city after she had made a futile fight against extradition through her counsel.

FOR ENTERTAINMENT AT THE SANITORIUM

Efforts have been undertaken by Nathan R. Leavitt, of Elizabeth, to raise a fund with which to purchase a piano-player and Victrola for the use of the inmates of Bonnie Burn Sanitorium. Already about $70 has been subscribed. Anything that would tend to divert the attention of the patients is considered wise and desirable.

Patients sitting on the verandas would be able to hear these instruments because the windows and doors are open. Bed patients soon tire of reading in the reclining position and some of the patients are not able to make reading a pleasure for any length of time.

The children who are unable to read will also be able to enjoy the "canned music," as well as the grown-ups. It is proposed to buy records to suit all tastes, classical, comic, rag-time melodies and religious selections. Anyone wishing to contribute toward this object can send their contributions to the office of the Plainfield Daily Press and they will be acknowledged and forwarded to the proper person. The following contributions have been received by Mr. Leavitt todate:

W. J. McCloud	$5.00
Samuel Schleimer	$5.00

ELKS TO PRESENT EIGHTH MINSTREL

A Mammoth Production Will Be Staged at the Plainfield Theatre by Local Lodge.

Something original, distinctively worth while and full of pith will be brought out in the eighth annual minstrel show of Plainfield Lodge, No. 885, B. P. O. E., to be presented in the Plainfield theatre Thursday and Friday evenings, March 27 and 28. Songs of muliform variety and jokes that are guaranteed to provoke a side splitting laugh, even from those who carry their jocular sense in the remotest portion of their anatomy have been gathered together by the committee producing the mammoth affair and may be administered to the unprepared public in dress that will produce perpetual laughter. No effort or money has been spared to make the affair the biggest and most complete ever staged in this or surrounding cities and when the eventful night arrives the antlered tribe will find a house packed to its utmost capacity to reward them for their tireless efforts, if present indications in connection with the sale of tickets bears any significance.

The old adage of "Shop early and avoid the rush" is one to be heeded in connection with the purchasing of Elks' minstrel tickets, as has been evidenced in former years, and if you want those tickets for the family and neighbors next door you had better grab the first man with antlers that you meet on the street and convince him that you want these tickets. You know just what Elks' performances have been in the past? Well, just add somemore to that and you have an essence of what is in store for you at the eighth annual.

The 1913 model will be better and brighter, snappier and happier than ever before with George O. Stevens, the grand old man of minstrelsy, occupying the centre of the stage once more in the role of interlocutor. Such a quintet of jocose end men as Harry Blimm, Edward Bennett, John J. Campbell, John H. Cose, Charles J. Ward and William Firstbrook could not be duplicated between here and the place where Doctor Cook obtained his notoriety. What these merrymaking rail to produce along the joke springing circuit was produced last year, everything in this year's performance savoring of originality. The end men will be supported by a troupe of sixty, a chorus bigger than any ever backing up a minstrel cast in this city. Something more along the novelty line was inaugurated by the coaches of the show, William E. MacClymont and Harry Weber, when they did away with the old fashioned semi-circle arrangement and staged the blackface entertainment in the form of a carbaret show with all the accessories that have made that kind of amusement as popular as it is today. The scenery, music and lighting effects are the last word in completeness and add greatly to the comedians' attempts to amuse and arouse. The following committees and managers have been selected to take charge of the affair; Stage manager, Elmer Cutting; publicity committee, Frederick L. Steffens, Dr. C. L. Crist and V. W. Nash, Jr.; ticket committee, Dr. C. L. Crist and W. S. Marder.

AGOGA SOCIAL.

Special features marked the formal opening of the club rooms of the Agoga Bible Class of the Park Avenue Baptist church last night. The members of the class entertained their friends and a special program of vocal and instrumental music and recitations was given for their benefit. This was the program: Recitations, Miss Martha Castner; vocal solos, Miss Edith Bechtel, Carl Wilson and former City Judge William N. Runyon; piano duets, Mrs. Caroline Schuyler and Miss Ruth Pratt. The social committee, of which Fred V. Mills is chairman, and the house committee, of which Irving Pratt is chairman, were in charge of the affair.

AS TO JOINT SEWER.

The required consents in the form of petitions were received by the North Plainfield Council last night, authorizing the holding of a special election to secure the opinions of the citizens regarding the proposed joint sewer system between Plainfield, Dunellen and the borough. A resolution was adopted to advertise all information regarding the election thirty days before taking place in the North Plainfield Review, the only paper published in the borough.

STEIN ACCEPTS HIS RESIGNATION

LETTERS MADE PUBLIC

Though Convinced he is Protected by Civil Service Law, Local Lawyer Steps Out Because His Private Practice Would Otherwise Suffer.

Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., of this city, has tendered his resignation as assistant prosecutor of Union county and it has been accepted by Prosecutor A. A. Stein to take effect at the latter's pleasure. The retiring assistant made an excellent record as assistant to C. Addison Swift, whom Stein recently succeeded.

The following is the letter from Mr. Hetfield to Prosecutor Stein:

My dear Mr. Stein:

Realizing that your term as Prosecutor of the Pleas of Union county commences Tuesday, March 11, and not knowing just what position you intend to take regarding the status of Assistant Prosecutor under the Civil Service, I take this opportunity to inform you that while I feel that Assistant Prosecutors are classified in the exempt class of the Civil Service, I find that my private practice demands so much of my time that I cannot give it the attention it requires if I retain the office I now hold.

I, therefore tender my resignation as Assistant Prosecutor of the Pleas of Union county, to take effect at your pleasure.

With best wishes for the success of your term, I am

Respectfully yours,
WALTER L. HETFIELD, JR.

Prosecutor Stein's reply:

My dear Mr. Hetfield:

I have yours of the 6th inst. regarding your office as Assistant Prosecutor of the Pleas and I hereby accept same. It is very generous of you to permit me to fix date on which your resignation would take effect. In view of the knowledge you possess relative to the indictments heretofore found but not yet tried, I will avail myself of your offer to serve until further notice from me.

With assurances of high regard and appreciation, I am

Yours truly,
ALBERT A. STEIN.

JOY RIDING CHAUFFEUR FINDS JUDGE IS EASY

Elizabeth, March 8.—Before Judge Connolly in the county court yesterday afternoon, Bradford Blauvelt, of Central avenue, Plainfield, the seventeen-year-old chauffeur for Andrew McCardell, also of Plainfield, was arraigned on a charge of using the car without his employer's consent in violation of the motor vehicle laws. The young offender pleaded guilty and after his lawyer, J. H. Crane, of Plainfield, had made a dramatic plea in his behalf, the court suspended sentence.

POSTPONES SENTENCE ON ELOPING HUSBAND

Elizabeth, March 8.—Frank B. Foley, who deserted his wife in Poughkeepsie, N. Y., and was arrested in North Plainfield on a serious charge, in company with Miss Etta Wood, who eloped with him, was to have been sentenced yesterday by Judge Connolly in the County Court. Owing to the efforts of his wife, who is interposing for him, however, the passing of sentence was postponed for a week. In the meantime, Mrs. Foley, who has forgiven her husband for his treatment of her, is continuing her work of intervention in an effort to save him from a prison sentence.

Foley deserted his wife December 27 and was arrested in the borough by the local police January 31. His apprehension disclosed startling revelations of broken marriage vows. He had lived since the elopment with Mrs. Wood, a widow, and Kenneth Foley, a 7-year-old son of the bad acting husband, was forced to call her "mother." Foley's wife and other relatives including his sister came to this city in an effort to have him prosecuted according to law.

N. P. H. S. NOTES.

Because the girls' basketball team won the city feminine championship this year the Girls' Athletic Association has given each member of the team a mackinawcoat. Last year the team received gold medals and as most of last year's team are still in the game it was decided not to get a cup and medals.

At a meeting of the Girls' Athletic Association yesterday morning it was decided to give a cake and candy sale in the near future. Committees for cake, candy, ice cream and entertainment will be appointed in a few days.

There is some talk of the girls organizing a baseball team as was done last year. Last season the feminine nine practised quite a little but the manager failed to arrange any games. They are now thinking very seriously of getting a coach and starting practise.

The girls' basketball team will play the girls' team from Somerville High School next Monday afternoon at Saengerbund Hall. This will probably be the last game of its kind for the High School teams this season.

The members of the girls' basketball team who will receive the mackinaw coats are Captain C. Smith, Manager Elsie Debele dred McAuliffe, Marion Ma jorie Burtis and Lucy Doug

The Freshmen basket now has the undisputed cla class league championship won six games against onl defeat. The team will either medals or a class banner to up in the school. The cham squad is as follows: Captain, Wal Townley, George Welling, Addis Newkirk, Raymond Parsch, Geor Kirch and Oscar Dilts. Since the base ball season is so near at hand the league schedule will probably be discontinued.

The Athletic Association play is progressing very fast under the direction of Mr. Mertz and will be ready for the stage about the second week in April. The cast is working very hard to make the play a great success and to uphold the reputation made in previous years.

Miss Terry, instructor of history in the High School who was called to her home last Tuesday, is expected to return to her duties next Monday morning.

STYLE SR RELIABILITY.

At the dinner of the Business Men's Credit Association last evening, Mr. Harry Marshall, the President, said, "the merchant to be successful must give the BEST merchandise for the LEAST money"—You may be sure that the above applies to Rothberg's store.

Mr. Harry C. Runyon, a prominent lawyers, said, that "after a careful investigation I find 496 local merchants have a total of $190,600 on their books for the year 1912—and most of this is uncollectable." My store sells for cash only—thus eliminating losses in that direction. Wouldn't YOU want to share in that saving?

My Creed

To sell for cash only.

To sell at a moderate profit.

To show the new good things first.

To be courteous to every customer.

To warrant absolute satisfaction.

One-third of the paint-money goes for the paint, two-thirds for the painter. It all goes by the gallon; look out for the gallons. The least-gallons paint is Devoe.

Fewer Gallons or No Pay

Paint half of your house with any other paint; paint half with Devoe. The other-paint half will take the most gallons; if not, we will make no charge for Devoe.

Wears Longer or No Pay

Here's another offer.

Paint half of your house with lead-and-oil: the other half with Devoe lead-and-zinc.

In three years the lead-and-oil half will need repainting, while the Devoe half will be about like new.

If not, we will give you the paint for the whole house.

COMMISSION GOVERNMENT.

Commission government is an issue now in all parts of this country. It is an issue because of the pronounced failure of the prevailing form of municipal government to meet the requirements of the times and because of the notorious fact that extravagance and graft in its various forms have been the rule rather than the exception in the administration of the affairs of municipalities in general. One of the chief weaknesses of this old form of municipal government is "the absence of definite individual responsibility for the general welfare and the consequent inability to locate blame for wrong action," and this is one of the principal reasons why political bosses have flourished.

This defect is remedied in commission government by greatly reducing the number of men responsible for the administration of the city's affairs and fixing upon one, each, the exclusive direction, subject to the approval of the majority of his associates, of one of the departments of the city government. Thus, under the present law of New Jersey, Plainfield would elect five commissiners. To one of these commissioners would be assigned the department of streets; to a second the department of gas, water, lights and kindred matters; to a third the department of public safety; and so on. So instead of electing about fifteen city officials we would elect five and responsibility would be centralized and definitely placed as to each department on some one officer instead of divided between fifteen officers, to no one of whom can a citizen go with any assurance that he is going to the responsible one.

Plainfield is a great corporation, its stockholders the citizens of Plainfield, and it is constantly having business dealings with other corporations big and little and to drive a fair bargain with them it must meet them with equally well organized and harmonious and responsible management. To put the case in the forcible language of another with slight changes in its wording: "Just so long as the people of this or any other city with inferior machinery undertake to meet the centralized management and administrative machinery of large corporations, just so long will the corporations be able, in nine cases out of ten, to accomplish what they wish, while the people of the city are wondering how it happened." Is not this prophetic of Plainfield's situation just now? Will any one contend that Plainfield, really a great corporation, has or has had or can have under the present system the compact organization of firm and common purpose to compare in efficiency with that of those corporations it is now in critical controversy with? Is this not a time when every one of us should grasp at the opportunity to create the effective organization which our laws now permit and which cities in every State in the union are hastening to do?

Already some two hundred and twenty-five cities have adopted some form of commission government, and according to the most authentic information all of these cities are pleased with the change. They get what they want, they get it quickly, and they get it economically. In most cases the tax rate has been lowered. Yet improvements have been more rapid and more substantial than under the old order.

The advocacy of the commission form government for Plainfield does not mean of necessity that municipal government in Plainfield has been a failure, for it is known far and wide that Plainfield by comparison with other cities ranks high. It means that its advocates want Plainfield to keep in the forefront, to continue to have the best. To do this it must adopt the most approved form of government. It must have the most practicable, the most representtive form of government. It must have a government to which its exceptionally high average of citizenship can make known its needs and demands.

The question then is shall the "Queen City" this "loveliest village of the Plain," keep abreast of the times in government affairs and move onward and upward along that line of least resistance which not only approved theory declares, but which experience has proven, to be the most workable, the most practicable and the most economical. Who amongst us so heedless of wisdom and experience, who so reckless of the city's progress and the future, would oppose this beneficient movement?

LEROY J. ELLIS.

THE FORUM.

EVOLUTION NOT A THEORY.

Editors, Plainfield Daily Press:

Permit me a word of comment on your article entitled "Scientists tell of Ape Ancestry," and as having constitutional, to say nothing of conscientious objections to such an ancestry, that word must be one of protest.

Dean Shailer Matthews assures us that the doctrine of evolution is so absolutely proved that it only remains for us old-fashioned folks who love our Bibles to bring them into conformity with this well-proved truth, or, if we cannot do this, then we must let out Bibles go, and cleave to evolution.

As illustrating this absolute proof, he gives a few quotations out of those received from certain eminent scientists; and, as naturally he would select the clearest and most convincing, we can weigh just how much is to be said for it.

First, Prof. Patten, of Dartmouth, tells us "As for biologists, they are now further from agreement as to what constitutes the processes and conditions essential to organic developments, and further from mutual understanding or from a just appreciation of both the supplementary and antagonistic views held by their colleagues than they were a year ago!"

Look at it, sir. Take it in. Enjoy it—it is beautiful. Biologists are getting further and further apart, and the good Dean thinks that is a basis for our loosening our confidence in our Bibles, to adopt—which or what. No, No, we will wait a little longer, and when you are all of one mind, gentlemen, it will be time enough to see then how far you differ from the Bible.

Then Prof. Jacques Loeb, of the Rockefeller Institute, writes: "It was shown through a blood re-action—that a close relationship exists between the man and the anthropoid ape." It was only the other day I was reading that one of the triumphs of modern microscopical work, was the distinct differentiation of the blood of man and of apes. These learned professors apparently cleave proudly to their blood relationship with apes; and while they know well that the blood of the ape and the blood of the man are quite distinguishable, they prefer to claim ape ancestry from a "close relationship." Well, let them have it. Blood is blood I suppose, and there will always be some kind of relationship between bloods, as there is between flesh; but as our Bible says "all flesh is not the same flesh," nor is all blood the same blood.

But again Prof. Loeb says, "Breeding experiments by Mendelian methods have established the fact of the independent disappearance of hereditary factors for unit characters in the germ." There! Is not that luminous and convincing? Pardon me, but I cannot help being reminded of a passage in a book for children by the late Lewis Carrol: Speaking of a certain professor little Sylvie is told that "he is so clever that no one can understand what he says. Indeed, sometimes, he is so very clever that he himself cannot understand what he says." One sometimes thinks that must be the case with our professors.

Scientists are as one in believing in evolution, or the transmutation of species. Are they? Let me mention a few names that were quite as competent as any Dean Matthews has appealed to and who reject it altogether: Agassiz, Dawson, Guyot, Faraday, Vidchow, Dr. Etheridge, of the British Museum, who says, "In all this great museum there is not a particle of evidence of transmutation of species. Nine-tenths of the talk of evolutionists is sheer nonsense. This museum is full of proofs of the falsity of their views." Beale, Meunier, and multitudes of others, so that Haeckel of Jena mourns his lonliness as an advocate of evolution. And a very dishonest one he has proved.

"Ah, but," it is said, "these have for the most part been dead and buried for 20 to 50 years, we have gone far beyond them." Yes, and let these learned professors know that, as a certainty, 20 to 50 years hence their successors will be calling them all kinds of hard names, for their utter incompetency; and very likely for their very adoption of this hypothesis of evolution. Indeed that has begun already in many a learned man joining with Virchow, in saying "It is all nonsense." I have seen similar revulsions even in my day.

In closing, let me refer your readers to the contrast between this discredited guess-work and the grandeur, simplicity, profundity, reasonableness of the first words of our Bible: "In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth," and "So God created man in his own image." I say let them compare these with those discordant views which, as they progress, get further apart; or that hide their own ignorance under a perplexing combination of words that they know well few can understand. Were truth so hidden, then indeed

"Matter would be the rich man's God

One word more, Sir. This is sure; not one single proof do, or can they bring of their theory from what has occurred, or is occurring within the range of man's experience. We can go back many thousand years, and there is not the slightest permanent change for the better, in anything we now see; much less any transmutation of species. Job's war horse is unsurpassed by any modern charger. The instinct of the ant, or bee, or spider has not improved, but is exactly as noted in the earliest records. Our hens continue to lay the same eggs, and the eggs continue to produce the same chickens; each still brings forth "after its kind." But that is exactly what our Bible says. In other words, the Bible is in full conformity with all that we see: evolution is opposed to it.

How coy is this modest evolution—very coy. She will work only when no one is looking; but as soon as she has produced one who could intelligently enjoy her operations;—rejoice to see a radish turned into a rabbit, or an ape into a man—she stops dead;—all at once! She is like those spoiled children who say "I won't play if you look;" or perhaps, rather, like those fraudulent spiritualists who can do nothing till the lights are put out!

There are a good many yet who will say to this "Science falsely so-called:" Out of court with you till you can agree on your evidence, and give indisputable proof, proof that simple men can understand, of its truth; and when you have done that, we shall find it is you who have changed, and not God's Holy Word—the Bible.

ELECTION BILL.

Editors, Plainfield Daily Press:

I notice in your columns the record of a further effort to weaken our chances of securing the nomination of effective candidates for political offices. Senator Leavitt, of Mercer, has introduced a bill providing that any person may have his name printed on the official primary ballot of his party by applying to the proper committee of his party. The communication from Trenton does not state whether the printing the name is intended to be a matter of right, or whether the application is to be subject to the approval of the committee. It is evident that the enactment of such a law would completely do away with the present system of petition, for no one would go to the trouble and expense of preparing, circulating and presenting a petition if he could attain his end by applying to his party committee. This would eliminate all idea of selection, and enable every man who for any purpose desires to fill an office to place his name before his party at the primary election.

The present system is open to the grave charge that it allows the candidate liberty to seek the office, but some check is placed upon him by the requirement that he must find a certain number of his party who agree with him as to his fitness. The primary election law requires amendment to make it a really efficient instrument in the hands of the voters, but not in the way that this bill would amend it. I see that the bill was put in "by request." No doubt Senator Leavitt does not care to assume responsibility for suggesting such a mischievous method of "selecting" primary candidates. It is to be hoped that this bill will be carefully watched, and if it is reported out of committee, promptly killed.

MR. ALLABEN SPEAKS ON DOMESTIC MISSION

Officers were elected, reports were presented and an interesting address was given by M. C. Allaban, superintendent of schools, under the direction of the Women's Board of Missions of the Presbyterian church, at the annual meeting of the Women's Home Missionary Society of the Crescent Avenue church, yesterday afternoon. There was a large attendance of members and all were deeply interested in hearing of the progress of the society. Mrs. I. C. Pierson, the president, directed the program of the afternoon.

Mr. Allaban, who has charge of the mission boarding schools of the denomination, spoke more especially of the work in Alaska, among the Indians in Arizona and the Mountaineers of the South, emphasizing the need for more accommodations for the people who are flocking to these schools. His description of the work that has been accomplished at these schools in the past aroused the interest of the women and inspired them with a desire to do more in the future.

These officers were elected for the coming year: President, Mrs. I. C. Pierson; vice presidents, Mrs. William E. Honyeman and Mrs. Townsend Rushmore; secretary, Mrs. Eugene H. Hatch; treasurer, Mrs. W. W. Myers; secretary of literature, Mrs. Henry R. Halloway. The reports showed that during the past year about $1,300 was raised for home mission work.

After the meeting tea was served. Mrs. DeWitt Hubbell and Mrs. Francis Frost poured and they were assisted in serving by the members of the Westminster Guild. The annual meeting of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society will be held on Tuesday.

To Save our HISTORIC WARSHIPS

The Historic Old Warship Monongahela—Burned to the Water's Edge a Short Time Ago

The Essex in the Days of Her Glory

UNCLE SAM is at last to take steps to restore and preserve a number of historic warships,—naval craft that constitute the most vivid reminders of some of the most significant events in the history of the republic. Some folks who have been under the impression that these precious mementoes have been duly safeguarded all along may think that this is rather a late day to provide for the perpetuation of our most valuable object lessons in patriotism. And so it is, in fact, but there are several explanations of this tardiness.

For one thing, it is only recently that the most famous of these time-honored fighting ships became so sorely in need of repairs that it is evident that something must be done to save the historic hulls. So long as the old ships showed no signs of falling to pieces that spirit of procrastination which rules governments as well as individuals allowed the matter to rest and we went on preserving historic buildings in all parts of the country and treasuring up all manner of historic relics but giving never a thought, seemingly, to the most interesting of all the souvenirs of the republic's development to the status of a world power.

Another circumstance that explains why this subject has only now become a matter of serious consideration is that it is only very laterly that the ravages of time have become manifest in certain modern ships which it is desirable should be preserved for posterity. Reference is made to the American armorclads that figured conspicuously in the Spanish-American War,—notably Admiral Dewey's flagship. These vessels,—all steel ships of the new navy,—are of much more recent date than the old wooden "ships of the line" which ordinarily come to mind when we speak of historic warships but, as it happens, steel ships deteriorate much more rapidly than do wooden craft, and thus it comes about that the latter-day metal warrior show a pressing need of preservative measures just at the time that the marks of old age are making themselves especially apparent in the old wooden vessels, some of them built considerably more than a century ago.

Quite aside from the physical decrepitude of these veteran fighting craft there is another factor which has lately been injected into the situation and which makes the question of the preservation of these old timers, a legislative, we might almost say a political, issue. This added influence is due to certain laws which have been passed by Congress in order to guide the Secretary of the Navy in the administration of his Department of the national government. These laws make it incumbent upon the head of the Navy Department to sell any and all useless and obsolete vessels when the estimated cost of their repairs are in excess of 10 per cent for wooden vessels and 20 per cent for iron and steel vessels of the estimated cost of a new ship of the same size and like material. To illustrate how this restriction would work out in the case of several of the vessels which it is most urgently decided to save, it may be cited that under the law the limit of expenditure on the famous old ship Constellation would be $40,000. On the Portsmouth $22,500 would be the outside figure allowable, whereas in the case of Admiral Dewey's old flagship, the Olympia (a steel vessel) an outlay of $200,000 would be sanctioned. In no instance would the sum allowed be sufficient to put the craft in enduring form for the benefit of future generations.

When the present Secretary of the Navy, Mr. George V. L. Meyer, found that it virtually rested with him personally to save the historic ships, if anybody was to do it, he took a deep interest in the matter and called upon all the bureaus of the Navy Department to provide him with all the information that could be dug up relative to the old ships and their present condition. Not only was the bureau in charge of construction and repair work charged with these responsibilities, but other bureaus such as the Bureau of Navigation, helped the Secretary to gather together ammunition for his crusade.

The present project concerns primarily the rehabilitation of the Constellation, the Portsmouth and the Olympia. With these vessels permanently provided for Uncle Sam's collection of mementoes of victory on the high seas would be reasonably complete. Heading the list, in popular interest, perhaps, is the Hartford, Admiral Farragut's famous flagship. This vessel is yet in active service, doing duty as a station ship at the Charleston Navy Yard, and in a report submitted to the Secretary of the Navy a short time ago it is stated that an investigation has disclosed that this ship can, with occasional small repairs, be kept in her present condition almost indefinitely. The Constitution, another old ship of the line, certainly worthy a place in this category, is serving as a floating museum at the Boston Navy Yard, and by her present function illustrates the ideal disposition for all of the old vessels.

Whereas the present project will insure to the next generation a glimpse of the most interesting naval craft, immortalized in history, it should not be supposed that this will, by any means, be the end of the project for perpetuating old warships. There are several old-timers of the high seas that are yet capable of service of a kind but which will ere long merit not only retirement but preservative measures commensurate with their honorable service. In this class are the old wooden steam vessels, the Essex and Yantic, now loaned to the naval militia. And no one need suppose that the battleship Oregon, which figured so gallantly in the Spanish-American War, will be permitted, when her days of usefulness are over, to be consigned to the junk heap without protest. Then, too, there are schemes afoot which may, unexpectedly, expand the collection of old warships,—as, for instance, the project to recover Commodore Perry's famous flagship, which lies buried in the mud beneath the waters of Lake Erie.

With a single exception, which will be taken up later, Uncle Sam's treatment for the rejuvenation of an aged and infirm wooden warship simply contemplates a restoration that will prolong life in a sheltered haven.

But just as the rule for the sale of Every reader will appreciate that it is a vastly different matter to so repair an old sea warrior as to defy time if her remaining days are to be spent tied up at a dock at a navy yard from what it would be to so rehabilitate the weather-beaten voyager that she could again brave all the stress of wind and wave in a career on the high seas.

obsolete craft in the Navy begin to threaten the very life of the historic warships there has come a change in administrative policy which bids fair to rob them of the field of usefulness that they have heretofore occupied. This second horn of the dilemma is found in the action of the Navy Department in discarding the time-honored receiving ships in favor of more up-to-date craft. Old unserviceable vessels such as the Wabash and Lancaster are, despite their historic associations, being supplanted by more modern steel craft that rank as vessels in commission "in reserve" and which, in addition to certain other advantages, have the very important one that they are ready on short notice to proceed to sea on any duty assigned.

Reverting to the exception noted above it may be explained that one of the historic wooden warships may not be merely put in shape for a quiet old age within the sheltered precincts of a navy yard. The exception is the Portsmouth, an old wooden sailing vessel which has lately been in use by the United States Marine Hospital Service, and is now at the navy yard at Norfolk, Virginia. This craft could be so restored for the sum of $25,000 that her life would be prolonged indefinitely if she were anchored in placid waters or moored to a dock. But the people of California are strongly urging Congress to expend upward of $100,000 in order to so restore the Portsmouth that she will be capable of a voyage to San Francisco in time for the opening of the Panama-Pacific Exposition.

The explanation of this interest in the Portsmouth on the part of the residents of the Pacific Coast is found in the fact that it was this self-same sloop of war Portsmouth which was the first naval vessel that unfurled the American flag at the Golden Gate, San Francisco, and it is desired to have the historic ship not only serve as an exhibit at the forthcoming exposition, but also be anchored permanently in San Francisco Bay as a constant lesson in patriotism. An important feature of the scheme is that which contemplates that the Portsmouth, en route to Frisco, shall be the first vessel to pass through the new Panama Canal.

Coincident with the scheme for saving the nation's historic warships there has been launched by a number of prominent men, including officials of the Navy Department, a plan for perpetuating the names of some of the honored craft that have passed out of existence. It is proposed that the memorable names of gone but not forgotten warships shall be bestowed upon new vessels that may be added to our modern navy. This has already been done to some extent. The battleship Delaware is the sixth of her name; the armored cruiser Washington, the fifth; and the battleship Kearsarge, the second. But not all the modern bearers of distinguished names are in employment appropriate to their history. For instance, the present-day namesake of the Ranger which was commanded by John Paul Jones, is merely a schoolship. If this project is fully carried out we may expect to see on the high seas ere coming years American "Dreadnaughts," or more likely super-Dreadnaughts, bearing the names of the Bon Homme Richard, the Constitution, the Alfred (the first vessel to fly the Continental flag), the Columbus, Congress, Franklin, Lexington, Niagara, and the United States,—the latter, like the Constellation, having been built in 1797. At present the law requires that all battleships shall be named after the States of the Union, but it is believed that the present is a particularly good time to change this for aside from the arousal of patriotic spirit and interest in the old names there is the circumstance that the navy has about exhausted the list of State names, and there is little prospect that any more States will come into the Union for some time to come.

Some Wonderful Teeth Among the Family of Fishes

NATURE, in providing teeth for various members of the animal kingdom, has not only supplied what is vital, for that particular animal, in the preparation of food for the digestive organs, but in many cases has supplied instruments of offense and defense as well. Ages before man made any of his cutting, piercing, crushing and grinding instruments, not to mention his toothed-jaw traps, nature had placed most wonderful instruments for these various services in the mouths of various creatures.

Teeth of the Parrot-fish.

Many people have often admired the perfect condition and pearly whiteness of the teeth of their pet dog or cat, but probably have not wondered to any great extent upon how they managed to retain such perfect cutting instruments. Few, if any, human mouths contain such perfect teeth, although the services of a tooth-brush or dentist are unknown "luxuries" among the "lower animals" that are living in anything similar to a state of nature.

The civilized life of humans varies vastly from the natural conditions under which wild creatures live—and many domesticated ones partake of that wild condition so far as their environment allows them to.

Animals living under natural conditions get "natural" food—no cooked food. They have to exercise to get food and fear and then it well enough to be swallowed. This teeth are exercises them. Then, again, they never drink very cold and then very hot liquids, as most human beings do—even when their medical advisors tell them not to. That practice will crack even the enamel of any teeth—the hardest known substance in the animal body. We see that by the contraction of cold and expansion of heat the concrete pavements of our streets are cracked, but we never think of that when we are careless with those very useful implements which nature has given us to properly prepare our food for complete digestion!

Among the many wonderful examples of the teeth of the fish family, those of the parrot-fish may be mentioned first as most remarkably adapted for the purpose for which they are used. In drawing No. 1, where both sets of the teeth of the parrot-fish are shown, the front, or mandibular teeth, are represented at the left, while the pharyngeal teeth, or those far back in the throat ("pharynx") are at the right hand side. These are placed in about the same position to each other which they really occupy in the fish. It will be noted that the front teeth are set in several vertical rows—the lower row coming into use as those next in order are worn off. These sharp teeth are used as shears in cutting off the polyps found on the coral surfaces where these fish feed, and the teeth just back of them are used as grinders to reduce this material to a powder, before swallowing. To be provided with two sets of masticating machines in one mouth is rather remarkable indeed!

Sectional View of Pharyngeal Bone of the Parrot-fish.

Illustration No. 3 shows what an elaborate set of teeth the "skate" is provided with, as well as a powerful set of jaw bones to support them. In this case there are many rows, and many little, white, pearly teeth, the points of which turn backward. (An enlarged drawing to the right shows one of the teeth from this set.)

The creature which carries this formidable armament is represented in drawing No. 4—the "painted skate." Not only do some of the skates have such an array of teeth as shown, but the roof and lower parts of the mouth are literally paved with grinding teeth, with which they make havoc among the oyster beds by destroying both young and adult oysters. Imagine a set of grinding teeth capable of crushing and grinding the tough shells of the o[illegible]

The "Painted Skate."

T[illegible]th opening as shown in drawing No. 3 is about three inches, and it will be seen that the horizontal measurement of the opening is nearly twice that.

Teeth and jawbone of the "Skate."

The body of the skate is somewhat the same in shape of that of the dog fish, but the head is very extensively widened at each side, and is quite flat in form. There seems to be abundant room about these jaw bones of this fish to enable the teeth imbedded in them to crush about anything crushable.

The terrible array of teeth shown in illustration No. 5 is possessed by the angler fish. There is a faculty possessed by them which is not apparent by just viewing a representation of them as shown in this drawing: namely, each tooth of this set is held to the jaw by a flexible base, so that they naturally turn inward as some prey is taken into the mouth by their carnivorous possessor, while, if "the prey" objects, and tries to back out of such an enforced visit to the interior, he finds such a proceeding impossible, as the hinged teeth turn up again, and he finds himself much beset by a multitude of thorny spikes. This certainly is a novel sort of trap, the teeth of which are only set when they are really needed, and at which time they act automatically. This is the fish which leads a sluggish life in the muddy bottom of the ocean, waving the little flap of skin attached to the end of his "fishing rod," which his lengthened front spine might well be termed, that he may bring some of his living food very near him, by exciting their curiosity. Many a fish has experienced, literally, what is termed, "down in the mouth" after having made too close an acquaintance with the waver of that little flag!

We see by this that the angler, being a lazy sort of creature, has to make up by cunning and tricks for his lack of "get up and go," and nature has been very considerate of him by providing him with a sharp, toothed trap, through the jaws of which, "critters" are only allowed to pass one way.

An example in which one set of teeth is used as a weapon, while another set in the same fish is used to masticate the food with, is seen in the sword fish, one of the most interesting of all the members of the fish family. On the jaws of this peculiar fish many rows of small teeth are found, while the snout is greatly elongated into a long sword-like weapon, studded at intervals of two inches or less, with sharp spike-like teeth which point outward from the saw blade at right angles.

We may imagine from the foregoing, and from many other combats which we well realize must take place among sea, as well as land creatures that the pain and suffering from wounds and crippling must be terrible indeed, but it is at least comforting to learn from those competent to give trustworthy information upon the subject, that the lower animals do not suffer pain as acutely as more highly developed creatures. In regard to this subject, Dr. Alfred Russell Wallace, F. R. S., the "dean of English scientists", and co-discoverer with Charles Darwin, of the theory of evolution in animal life, writes as follows in "Is Nature Cruel?" "Our extreme sensibility to pain is necessary for our survival. Where pain is not developed irreparable injury is often inflicted before the danger is discovered." Pains warn us of dangers, and they record the symptoms of disease. The above author again states: "The possibility is that there is as great a gap between man and the lower animals in sensitiveness to pain as there is in their intellectual and moral faculties."

RED TAPE IN FRANCE.

It Entangles One Even In Getting the Gas Turned on in a Flat.

France is at once the paradise and the inferno of bureaucracy. For example, I wanted the gas to be turned on in my flat. A simple affair! Drop a postcard to the company telling the company to come and turn it on. Not at all! I was told that it would be better to call upon the company. So I called.

"What do you desire, monsieur?"

"I am the new tenant of a flat, and I want the gas turned on."

"Ah! You are the new tenant of a flat, and you want the gas turned on. M. Chose there is a new tenant of a flat, and he wants the gas turned on. Where should he be led to?"

About a quarter of an hour of this, and then at last I am led by a municipal employee sure of his job and his pension to the far distant room of the higher employee appointed by the city of Paris to deal with such as me. This room is furnished somewhat like that of a solicitor's managing clerk.

"Good morning, sir."

"Good morning, sir."

"It appears, sir, M. Bennay, fourth floor, No. 4 Rue de Calais, sixth arrondissement, is it not?—that you want the gas turned on. Will you put yourself to the trouble of sitting down, M. Bennay?"

I sit down. He sits down.

"Ah! So you want the gas turned on!—Let us see, let us see." * * *

Hundreds of such applications must be made every day. But the attitude of this ceremonious official might be put into words thus: "A strange and interesting application of yours, to have the gas turned on! Very remarkable! It attracts me. The case must be examined with the care and the respect which it deserves."—Arnold Bennett in Metropolitan.

JOYS OF A RUSSIAN HOTEL.

Nice Lofty Rooms With Sealed Windows and Smoke Laden Air.

Writing of the great Russian city of Odessa in Harper's, Sydney Adamson tells of the somewhat primitive arrangements of even the modern hotels. "For our ignorance of Russian we had the privilege of paying over twice the legal fare for our drive to the hotel. The porters obligingly arranged the matter and quite cheerfully kept the difference. How like the rest of the world! We felt at home at once. The large, lofty bedchambers and corridors of the hotels make it just possible to live in rooms that have double windows sealed with putty, which are never opened from the beginning of the winter till the spring thaw is in the air.

"As there are no open fires the only ventilation is from the slightly better air of the corridors. A framed notice on the wall informs the visitor of all the privileges he is graciously permitted to pay extra for, among them the joy of being clean at the rate of 10 kopecks for a jug of hot water or 50 kopecks for a bath. But the greatest mystery of all was a samovar at 25 kopecks. In time it was discovered that your true Russian, having a taste for much tea or other warm refreshment, rings for a lighted samovar and prepares his own beverage if he is not fortunate enough to possess a wife to do it for him.

"With the lady managing a fiery, fuming samovar and her lord smoking innumerable cigarettes, with perhaps a visitor to help, one can easily imagine—not forgetting the hermetically sealed windows—the atmosphere in which some worthy Russians go to bed."

River Bed Patterns.

Ideas for the colors in the best Scotch tweeds are found in the bed of the river Garry, in the Pass of Killiecrankie, said Thomas Welsh in a paper read before the textile congress at Hawick, Scotland, recently. Granite porphyry and jasper are found there in rich reds, grays and greens, beautifully mottled and mixed in finely contrasted colors. "Heather mixtures," he said, "were asked for by sportsmen, who inquired for colors which resembled their shooting grounds. The first order of tweeds sent to London in bulk was six pieces of black and white check made in Peebles."—Argonaut.

Curious Result of a Tax.

A curious thing happened when the English auctioneers were taxed. At first £5 a year, the duty was raised to £10 by Peel, but he relieved them of the necessity of taking out a license for beer, spirits, etc., when they sold these articles at auction. The consequence was that everywhere the auctioneers carried on the sale of beer and spirits for themselves until the abuse was stopped in 1861.

Cutting Him Short.

"Little one," he began, "you are too pretty to be stooping biscuits in a bakery.—You ought to be on the stage."

"Been there," snapped the waitress briefly. "What'll you have? Gimme the particulars of your ten cent order."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Economy.

"I would suggest giving our new mayor three cheers," announced Si Wagg at the first meeting of the new town council.

"Make it two cheers," suggested Hiram Waffle. "Remember, we are pledged to economy all along the line."—Washington Herald.

Introduced Himself.

"She—I beg your pardon, but I can't remember having met you before. He—Oh, yes. Last night at the ball some one trod on your toe. That was me."—Fliegende Blatter.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

COFFEE CAKES.

THE Germans make many delicious cakes to eat with their afternoon coffee, and, thanks to German bakers, Americans have acquired a fondness for them.

A favorite way of making coffee cake is to prepare a spice cake batter and use cold boiled coffee instead of water where the recipe calls for the latter.

The coffee is generally made with two tablespoonfuls of coffee to a cupful of water. It is strained through a fine cloth before using.

Simple, Yet Delicious.

Hasty Coffee Cake.—Cream one-fourth of a cupful of butter with a cupful of sugar; add one beaten egg, one-half cupful of milk, a saltspoonful of salt and one and one-half cupfuls of flour sifted with one good teaspoonful of baking powder. Bake in a flat tin, pouring the batter less than an inch thick. Dot with bits of butter the size of a pea about an inch apart and sprinkle plentifully with sugar and cinnamon.

Rich Coffee Cake.—Take five cupfuls of flour dried and sifted, one cupful butter, two cupfuls of sugar, a cupful of molasses, one cupful black coffee, one-half pound raisins seeded and minced, one-half pound currants washed and dried, one-fourth pound citron chopped fine, three eggs beaten very light, one-half teaspoonful cinnamon, one-half teaspoonful mace, one-fourth teaspoonful cloves and two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Cream the butter and sugar, warm the molasses slightly. Beat these with the spices until the mixture is very light. Next put in the yolks, the coffee and when these are well combined the flour with the whipped whites of eggs. Next add the baking powder dissolved in hot water and the fruit. Mix together and dredge well with flour. Beat thoroughly and bake in two loaves or in small round tins.

Individual Cakes.

Coffee Cakes.—Batter in this case is baked in individual pans. Take three eggs, a large cupful sugar and quarter cupful soft butter. Put together and beat until very light. Add a cupful of strong cold coffee, two cupfuls flour well sifted with two teaspoonfuls baking powder and two teaspoonfuls of any spices or flavoring that may be preferred. This cake may be iced or not, as liked. If closely wrapped in paper the cake may be kept two or three days.

Bread Coffee Cake.—To make this take about two cupfuls of dough which has been kneaded and is ready to be made up into bread. Work into it a beaten egg, half a cupful of sugar and one tablespoonful of shortening. Knead until you have a light, soft dough. Put into shallow cake tins to rise. When it is light spread with melted butter and sprinkle with a mixture consisting of a tablespoonful of flour, the same of sugar and a tablespoonful of butter. Rub these together until they crumble between the fingers. Sprinkle upon the cake and strew with granulated or pulverized sugar and ground cinnamon. Bake in a moderate oven.

By JUDIC CHOLLET

Here is a sensible garment for the tiny baby—a little nightgown that is very easy to make. The garment consists of front and back portions, with sleeves that are slightly full at the upper and lower edges. The back is cut longer than the front at the lower edge, and this extension is turned up and buttoned over the front to keep baby's feet warm.

The gown will require two and one-quarter yards of material twenty-seven or thirty-six inches wide, with one yard of edging for the neck and sleeves.

FEMININE FADS.

Decidedly New Is This Four Sided Watch.

THE SQUARE JEWELED WATCH.

The watch bracelet is a fad which has the merit of being admirably utilitarian.

A new bracelet is pictured here, the tiny jeweled timepiece having a square instead of a round shape, so that it fits the wrist daintily and gracefully.

What Women Are Doing.

Mrs. Joseph Linden Smith is the secretary and moving spirit in a handful of Bostonians who about a year ago banded together for the purpose of reducing the cost of living for their immediate families. Their plan was very simple, consisting only in buying in quantities and directly from the producers. Immediately after their return to town in the fall of 1911 the promoters of the scheme met at one of the homes and a systematic plan was worked out.

The first step was to offer to the farmers in a New Hampshire neighborhood where one of the promoters had a summer home a flat price for all their dairy, poultry and farm products during the winter. This price being somewhat in advance of current prices, the farmers accepted the offer. At first all shipments of supplies were received by one of the thirty members of the co-operative club; then gradually as things took more definite shape a small store was found. To the eggs, chickens, butter, apples and potatoes with which the club started other necessaries were added.

Mrs. Edith De Witt Vreeland is said to be the only woman in this country at the head of a shipyard. Mrs. Vreeland's shipyard is off Sandy Hook, and she became managing director on the death of her husband. Mrs. Vreeland is said to have learned every detail of the business.

The Delight of Soap Bowls.

The soap bowls have become almost as much of a necessity here as in dear old England, where they originated, for it is said that "dampness, soap and salts" are responsible for the beautiful complexion of the English women. There are, however, soap bowls and soap bowls. In some of them the soap is only of a mediocre quality; in others it is of the best. In the latter class there is a soap bowl containing a soap which has won great favor with fastidious women. It is delightfully perfumed, not too strongly, but subtly and delicately, with a sweetness which is most appealing. These soap bowls, with a whisk, sell for $5, $7.50 and $8.25, according to the size of the bowl.

"SEEN" IN WASHINGTON.

WOMAN ACCUSED OF SLAYING HUSBAND MAY ADOPT GRACE DEFENCE

Every indication is that when Mrs. J. A. Appelbaum goes on the stand charged with the murder of her husband, who was mysteriously slain in the Dakota Hotel at Atlanta, Ga., her defence will be much like that of Mrs. Daisy Opie Grace, who was freed by the jury after declaring her husband was accidentally shot while they were scuffling over a pistol in his possession.

From the start of the case she has pursued all the same tactics, hiring the lawyers who defended Mrs. Grace.

Into the parallel comes only one line at an angle, her declaration that she does not know whether she shot him or not; that if she did it was accidental. This defence of aphasia is the only detail in which she has stepped aside from the lines of the Grace case.

In a nervous condition from the time of the shooting, she has not yet recovered from its effects and is still confined to her bed at the Tower.

SCENE DURING THE GREAT SUFFRAGE PARADE AT WASHINGTON.

SUFFRAGE PARADE IN PENNSYLVANIA AVENUE.

Those who witnessed the great suffrage parade at Washington on the day before the inauguration of President Wilson will not forget very soon the great throng of women who paraded the streets of the capital bearing the emblems of "Votes for Women." It was one of the greatest sights Washington has ever seen and the suffragists ought ever to be proud of this great demonstration.

BASEBALL HAS MANY LEAGUES

"BUSHERS" IMPORTANT

These Minor Leagues Furnish the Stage for the Debut of "Would Be" Ball Players—Two Score or More in the National Game.

New York, March 8.—Two score or more of minor baseball leagues, stretching from the eastern provinces of Canada to southern California and from British Columbia to Florida, have practically completed all preparations for the season about to begin. The "bush" league teams, as the minors are familiarly known, are important factors in the national game, since they furnish the stage for the debut of the future major league stars.

But it is hardly fair to apply the term of "bush" league to all of the organizations outside the two big leagues. Baseball as it is played in the Class AA and Class A leagues is fast and evenly balanced and of a quality that will bear comparison with the entertainment furnished in the big show.

The American Association will start its twelfth season April 10. Several changes in management have taken place since the close of last season. William Armour, the former Toledo magnate, has become president of the Milwaukee club, and Harry Clark has succeeded Hugh Duffy as manager of the same club. Mike Kelley leaves St. Paul to pilot the Indianapolis team and is succeeded at St. Paul by William Friel, the former Columbus manager. William Hinchman will have charge at Columbus. The hold-over managers include Cantillon, of Minneapolis; Carr, of Kansas City; Hayden, of Louisville, and Hartzel, of Toledo.

The season of the International League will open April 16 and close September 21, the schedule calling for 154 games. Harry Smith, former big league catcher, succeeds Joe McGinnity as manager at Newark, and William Clymer succeeds George Stallings at Buffalo. Joe Kelley will continue as manager at Toronto, John Ganzel at Rochester, Jack Dunn at Baltimore, Bill Donovan at Providence, "Kitty" Bransfield at Montreal, and Larry Schaly at Jersey City.

The Pacific Coast League, with the longest schedule of any league in the country, will start its fourteenth season April 1 and close October 26. Harry Wolverton, who piloted the New York Americans last year, returns to the coast to manage the Sacramento team. The other managers of the league are: Del Howard, San Francisco; W. H. McCredie, Portland; "Hap" Hogan, Vernon; Frank Dillon, Los Angeles, and Carl Mitze, Oakland.

The big bell will ring for the opening of the thirteenth season of the Southern League on April 10 and the final games will be played on September 7. "Kid" Elberfield is the new manager at Chattanooga, succeeding William Smith, who will pilot the Atlanta team. The hold-over managers are Molesworth, of Birmingham; Frank, of New Orleans; Finn, of Mobile; Dobbs, of Montgomery; Schwartz, of Nashville, and Bernhardt, of Memphis.

For its fourteenth season the Western League has scheduled 168 games, opening April 16 and closing October 5. The only new name on the managerial roster is that of Charles G. Mullen, former White Sox player, who will manage the Lincoln team. Frank Isbell continues as manager at Des Moines, Jack Holland at St. Joseph, Jack Hendricks at Denver, Charles Arbogast at Omaha, William Holmes at Sioux City, Dale Gear at Topeka, and George Hughes at Wichita.

The New England League, the oldest of the minors, will open its twenty-third season April 30 and close September 13. Hugh Duffy, former big league pilot, will manage the team at Portland, Me., which city has taken over the Fall River franchise. Pat Flaherty, the old major league pitcher, is to lead the Lynn team and Frank Courtney succeeds Lave Cross as manager at Haverhill. The hold-over managers are Burkett, of Worcester; Pieper, of Lawrence; Gray, of Lowell, and Connaughton, of New Bedford.

The twelfth season of the Northwestern League will get under way April 15 and continue until September 28. "Iron Man" Joe McGinnity, the former Giant pitcher, succeeds Mike Lynch as manager at Tacoma. Lynch will manage the Victoria team. The other managers are T. Raymond, Seattle; Harry Ostdick, Spokane; Nick Williams, Portland, and "Kitty" Brashear, Vancouver.

The Eastern Association, formerly the Connecticut League, will begin its fifteenth season April 23 and close September 7. The association has been given an eight-club circuit by the addition of Pittsfield, Mass., and New London, Conn. The clubs and managers are as follows: Bridgeport, H. E. McCann; Waterbury, Sam Kennedy; Holyoke, T. J. Whalen; Springfield, William Carey; Pittsfield, Jack Zeller; New London, Jack Burns; Hartford, Simon McDonald, and New Haven, Jerry O'Connell.

The tenth season of the Tri-State League will begin April 30 and end September 3. The managers selected include: Bill Coughlin, Allentown; Bert Conn, Trenton; Curt Weigand, Chester; John Castle, Atlantic City; Jake Wietzel, Reading; George Heckert, York; George Cockhill, Harrisburg, and Jimmy Jackson, Wilmington.

The tentative schedule prepared for the thirteenth season of the Three-I League fixes April 24 for the opening and Sept. 1 as the closing date. The only managers left from last season are O'Leary, of Davenport, and Rowland, of Dubuque. The new pilots are Harry Syfert, of Bloomington; Tom Hackett, of Quincy; Frank Donnelly, of Springfield; Barry McCormick, of Peoria, and Connie Walsh, of Danville.

The New York State League will open its eighteenth season April 30 and close Sept. 14. Dick Smith has succeeded "Buck" Freeman as manager at Scranton and Lou Ritter takes John Calhoun's place at Elmira. Calhoun will manage the Binghamton team. Bill Clymer is acting manager at Wilkes-Barre. Fred Burchell remains as manager at Syracuse, Hank Ramsey at Troy, Jimmy Tansett at Albany and Mike O'Neil at Utica.

The eleventh season of the Central League, cut down from twelve to six clubs, will open April 23 and close Sept. 7. The clubs and managers are: Fort Wayne, Jimmy Burke; Springfield, Joe Stanley; Dayton, John Nee; Evansville, "Punch" Knoll; Terre Haute, "Goat" Anderson, and Grand Rapids, Ed Smith.

The Virginia League will start its eighth season on April 17 and close Sept. 13. The only new manager is Paul Davis at Newport News. The old managers are Steve Griffon, of Richmond; W. L. Pressley, of Roanoke; Henry Busch, of Petersburg; Charles Shaffer, of Norfolk, and Lou Castro, of Portsmouth.

The eleventh season of the Texas League will begin April 10 and end Sept. 7. George Leidy, manager of the San Antonia team last year, will lead the Austin team. He is succeeded at San Antonio by George Stimson. The hold-over pilots are Cavender, of Dallas; Wheeler, of Beaumont; Morris, of Fort Worth, Maloney, of Galveston; Fillman, of Houston, and Carson, of Waco.

The Wisconsin-Illinois League will start its ninth pennant race on May 3. The Aurora team has been transferred to Milwaukee and will play in that city when the American Association team is on the road. The W.-I. managers are Harry Bay, Madison; John Malloy, Wausau; Joe Killian, Oshkosh; William Crystall, Appleton; Robert Lynch, Green Bay; William Fox, Racine, and George Bubser, Rockford.

The North Carolina League, formerly Carolina Association, will open April 24 and close Sept. 3. Circuit and team managers: Charlotte, Burleigh Emory; Winston-Salem, Charles Clancy; Greensboro, "Rabbit" Doyle; Durham, James A. Kelley; Asheville, Tommy Stouch; Raleigh, Earl Mack.

The sixth season of the Central Association will begin April 30 and end Labor Day. Galesburg and Hannibal have been dropped and Waterloo and Cedar Rapids added. Managers: Muscatine, Frank Boyle; Ottumwa, Ned Egan; Cedar Rapids, Belden Hill; Waterloo, Jay Andrews; Monmouth, Bert Hough; Kewanee, E. Pennington; Burlington, Dick Rohn; Keokuk, George Manush.

The Southern Michigan League will open its eighth season May 7 and close Sept. 7. Managers: Battle Creek, Eddie McKernan; Day City, Hugh Shannon; Adrian, Dan Jenkins; Saginaw, George Holmes; Jackson, "Mo" Meyers; Lansing, Jack Morrissey; Kalamazoo, Charles Wagner; Flint, Dan Collins.

The eleventh season of the South Atlantic League will continue from April 17 to Sept. 1. The managers selected are Percy Wilder, Jacksonville; Joe Herold, Macon; Perry Lipe, Savannah; Harry Kunkel, Albany, and Jim Fox, Columbus. The Charleston club, transferred from Columbia, has not yet named its manager.

The third season of the Canadian League will begin May 7 and close Labor Day. The following managers have been named: George Lee, Hamilton; Joe Kennan, Berlin; George Deneau, London; Ambrose Kane, Brantford; Louis Cook, Guelph; Carl Stewart, St. Thomas; Frank Shaughnessey, Ottawa, and Dave Rowan, Peterboro.

The Texas-Oklahoma League will open April 15 for a season of 108 games, with August 1 as the closing date. An eight-club circuit has been formed by the addition of Paris and Texarkana. The managers are: Dee Poindexter, Texarkana; Claude Leslie, Bonham; Jimmy Humphreys, Sherman; Fred Morris, Wichita Falls; "Stony" Jewell, Durant; Jack Jutzl, Paris; "Babe" Peebles, Denison, and Art Naylor, Ardmore.

The Applachian League will start its third season May 8 and wind up Sept. 3. The circuit has been slightly changed since last season and is made up of clubs in Knoxville, Bristol, Cleveland, Johnson City, Middlesboro and Morristown.

The Kitty League, whose eleventh season will extend from May 13 to Sept. 1, now has teams in Vincennes, Ind.; Clarksville, Tenn.; Cairon and Harrisburg, Ill., and Paducah, Henderson, Hopkinsville and Owensboro, Ky.

The sixth season of the Ohio State League will open May 8 and close Sept. 21. Huntington and Charleston, W. Va., probably will be added to the present circuit, which comprises Ironton, Lima, Chillicothe, Mansfield, Portsmouth and Newark.

The Michigan State League will start its season May 20, with teams in Traverse City, Manistee, Cadillac, Ludington, Muskegon and Boyne City. The season will close Sept. 14.

The New York-New Jersey League will start its first season May 22 and close Sept. 7. The clubs and managers are: Middletown, John Lawlor; Long Island City, George Morton; Kingston, John Grim; Poughkeepsie, H. E. Taylor; Newburgh, Tod Desseroth, and Paterson, Joseph A. Delaney.

The second season of the Border Leauge will start May 24 and end Sept. 14. The league includes clubs in Port Huron, Windsor, Wyandotte, Pontiac, Ypsilanti and Mt. Clemens.

The Western Tri-State League, made up of clubs in Walla Walla, Boise, Pendelton, North Yakima, Baker City and La Grande, will open its second season April 22 and close Sept. 8.

Several other organizations, among them the Cotton States, Western Canada, Kansas State, Nebraska State and Northern leagues and the Union Association, have been a little backward in completing their preparations this year, but expect to have everything in shape to open the season according to schedule.

CONTESTING THE CENTRAL NEW JERSEY BASEBALL LEAGUE'S FIRST TITLE RACE

By Ernest Dorflinger, Manager of the Plainfield Baseball Team, League Champions.

The most interesting season of my long career as the manager of a baseball club was in 1911, when the Central New Jersey Baseball League was in operation with the following clubs: High Bridge, Somerville, Bound Brook, Scotch Plains, Westfield and Plainfield. The officers of the league were: President, A. M. Beekman, of Somerville; treasurer, Edward Hogland, of Bound Brook, and secretary, yours truly. A set of rules were drawn up and accepted by the league, there being no specified player or salary limit, and it was predicted that the club with the best financial backing would win the pennant. I gathered together what I thought was the best semi-professional baseball team in the country and the fight for the pennant was on from the first game until the last.

Plainfield started off by defeating Somerville, 7 to 1, and kept right on winning and the fans were rooting with only one object in view and that one was to annex the bunting. Everything was going along smoothly for the manager until Westfield invaded Crescent Oval with a reorganized and greatly bolstered team, vanquishing us to the tune of 8 to 4. Up to the loss to the Mt. Ararat team Plainfield had a string of ten straight victories chalked up and when the first game was dropped to the supposedly weak Westfield aggregation cries began to rent the air proclaiming the weakening and downfall of the Queen City nine. The team pulled together, however, and started off on another winning streak until we encountered another snag, this time Scotch Plains was the offender. This was the fourth and last game of the season scheduled with the Plains men and after both teams had been held scoreless for eight innings, Plainfield came across with a pair of runs in the first half of the ninth and final frame and it surely looked like victory for my crew. The tide of battle took a big reverse in the last stanza, however, and by the time the home team had finished lining them out they had a trio of runs to their credit, defeating Plainfield by a count of 3 to 2. Somerville was only two games behind us in the pennant race now and it looked as though the Somerset county seat combination would be the one we would have to defeat in winning the bunting.

We launched another winning streak, the third of the eventful season, and kept things humming until we met Somerville Labor Day morning for the fourth and last game of the season. We had beaten them twice and tied them once, and for the final battle went out and got one of the best twirlers in the Tri-State League. Labor Day presented a fine day for a baseball game and all of my men were primed to win over the Somervillians and although the game was carded for 10:30 o'clock fans began to arrive as early as 9 o'clock and by 10 o'clock every seat in the grandstand and bleachers was filled. Never before had such a crowd turned out to witness a ball game in this city and a number of special ground rules had to be invoked.

The Somerville nine was in great shape and I doubt if any team outside of the major leagues could have beaten them at this particular time. They made hay while the sun shined, clouting our big twirler to the four corners of the lot and scored five runs in the first few innings. They kept their hit bombardment up all through the fray and the final score stood 8 to 1 in their favor.

Criticism was rife on every hand after this game and I was informed on every side that my pitcher had played in three games in the three days immediately preceding the big battle and I was aware of the fact. But how about the Somerville twirler? He had pitched the same number of games in the same number of days. I was criticised for not putting our afternoon moundsman in the box after Somerville had scored five runs in the first inning, but I realized that it was almost impossible for us to overcome such a lead, especially in the manner in which the team was working at that time. I decided that it would be far better to lose our game with one pitcher than to put our afternoon pitcher in, who was also a leaguer, and tire him out for the afternoon game, probably losing two contests as a result. We won the afternoon game by a score of 3 to 2, putting us one game in the lead of Somerville with the race at a fever heat.

Plainfield baseball fans had the baseball fever as they probably never had it before and there was only three more games left to play in the league race. One of these games was with Somerville. Two weeks passed by, both leaders winning consistently, then came the last scheduled game of the season. When Plainfield took the field against Somerville in the final game a loss meant a tie for top notch honors and a win would bring home the bacon.

A meeting of our club was held and the question of whether or not we would take a chance with our regular team came up. All of the players had been faithful to the cause, and although it was rumored that Somerville would be loaded with major leaguers, we disliked to put our players out of the game. However, in order to protect a howling mob of fans, we got out four days before the contest and obtained the best there was to be had playing the game, James Steele, president of the Plainfield Baseball Club, and myself, went to New York and picked out what proved to be the winning team and brought honor and glory to the Plainfield Baseball Club and its loyal band of cohorts.

PLAINFIELD HIGH SCHOOL INTERCLASS LEAGUE RACE HOTEST EVER CONDUCTED

Little scoring, the direct result of close guarding, was the feature of the Plainfield High School last interclass league match played between the Sophomores and Juniors on the P. H. S. court yesterday afternoon. The Sophs nosed out their third year rivals by a score of 9 to 6, which is an exceptionally low score for thirty minutes of play in boys' games. What little shooting was done was monopolized by a few of the players on each side, probably because of the fact that there was not sufficient to go around.

The Junior team was considerably bolstered up for the fray by the addition of two first team substitutes, Buckle and Hetfield, and because of this extra strength the Sohps pennant chances appeared exceedingly dubious before the game started.

When actual play began, however, things tightened up and the battle resolved itself into a gruelling affair in which every point was fought for tooth and nail. The initial half ended with the score tied at 4-4, McNamee and LaRue each having scored a goal for the second year class and Cottrell and Williams did the same duty for the higher students.

When the final period of play was inaugurated the scoring was just as close and conspicuous because of its absence, Goodrick scoring the only field goal for the losers. McNamee and Mann got field goals in this period while Hirsh dropped in a foul shot.

By virtue of their defeat over the Juniors, the Sophs are now tied for first place in the interclass league and a three game series has been arranged for by the respective managers to decide the league title. These games will be played in the High School gym beginning next week and medals will be awarded to the winners. Both of the aggregations tied for first place have a large following of loyal rooters and the trio of games will provoke no little interest.

NONPAREILS EASILY DISPOSE OF TIGERS

Rough Contest Played Last Night Overwhelmingly One Sided.

In a game featured by frequent exhibitions of fouling such as is seldom evidenced in a feminine contest, the Nonpareil girls' team, of this city, disposed of an aggregation of challengers, styling themselves as the "Tigers" last night on the Saengerbund Hall court with a score of 21 to 6. The newly organized team plainly displayed the fact that it had not played together before and resorted continually to foul tactics which marred the game to some extent from a spectator's point of view. The bengals lived up to their name in more senses of the world than one, putting up a ferocious style of play that completely bewildered the Nonpareils.

Many and frequent were foul enactments in the initial period of play, holding, dribbing and pushing being plainly visible. Up to the final three minutes of play the Tigers had counted for but one field goal, this one a beautiful toss made by Miss Marion Tice, the captain, on a back overhead shot. Her two point tally saved her team from a dose of whitewash in the first period and looked as though it would be their only field goal of the game until Miss Helen George netted two of the big counters just before the final whistle sounded. Miss George was the star all around performer for the vanquished challengers, doing a majority of the passing counting for most of her aggregation's points.

The first half, which was played with lines, was by far the most interesting of the two divisions of play, some good passing and clever shooting being done by the winner's. In the final half lines were eliminated to the detriment of the winner's passing but this feature did not seem to effect their shooting as nearly the same number of points were chalked up in the first as in the second administration. Close guarding was a prominent factor at every stage, the forwards seldom getting an opportunity to make shots. Not a single free shot was accorded the Nonpareils from the field of play during the whole thirty minutes and the few chances the Tigers were given they made good on.

Individualism again played a prominent part in the Nonpareil's victory. Miss Helen Hummel, the captain, being the only member of the aggregation who could get the ball in the illusive net. Eleven points were annexed by this player in the first half and she duplicated the stunt in the final period. Foul shots made in her characteristic clean way pulled the Nonpareils to the fore in the first part of the initial half and when she followed this up by a trio of field goals made in quick succession the Plainfield five took a decided lead which it never relinquished. Miss Ida Hummel, the other forward, put up a consistent and hard game but was heavily guarded and failed to get in her usual array of field goals although her passing was of the top notch variety. The Misses Smith, Douglas and Debele put up excellent guarding games, the latter holding Miss Mair, the heralded point scorer of the losers, without a single tally. Miss Southard, another goal cager, was also held scoreless by Miss Hummel.

ASSOCIATION FIVE PLAYS MONTCLAIR

Representatives of the Local Y. M. C. A. Will Meet Listman's Basketeers.

For the first time in three years, a representative first team basketball squad will be sent from the local Y. M. C. A. tonight to contest a game with the Montclair association five. Tonight's game will be a fitting test for the local aggregation inasmuch as the Montclair players are conceded to be a set of the speediest in the State and have been cleaning all before them this and other seasons. Plainfield has been without a representative Y. M. C. A. five ever since George L. Listman resigned from the Plainfield association to take a similar physicial position with the Montclair Y. M. C. A. and the game tonight will be watched with special interest because it marks the revival of major basketball here.

Mr. Listman is noted for the calibre of teams he turns out and the Queen City combination are expecting a stiff fight for first place honors tonight. While in this city, Listman had one of the best Y. M. C. A. basketball teams in the State and when he went to Montclair he established the popular indoor game on the same basis in that city.

The Plainfield Y. M. C. A. team will lineup as follows tonight:

Taylor	forward
Coyle	forward
Smith (captain)	centre
Stine	guard
Bailey	guard

LEAL FIVE LOST TO WESTFIELD "FRAT"

Close Contest on Mt. Arara Court Was Won by the Home Players.

Playin on the Westfield court last night, the Leal School basketball team, of this city, lost to the Alpha Sigma quintet, of that place, by a score of 24 to 19. For the most part the playing was rough and the scoring nip and tuck, neither team having a decided advantage over the other at any stage of the game. The Westfield court proved a puzzle to the local basket cagers who did little sensational shooting. The initial half ended with the score 10 to 9 in Westfield's favor and they increased their lead to four points in the final half by some spasmodic shooting which the Plainfielders were powerless in checking. Dickerson, the star forward on the private school combination, sustained a painful injury which will keep him out of the game for some time to come, although no serious results are looked for. Dickerson's retirement considerably weakened the local boys' scoring and passing machine and had it not been for the untimely accident, they might have come out in the van.

JIM MANLEY EASY FOR FITZSIMMONS

Lanky Son of Ruby Robert Wins Handily From New Brunswick Phenom.

What Bob Fitzsimmons, Jr., of Dunellen, did to Jim Manley, the New Brunswick phenom, in the short space of three rounds last night was enough to shatter any fighter's aspirations along the white hope line. The son of ruby Robert pounded Manley around the improvised ring in the Moose Lodge rooms at New Brunswick to his heart's content, delivering solar plexus blows and ripping upper-cuts almost at will. The defense put up by the heralded Brunswick boxer was shattered to splinters by the Dunellenite and Manley was as powerless as a novice in stopping his opponents' rushing attacks.

The bout was staged as a friendly boxing exhibition, neither contender entering the arena with seconds to do corner duty, but soon after the first blow was delivered it resolved itself into a slugging match with the lanky product of Dunellen always in the lead on points. At times it appeared as though Bob could deliver the final blow that produces sleep but it was evident that he let many opportunities to put his opponent out of the way slip by. Neither fighter had much to say after the bout but Fitz, Jr., was heard to remark, "That fellow was a cinch."

The Dunellenite's success in this, his first public appearance in the roped arena, may urge him to further endeavor along the same route, although he still contends that he is not anxious to enter the fighting game as a business. The exhibition last night plainly showed what the lanky one could do, and his work savored of the valuable coaching he has received from his world famous father. His style of fighting was not unlike that of the former champion as he displayed the same rushing attack and footwork that made the senior member of the family famous in days gone by. Manley was thought to be a promising white hope until he struck the snag last night and up to the time he met the Dunellenite his friends were willing to back him against any young phenom for a tryout. Manley has done considerable boxing around Newark and was seriously thinking of getting a metropolitan tryout.

TORPEY AT THE HELM.

Jack Torpey, the veteran semi-professional baseball catcher, has taken up the Somerville managerial reins and is making preparations to put the nine in the Central New Jersey League this season. It is also stated that Jimmy Clinton will once more do the mound work for Somerville and several influential business men are backing the aggregation.

HOPE CHAPEL GAME.

Hope Chapel will lineup against the strong Dunellen Baraca Class quintet on the Chapel court tonight. This is the first time these two teams have met this season and a good game is expected. Inasmuch as Hope has not been humiliated on its home court this season the Dunellenites are naturally out to turn the trick.

TWO PLAYERS HURT.

In the game between the sophomores and juniors at Plainfield High School yesterday afternoon, Edward Ryder and Morris Mann were painfully hurt. Both of these players are sophomores and Ryder's injury is considered to be the most serious of the two. He came in contact with a sharp edge of the wall, severely lacerating his leg.

ELKS' P STPONEMENT.

Plainfield Elks were scheduled to roll on the Paterson alleys last night but asked for a postponement of the match, which was accorded them by the Silk City manager. The contest will be bowled Thursday evening, March 13.

THEY DISCUSS THE LIFE OF GREAT MISSIONARY

The life and work of Robert Livingstone, the missionary, were considered at a meeting of the Young Women's Mission Band held at the home of Miss Lillian A. Force, on Duer street, yesterday afternoon. A social hour followed during which tea was served by the hostess. Mrs. Will F. Williams, poured, and she was assisted by other members, who acted as waitresses.

WHITE STORE CHANGES.

A. E. Force, proprietor of the White Store, always alert to take advantage of an opportunity to improve his store, has had alterations made that greatly better several departments. The basement stairway which was in the center of the left side of the store has been moved over to the left under the stairway going up to the millinery and carpet departments. This change greatly improves the suit and corset department as it makes a perfectly straight aisle from the front to the back and affords the basement a big space for display which was formerly taken up by the stairway. The music department of the store has been enlarged and two new racks constructed which hold the entire store of popular music, so arranged as to display the title of each piece only. On the other side of the store the bookkeeper's and Mr. Force's private offices have been raised giving about 100 square feet more of floor space for the domestics, table oil cloths and blankets, giving this department all of the light from three windows.

NEW YORK AMUSEMENTS

"The Painted Woman," a new romantic drama by Frederic Arnold Kummer, was presented by William A. Brady at the Playhouse, New York, Wednesday night. The play is in four acts and the writer has turned for his material and his background to the picturesque period in the history of the American coast when buccaneers roved the Spanish Main and Port Royal on the Island of Jamaica, was the harbor from whence their expeditions against the treasure galleons of Spain put to sea. Here the will of Morgan and his men was law, and the drama concerns itself with Ramona, a captive Spanish maiden, who is compelled to yield to the baccaneer tyrany. Florence Reed appears in the role of Ramona. In the company are Jobyna Howland, Louise Everts, Robert Warwick, Charles Waldron, Geoffrey Stein, Malcolm Williams, Anthony Andre, Charles Fisher and numerous others.

The longest run in New York this season for any musical comedy has been attained by "Oh! Oh! Delphine," now nearing its 200th performance at the New Amsterdam Theatre. The book and lyrics are by C. M. S. McLellan and the music by Ivan Caryll, who gave us "The Pink Lady." It is under the management of Messrs. Klaw and Erlanger and that means that nothing has been left undone to make it the very finest achievement in the way of scenery, costumes and cast. It is seldom that a musical comedy meets with such general approval from all classes of theatregoers as "Oh! Oh! Delphine." Of course the capital farce which Mr. McLellan has utilized so advantageously and for which he has written the best lyrics in many a long day, combined with the popular and at the same time musicianly score of Ivan Caryll makes a form of entertainment that is a thorough delight to the discriminating theatregoer. As a result the New Amsterdam Theatre is crowded to the doors at every performance and the run of the delightful musical play bids fair to continue far into the summer. The scenes of the three acts of "Oh! Oh! Delphine" are located in the hall of the Hotel Beau Rivage at Brest, France, in the gardens of the Villa Primrose and in the reception room of the hotel. The story concerns the adventures of Delphine who has divorced Victor Jolibeau, an artist who is in search of a model for his salon painting of Venus and married Alphonse Bouchotte, a soldier. There are matinees on Wednesday and Saturday, but it is necessary to write ahead for desirable seat reservations.

MADE HIS ESCAPE.

The local police have been notified of the escape of Jacob Larning from the Rahway Reformatory. His description: 5 feet 5½ inches in height; weight 140 pounds; age 18 years; dark hair and dark complexion.

MRS. EATON DIES AT ADVANCED AGE

HAD 51 DESCENDANTS

Wife of Nova Scotia Preacher, She Was a Heroic Woman—A Direct Descendant of John Alden and Had Great Lineage.

Mrs. Mary D. Eaton, widow of Stephen Eaton, and mother of Rev. Dr. Charles A. Eaton, pastor of the Madison Avenue Baptist church, of New York, died Saturday night at 9:45 o'clock at the home of her son at Watchung, in the eighty-ninth year of her age. She had been ill but a short time. While at sea, returning from a trip to Panama, Dr. Eaton received a wireless that his mother was dying and he said it was a source of the greatest satisfaction to him that he reached home before she passed away. He arrived about 2 o'clock in the afternoon, and although the end was but a few hours away, her mind was perfectly clear and she recognized those about her bedside. She seemed pleased to know that her son reached home before she passed away.

Mrs. Eaton was the daughter of Rev. Maynard Parker, a pioneer Baptist preacher in Nova Scotia, where she was born. During her early life she performed heroic service assisting her father in his ministry, traveling over a large territory administering to the sick and helping in every way possible. Most of her life was spent in Nova Scotia. Several years ago she went to Boston to make her home with her daughter, Mrs. Emma Keyes, and two years ago she went to live with her son, Dr. Eaton, at Watchung.

Mrs. Eaton leaves fifty-one living descendants, six children, twenty-five grandchildren and twenty great-grandchildren. She was a direct descendant of John Alden and Priscilla. Her father was one of fifteen children, she was one of thirteen children and she had eleven children, of which Dr. Eaton is the youngest.

Mrs. Eaton was married at the age of seventeen years. She possessed amazing force of character, and as a very dear friend expressed it, "she was made of the stuff of which empires are built. She was unconquerable and she dominated the Eaton family down to the third generation."

Dr. Eaton pays a great tribute to his mother by saying that there was never a minute of his life from the time he was born that was not influenced by her and that all he has been or hopes to be is due to her life and character. Mrs. Eaton's mind was unusually keen, and she kept abreast of the times through her constant reading of the best literature and newspapers. She took especial interest in the education of her son and his preparation for the ministry, and was his constant companion while he passed through the preparatory school, Acadia College and Newton Theological Seminary.

Mrs. Eaton's grandfather, Major Nathaniel Parker, fought with Wolfe in the taking of Quebec and for his bravery was granted a large tract of land at Quebec. He was made a major before he reached his majority.

The surviving children are Mrs. I. S. Johnson and Fred L. Eaton, of Nova Scotia; Joseph H. Eaton, of Edmundton, Alberta; Cyrus Eaton, of Denver, Col.; Mrs. Emma Keyes, of Boston, and Rev. Dr. Charles A. Eaton. W. R. Eaton, a grandson, is district attorney in Denver; another, Cyrus S. Eaton, is president of the Continental Gas and Electric Corporation, of Cleveland.

The funeral service will be held at the late home tomorrow afternoon at 1:45 o'clock. Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire, of the Park Avenue Baptist church; Rev. Frederick W. Hagar, assistant to Dr. Eaton at the Madison Avenue Baptist church, New York, and Rev. W. B. Wallace, pastor of the Temple Baptist church, Brooklyn, will officiate. The burial will be in Hillside cemetery.

He had been in the institution about fourteen years. Mr. Hewitt was born at Cokesbury, Hunterdon county. Prior to his illness he was employed as a machinist at the Walter Scott Printing Press Works. GIVE REASONS THEY SHOULD HAVE SCHOOL

The residents of the Netherwood section of the city who are interested in the establishment of a public school within that territory, have circulated a large number of petitions in the hope of securing a long list of names to be presented to the Board of Education. The petition requests that the Board of Education take early action looking towards the location of a school at a point which will most fairly and adequately serve the residents within the area indicated on a map printed on the reverse side of the petition.

The Second ward, while ranking high in population and in value of taxable property, has at the present time far less school facilities than any other section of equal size in the city, according to the claim made by the leaders in the movement. It is further stated that within the section of the ward indicated there is a development rapidly adding to the resources of the city for purposes of taxation.

The petitioners say that no better location could be found than the one near the centre of population of the indicated area, which would so well serve the interests of an equal number of people and the convenience of attending pupils considering transit facilities. They add that in their opinion the site on Kensington avenue is most inconveniently located to serve, as a whole, the important district under consideration.

The petition is also provided with space for the signers to indicate the number of children in the signer's home and their ages, all of which will be presented to the Board of Education.

The movement has been undertaken by the Netherwood Residents' Association committee on education.

WILL REPORT ON "SURVEY."

Rev. Milton S. Littlefield, who has been making a "survey" of the Sunday-school of the Crescent Avenue church, will make a report of his work at a meeting to be held at the church tomorrow night at 8 o'clock, together with suggestions for possible improvement. All the teachers of the school are urged to attend and the teachers of the chapels will be welcome. The meeting will be informal in character.

JUDGE SWORN IN UTTERS WARNING

Beekman Taking Oath, Says Liquor Law Violators Will Be Sent to Jail.

AND FORFEIT LICENSE

Appointee of Former Governor Wilson Pays Tribute to His Predecessors in Assuming Duties on Somerset Bench.

Somerville, March 10.—Daniel H. Beekman, who was appointed to succeed Judge Clarence E. Case, as judge of the Court of Common Pleas of Somerset county, by Governor Wilson just before he resigned his office, was sworn in by Deputy County Clerk F. N. Voorhees shortly before noon on Saturday.

After receiving congratulations Judge Beekman delivered a short address. He said in part: "This county has had a succession of honored judges, who were upright, God-fearing men, and in taking this position I feel keenly the responsibilities resting upon me." He referred by name to Judges Bartine, Schenck and Case as persons whom he respected and hoped to merit the same respect they had received. He said that in order to expedite matters the same rules as laid down by Judge Case would be continued in effect, except as the same may from time to time be amended.

All licensed men, who obey the law, said Judge Beekman, will be protected by the court, and that all violators of the laws regulating the sale of intoxicants will be severely dealt with, and that hereafter any violator brought before him, on conviction, will not only be fined, but will also receive a prison sentence as well, and the license will be taken away. He also said that there was considerable drunkenness on the streets at times, and that the court would particularly inquire into every case brought to his notice, and efforts made to learn who sells to men under the influence of liquor.

O'CONNOR LIKELY TO GET THE POSITION

Elizabeth Man Probably the Next Assistant Prosecutor.

Elizabeth, March 10.—Martin P. O'Connor, now a school commissioner of this city, and borough attorney of Roselle Park, is the most likely successor to Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., as assistant county prosecutor, according to the gossip at the county seat. When Prosecutor A. A. Stein was asked whether he would appoint Mr. O'Connor, he declined to discuss the matter, but would not deny the probability of the appointment. The sentiment seems to favor Mr. O'Connor.

Mr. O'Connor has been active in Democratic circles for many years. His professional ability is highly regarded throughout the county and other sections of the State. He was made an attorney in 1900 and a counsellor in 1903. Since then he has been actively engaged in law work.

WANT TO RECONCILE THE ARROWSMITHS

Court Adjourns Divorce Proceedings and Urges Them to Make Up.

For the sake of two pretty children who have been the most prominent figures in his court for several days, Justice Hendrick in New York on Saturday adjourned until this afternoon the divorce action of Mrs. Hattie Wolback Arrowsmith, wife of James L. Arrowsmith, a Plainfield automobile repair shop proprietor.

In announcing the adjournment the Justice said he hoped the father and mother of the children would become reconciled over Sunday and would tell him this afternoon that his decision is not needed. Mrs. Arrowsmith named Matilda Gannon, the pretty maid in the Arrowsmith household in Plainfield, as co-respondent.

"You have two beautiful children," said the Justice, addressing the Arrowsmiths, "and for their sake, as well as your own, you ought to be reconciled to each other. I feel so strongly about this that I going to adjourn this case so that you may have plenty of time to think the matter over."

Witnesses were produced by the husband in an effort to prove that Mrs. Arrowsmith had been guilty of wrongdoing at No. 445 West 124th street with John M. Mortimer, a hotel keeper, who lives in Plainfield, and who has a place of business at Eighth avenue and Twenty-first street, New York. Harry H. Cochran, a private detective, testified.

FINEST ACTRESS IS FOR WOMAN SUFFRAGE

Princess Victoria, or "The Minature Melba," considered the smallest and most perfectly formed midget in the world, this afternoon made her initial appearance before Plainfielders at Proctor's theatre. She is most charming to see behind the footlights as she sings, plays the piano and recites, attired in gowns of the latest pattern.

In private life the Princess is known as Miss Winifred Willes. She is just 28 inches in height and weighs a like number of pounds, although in the theatre, girls in the audience may be heard to exclaim, "Isn't she the cutest little thing," etc. Miss Willis discussed the current events and the latest doings among the suffragettes with equal ability of a normal person. She believes in "Votes for Women," but does not approve of the tactics of her London sisters. She is very fond of stage life, likes jewelry (as evident by four rings on each hand and several bracelets) and said "Plainfield is very nice indeed." Miss Willes travels about in a specially made automobile with a coupe attachment equipped to meet the requirements of her diminutive self. The little actress was born in Australia. Her parents were of normal size.

SUSPECT LET GO.

Sherman Tate, of West Fourth street, was brought to headquarters this morning and questioned about the looting of a quarter meter in his employer's establishment about four months ago. Isaac Byndum, his employer, it is said, made the remark that Tate confessed, but when questioned by Chief Kiely said that he accused Tate of the theft but did not know whether he had actually committed it. Tate was released.

WESTFIELD GIRL WEDDDED TO JAP

Miss Meehin, a Beautiful Young Woman, the Wife of Sadutako Jeshinia.

AT GREENWICH, CONN.

Justice of the Peace Performs the Ceremony—Mother of Bride Admits Fact But Won't Make Any Comment.

Entering the town hall at Greenwich, Conn., Saturday morning, with an American girl, a Japanese inquired the way to the office of the marriage license clerk. In taking the license, the Jap gave his name as Sadutaka Jeshinia, a merchant of Chofu, Japan, residing at Westfield, N. J., while the girl said she was Miss Grace Meehin, twenty-five years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Meehin, of Westfield. With the pair was a sister of Miss Meehin.

The marriage ceremony was performed in the town hall by Justice Stephen L. Radford and the Japanese and his bride and sister-in-law boarded the first train for New York.

The bride, a beautiful girl, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Meehin, of 321 Harrison avenue, Westfield, and Jeshinia had been a resident of that place for the past two years. Society circles in that place were considerably stirred up over the announcement made public yesterday, although the Japanese had been known to be paying attention to Miss Meehin for some time past. They were frequently seen together but their friends did not look forward to a betrothal. The Jap is considered wealthy and is a member of the Westfield Golf Club.

More than once it has been reported that Miss Grace Meehin's sisters, the Misses Loretta and Mable, were engaged to marry some member of the Japanese colony at Westfield, but that neither of them is now engaged was denied by their mother.

In speaking of the marriage to a Daily Press reporter today Mrs. Meehin refused to make any comment as to whether her daughter would receive the parental blessing but she said:

"It is true that my daughter has married Mr. Jeshinia. Whether the marriage meets with my approval or not is another matter. I do not care to talk about it."

KIEDERLING GUILTY; SENTENCE DEFERRED

Youth With Police Record Confesses He Attacked a Woman.

Somerville, March 10.—James Kiederling, of Plainfield, who on Thursday night, February 20, is alleged to have asaulted Miss Nellie White, of Washington avenue, North Plainfield, knocking her down and inflicting injuries, was arraigned in court on Saturday and pleaded guilty. He will be sentenced this week.

James Kiederling has a police record of wrong-doing, having on previous ocasions held up women and on another occasion he tried to commit suicide in the North Plainfield jail. On Thursday night, February 20, he followed Miss White from Plainfield to her home in the borough and upon reaching the house knocked the woman down, beat her, the result of which she lost several teeth. She was left in an unconscious condition, but later was able to get into the house.

It was largely through information given by Mrs. Runyon, wife of Judge Isaac P. Runyon, who lives next door to Mr. Laing, that Kiderling was arrested and sent to Somerville.

"MACBETH" A FAVORITE IN LATEST LETTERS

The interest being manifested in the appearance of Robert Mantell at the Plainfield theatre on Wednesday afternoon and evening, April 2, is shown in the large number of replies that are constantly being received in response to the inviting of patrons of the theatre to express their choice of Shakespearian plays they would like to see. It is requested that all replies be sent in on or before Saturday, March 15. Among those received since Friday are as follows:

"Of the plays that Robert Mantell presents, I prefer 'Macbeth.'"

"It is with great interest that I note that Mantell is to appear in our city, and that the public is allowed to decide upon which play he will give. I shall certainly be among the first to procure tickets and I prefer 'Macbeth.'"

"King Lear."

"I am greatly interested in your efforts to bring Mantell to Plainfield and will say that my preference is 'Macbeth.'"

"Of the plays in which Mantell appears, my preference is 'Macbeth.'"

"I take pleasure in informing you that I should very much prefer to see Mantell appear in 'Macbeth.'"

YOUTHS CONFESS THEY ARE THIEVES

Two Boys Evidently Found it Easy to Burglarize Stores in Business Section.

HELD FOR GRAND JURY

Grieve and Hersh, Both With Record, Are Caught Through Presence of Mind of a Lodging House Keeper.

Two boys were arrested last night by Patrolman Daniel J. MacDonald, through the clever efforts of C. H. Baker, of 222 West Second street, where they had made an unsuccessful attempt to engage a furnished room, evidently with the intention of hiding some loot they subsequently confessed having stolen during the day. They are Andrew Grieve, 14 years old, of 752 St. Mary's avenue, and Gustav Hersh, 17 years old, of West Front street. The youths applied for a furnished room at Mr. Baker's home after 11 o'clock at night. They had with them several odd looking packages, which although small proved to be very heavy.

While his wife engaged the pair in conversation in the parlor, Mr. Baker opened one of their satchels left in the hall. His suspicions were confirmed for he found it filled with coins. Running from the house for a policeman, Mr. Baker found Patrolman MacDonald in Park avenue. Grieve and Hersh were taken as they were making an attempt to escape from the house.

At headquarters where they were put through the third degree, the youths broke down and confessed that they entered Scheuer's grocery store, in West Front street, New Jersey Stamp Vending Co., in North avenue and the offices of the J. D. Loizeaux Lumber Co. They also said they took several articles from a delivery wagon of the Queen City Laundry Co., and that on Sunday, March 2, they entered the store of the Endress Co., in West Front street, and stole a revolver and a check for $180. They said they destroyed the latter and that the weapon was taken away from them.

The thieves entered the Scheuer store by forcing a rear door and going to the front of the establishment looted the cash register of $25, and helped themselves to cigars, cigarettes, candy and nuts. At the N. J. Stamp Vending Co., the youthful thieves took a number of keys, several dollars in coin, and a large quantity of aluminum sewing thimbles. They succeeded in getting little for their efforts at the J. D. Loizeaux Lumber Co.

Arraigned before City Judge De Meza this morning, the prisoners were held in $300 bail each to await the action of the grand jury. Both have police records. Hersh spent two years in the Rahway Reformatory for waylaying a minister and robbing him. Grieve was on probation for receiving a share in loot resulting from the burglary of an East End grocery store several weeks ago.

M'CRADY DROPS DEAD OF ACUTE INDIGESTION

Sitting in the dining room of his home at 404 West Third street, this morning, discussing the events of the day with his mother and father, William McCrady, 39 years old, a blacksmith, groaned, clutched at his breast and toppled over dead. His parents sent for a physician but he was beyond medical aid. Detective Sergeant Flynn was notified and he in turn acquainted City Physician Dr. Currie. The latter said death was caused by acute indigestion.

McCrady was a life long resident of this city. Besides his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William McCrady, he is survived by his wife and five daughters, and one brother, Lash McCrady. Notice of the funeral will be given hereafter.

LINCOLN BEACHEY WILL NOT AVIATE ANY LONGER

Lincoln Beachey, the aviator who appeared in this city last summer exhibiting some of his death defying stunts at the Fair Acres Riding and Driving Park, has just made the announcement that he would never fly again, professionally. Beachey's turns and spiral dips caused many a chill to run up and down the spinal columns of the large gathering of spectators who witnessed his demonstrations in this city and many predicted that he had only a short time to live if he kept up his hazardous flights.

Beachey is still very much alive, however, and many think that he will continue flying even if he does not do so professionally. He holds himself indirectly responsible for the death of several aviators and gives this as his reason for quitting the flying game.

"I have defied death at every opportunity in the last two years," he says. "I have been a bad influence, and the death of a number of young aviators in this country can be traced, I believe, to a desire to emulate me in my foolishly daring exploits in the air."

Rev. Dr. and Mrs. C. E. Herring, of The Bristol, left today for Atlantic City, where they will remain for several days.

PUSSY WILLOWS ARE HERE.

Another sure sign of spring, notwithstanding the apparent return of winter weather, is the presence of the pussy willow. Miss Idabell Conover, of Duer street, the borough, picked a number of branches of pussy willow in her yard last week. Other spring flowers are to be seen in this vicinity.

CHINA AND MEXICO.

Two problems face the new National administration. The one relates to the recognition of the Chinese Republic, and the other to intervention in Mexico. It was a surprise to most thoughtful Americans that the Taft administration failed to recognize the new Republic in China. It may not have been true, but it was undoubtedly believed that the reason for its failure to so do was the fact that the so-called "Six Nation Loan" was not accepted on the terms demanded by the said nations—the United States being one of the six. It seems strange to thoughtful Americans how our government could fail to recognize a Republic established in any country.

If we really believe in our form of government we should welcome into that form all people who desire to organize a Republic. China has wrought a wonderful revolution in her government. There is no other government in China except that which seems to be Republican in form. The ruling sovereign abdicated and left the government undisputedly in the hands of those who have set up a government Republican in form. Why this government, which is the only government of China, has not been recognized and should not now be recognized it is difficult to understand. If the motive for the denying recognition is founded in what has come to be known the "dollar diplomacy," then it reflects anything but credit upon our people. If we can, by recognition, strengthen the effort of any people to establish a Republic or of any other nation to throw off its forms of government and become a Republic, we should do so. Our recognition would help China at this time.

The real truth with regard to China is that the allied powers of Europe do not wish to see that country remain united. They desire to divide its territory among themselves. It is said that there exists a map in the various Chancelleries of Europe showing this division, and which has existed for quite a period of years in anticipation of the time when the Chinese government should be unable to prevent the division. If we could recognize China we would greatly strengthen her position in her efforts to maintain the integrity of her territory. It is earnestly to be hoped that President Wilson and Mr. Bryan will speedily take this matter up and do what we believe to be a laudable thing; namely, recognize the Republic of China.

Mexican intervention would be unfortunate and should be avoided, if it is possible to do so. The Monroe doctrine is a burden which we have assumed as to Mexico and the South American Republics. So far we have kept out of trouble in our efforts to maintain it, but what the future may have in store for us on account of this doctrine it is not easy to predict. Fortunately Mexico has in her various uprisings prevented the destroying of the property of foreigners and our position has not been complicated by foreign governments attempting to invade Mexican territory for the purpose of asserting and protecting the rights of their citizens.

If the time ever comes when the property of foreigners is destroyed, or their persons unlawfully arrested, then we should be compelled to intervene to prevent European governments from going into that territory to protect the rights and property of their citizens.

We do not need Mexico, and the American people, in our judgment, do not want to control or annex or even take supervision over the government of Mexico. Both of these questions will have to be met by the new President, and we believe he will do it in a patriotic spirit.

Union county loses a capable, courteous, fair-dealing official in the person of Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., who has tendered his resignation as assistant prosecutor. He will leave that office with the good will and best wishes of all for his success, and what is more pleasing with the knowledge that the people appreciate the high standard of efficiency that marked his career in that very important and trying position.

President Wilson's edict that the Executive offices must be closed on Sundays may have caused some astonishment at Washington, but it must meet with general approval throughout the country for it is in harmony with the American idea of Sabbath observance.

LA FOLLETE ADVISOR TO PRESIDENT WILSON

Washington, March 10.—Senator Robert M. La Follette will be one of the progressive leaders in the Senate to whom President Wilson will look for advice and assistance. He will be consulted, not only as to legislation, but as to the appointment of various officials connected with work in the divisions of the government with which the Wisconsin senator is familiar.

Although he continued to call himself a Republican during the campaign last fall, La Follette refused to support Taft, and his friendly attitude towards Wilson was well known, while such close personal and political friends of his as Charles R. Crane, of Chicago; Senator John D. Works and Rudolph Spreckels, of California, and others, took an active part in the Wilson campaign.

Although neither La Follette or the President has made any formal statement of their probable relations, it is positively known that the Republican progressive has assured the executive of support and assistance for such progressive measures as the President may urge, and the President looks to the Wisconsin senator for aid in bringing the Republican progressives to the support of his policies.

La Follette has not been at the White House since the spring of 1909, when he led the insurgent fight against the Taft bills for establishing the Court of Commerce, and opposed the reciprocity and other administration measures. Evidence of the changed footing of the insurgent leader with the administration was given on Saturday, however, when his secretary, John J. Hannan, called at the White House to introduce two friends of the senator, and was given a cordial welcome, both by the President and Secretary Tumulty.

GRAHAME-WHITE PLANS BIG AIR FLEET PROJECT.

Aviator Lays Scheme For Mercantile and Mail Carrying Dirigibles.

A comprehensive scheme for dealing with the entire subject of an aerial fleet and its necessary appendages has been laid before the English government by Claude Grahame-White. The scheme includes the establishment of a mercantile air fleet subsidized by the government, airship stations in every large city and around the coast and schools for air pilots all over the United Kingdom.

It is understood that a powerful group of financiers is ready to finance any scheme having government support for building dirigible airships simultaneously in various parts of England. Mr. Grahame-White in an interview said:

"It is my aim to found a mercantile air fleet on the same basis as the Cunard line. We could carry mails for the government, and the airships could be used for general purposes in times of peace. Our proposal is cut and dried. We are prepared to do the work provided we have government assurance. We are prepared to foster this immense industry with private capital and to take all the responsibility. We are ready to secure the finest skilled mechanics from all parts of Europe and to put a mercantile air fleet on a paying basis."

TO TRAIN LATIN AMERICANS.

General Estrada Wants United States to Teach Boys From Each Country.

Suggestions for the mutual benefit of the United States and Central America were made recently at New Orleans by General Juan Jose Estrada, former president of Nicaragua and the leader in the successful revolution which destroyed the power of Jose Santos Zelaya in that country. General Estrada was en route to New York. He is a believer in the education of the masses, and in an interview he has outlined an elaborate plan of sending 500 boys from each of the Latin American countries to the United States to be educated.

"I have great faith in the future of Nicaragua and all the Central American countries," said General Estrada. "I believe that closer relations, both commercial and social, should be established between the United States and those countries.

"In my opinion the best way to do this is to educate the growing generation in a feeling of friendliness to America and the American people. Inculcate in them a love of freedom and modern ideas. Let the United States take 500 boys from each of the countries, including Mexico, Guatemala, Honduras, Nicaragua, Costa Rica, Salvador and Panama and give them a thoroughly practical education fitting them for the battle of life."

CONTEST OVER ESTATE OF WOMAN SUICIDE

Alleging that Arthur B. Clark misrepresented his influence with the stars and induced his wife to give him more than $100,000 worth of real estate and $6,000 in cash before she killed herself and the balance of her estate by her will, Joseph M. Wright, of New York, has been endeavoring to have the deeds to the real estate set aside by Justice Tompkins in the Supreme Court, of New York.

Mrs. Clark, who was the sister of Mr. Wright, took her life by hanging at Dr. Cooley's sanitarium in North Plainfield, some time ago. A white horse circling a house all night, a big snake in a small tent and other odd things have been figuring in the testimony. Following the woman's death it was found that her will gave all of her estate to her husband. This will is being contested.

"For some time after our arrival," writes Mrs. Hugh Fraser in "Further Reminiscences," "Hugh and I used to be puzzled at the prevalence of toothache in the town (Santiago). Later we found out that it was a signal and meant: 'I was drinking last night. Do not speak to me.'"

PLAN TO REDUCE COST OF LIVING

Fifty Families to Adopt Co-operative Housekeeping in Montclair.

WITH ONLY TEN MAIDS

Chef to Receive $3,000 a Year—Members to Get Hot Dinners Delivered by Automobile—It Spells Economy.

In an effort to reduce the cost of living, solve the servant problem and to propagate a spirit of brotherly and sisterly feeling, the Council of Twenty, a body auxiliary to the Board of Trustees of Unity Unitarian church, of Montclair, proposes to introduce into Montclair co-operative housekeeping. Mrs. H. A. Leonhauser is chairman of the committee now working out the details of the matter.

Mrs. Leonhauser purposes that fifty families shall unite in subscribing a sum sufficient to obtain a modern kitchen in a central locality, to pay a corps of expert chefs and to deliver the cooked products in automobiles equipped with ovens or other heating devices in order to keep the food warm. There also will be a department of house cleaning, made up of ten maids, who shall go from house to house each day. The expense is to be prorated among the families subscribing according to the number of meals a person and the time involved in cleaning house. A co-operative laundry may be established also, she said.

"The success attained by the co-operative store here in Montclair makes us believe that a co-operative housekeeping scheme would be not only feasible, but delightful," Mrs. Leonhauser asserted. "It would save money to the housekeeper and no end of worry. Just fancy having your food brought to the door in an automobile, placed on the table, eaten and the dishes whizzed away! There would be no servant problem then, for housekeepers would be entirely independent of cooks.

"In the morning a maid will come and clean house for an hour. She could return for the same length of time in the afternoon and wash windows and do other work, which could wait until that time. The association would own vacuum cleaners and all the bother would be taken away."

Mrs. Leonhauser has compiled figures showing what it will cost to start the venture the first year and also data estimating the average expense for servants borne by fifty families in Montclair.

"We will pay $1,200 a year to the general manager of the housekeeping department, who must be a woman thoroughly familiar with domestic science," she said. "She will have under her direction ten maids at $9 a week each, which for a year amounts to $4,680. We allow $120 annually for unforseen incidentals. That brings the expense of the housekeeping department up to $6,000 a year.

"In the kitchen department we will have a chef who knows the science of food values as well as the art of preparation. We propose to pay him $3,000 a year. He will have several assistants, whose aggregate pay will be $3,000 annually. Two delivery wagons, perhaps rebuilt automobiles, will cost $1,800; rent will be $1,200 and equipment, such as stoves, ranges, etc., will cost $1,000. The expense of the kitchen department, therefore, amounts to $10,000 a year, or a total expense of $16,000 annually for both departments.

"In comparison to that amount," she continued, "figure that fifty families average one servant, to whom they pay $300 a year. That totals $15,000 a year. It costs every family at least $20 a year for rough work, such as washing windows, spring and autumn cleaning, etc. That brings the expense now being borne to $16,000, or the cost of the new co-operative household. Add to that the keep of a servant, estimated at $3 a week or $150 a year, and for fifty families you get $7,500, or a total expense of $23,500."

CO-OPERATION COST FOR FIFTY FAMILIES.

Estimated cost of model co-operative housekeeping plan for fifty families:

	Annually.
General manager	$1,200
Ten maids at $9 a week	4,680
Incidentals	120
Head chef	3,000
Ten under cooks	3,000
Two rebuilt automobiles	1,800
Kitchen rent	1,200
Ranges, dishes, etc.	1,000
Total	$16,000

Estimated present cost of servants alone for fifty families:

	Annually.
One servant (one family)	$300
Cost for keep of servant	150
Extra labor for rough work	20
Total for one family	$470
For fifty families	$23,500

GUARDSMEN TO GET THOSE OVERCOATS?

A Bill Asks $70,000 in Order to Provide for the Olive Drab Kind.

Trenton, March 10.—Senator William E. Ramsey, of Perth Amboy, an influential member of the appropriations committee, has drafted a bill calling for an expenditure of $70,000 by the State for the purchase of overcoats for the members of the National Guard. He says that the criticism of the Jersey soldiers when out on duty in cool weather may have been correct, but that it was the fault of the old style blue overcoats.

The Senator admits that in his opinion the State has done the right thing in getting its troops ready for instant duty and attending to the militia display last. He notes that every State has its crack regiment, generally composed of men of means, which outshines the other in appearance on parade. For instance, there are the Seventh Regiment, of New York; the Virginia Blues, of Virginia; the "State Fencibles," of Philadelphia, and the Essex Troops, of Newark.

New Jersey, he says, has all of her companies equipped for instant and effective work, both offensive and defensive, and it is up to the Legislature to put them on a par with the troops of other States in the matter of clothing.

The faulty appearance of the men in the old style overcoats comes, the army men say, from wearing those overcoats. It has been the lack of money which has hampered the equipping authorities in getting ready for such a pageant. The Legislature has only allowed $30,000 for clothing allowances, and it will require fully $70,000 to purchase the olive drab overcoats for the men. The men get nothing for their services to the State excepting hard work and a little glory, and in view of the criticisms which have robbed them of even the little glory the Legislature will be asked to spend the money for the overcoats.

HOW BIG DAM WAS BUILT IN JUNGLES

Four American Engineers on Project.

USE 300 NATIVE LABORERS

Odd Experiences Met In Construction Work Through Wild Country—Colombians Ape Clothes and Actions of Newcomers—Odd Labor Troubles Arise—Many Alligators Found.

Broadway, New York, looks good to four engineers who recently returned from the Colombian jungle, where they spent two years among a thousand laborers of all nations building a big concrete dam and power house in connection with a project to develop the mining wealth of the region. S. H. Gifford told the story of their experiences:

"Labor troubles? You don't know what they are until you tackle a job, as we did, of building a dam across San Juan creek, 375 miles from the Atlantic coast.

"There were fifty Americans on the job, and we put up a dam 85 feet high, 290 feet across the crest and containing 18,000 cubic feet of concrete. A similar job would have taken one year in the States, but it took two down there.

"To begin with, we had about 300 natives, but it was impossible to do anything with them. They never had seen a piece of machinery before, and every time we swung a derrick around they'd take fright and run half a mile, and it would take 'em half an hour to recover sufficiently to return to work.

"We finally educated them by bringing down laborers from the canal zone, who had been trained in American methods. These men we put in responsible positions, and as the natives were good imitators they soon 'caught on' to the American way, and things began to hum.

Natives Great Imitators.

"The natives carried their passion for imitation further, often with humorous results. For example, at first they wore very few clothes. After we had imported the men from the canal, all of them seasonably well clad and wearing shoes, every native on the job took to watching them closely. They soon found out that the invaders were getting more money, and they figured out a connection between wages and clothes.

"At once it became the ambition of every native to own a pair of shoes and all of them promptly bought, traded for or stole a pair. Ostentatiously they would wear the shoes out to work so that their American bosses could see them, but when they arrived on the job they would take them off. They couldn't stand the pinch of civilization.

"Those natives were finished performers in the drinking line. They would drink anything they could get their hands on and would spend almost every cent of their pay envelope to get the stuff. Their favorite beverage was 'aguadiente,' which is mostly alcohol flavored with anise.

"And this particular brand of 'booze' had a very interesting effect on them, though an inconvenient one for a laborers' camp. As soon as they had had three drinks they would start out at once in search of those whom they disliked. They all carried machetes or revolvers, and I never knew a pay day to pass but what three or four of them were killed."

Big Alligators.

"One of the sights that impresses an American in penetrating into the interior of Colombia is the populous colony of alligators on the banks of the Magdalena river. They literally cover the sandbars. I counted 200 on one bar alone. Here and there along the river the natives have built little half moon shaped stockades into the water, made by driving stakes into the sand, where their women can come down to fetch water and bathe safely.

"It's so commonplace for people to be eaten up by alligators that no one thinks anything about it.

"There in the heart of Colombia, 375 miles from the Atlantic, is an immense area that is a wonderfully rich mining proposition. But it is not a poor man's country; it will take a lot of capital. Development must be on an immense scale. It is low grade placer mining, but the vast area of gold bearing 'dirt' will make it a paying proposition. For 300 years the district has been mined by the Spaniards by hand.

"The dam and power house which we built was in connection with the first large modern dredge in Colombia for gold dredging purposes.

"Colombia needs to reform some of her laws. She wants to open her country to foreigners more. The freight rates on the steamers up the Magdalena river are exorbitant, and, in addition, the Colombians levy a tax of $4 a ton for dredging the river—which is never dredged. Every piece of our stuff—derricks, cable ways, donkey engines and electrical equipment—was brought from the United States."

Italy to Have Panama Show.

The Italian government has announced in the chamber of deputies that Italy would participate officially to the Panama-Pacific exposition at San Francisco and asked for an appropriation of $400,000.

FINNAN HADDIE.

FINNAN haddie is haddock smoked and dried. It is sometimes called finnan haddock. The fish gets its name of finnan from Findcorn, in Scotland, where the fish are preserved most perfectly.

Finnan haddie may be cooked in various ways. Some popular styles are the following:

You Will Relish These.

Broiled Finnan Haddie.—Wash the fish well. Then with the skin side up let it soak in cold water for half an hour. Take out of this water and cover in water which has been brought almost to the boiling point. Let it stand in this for ten or fifteen minutes and then dry thoroughly. Now brush it with melted butter or olive oil and let it broil over a slow fire for about a quarter of an hour. Serve on a hot platter, sprinkle with the juice of half a lemon and dot with bits of butter.

Finnan Haddie In Cream.—Remove bone and skin from a finnan haddie, then cut up very fine. Take one-half pint of milk, one-half pint of sweet cream, one-half teaspoonful of salt and one-eighth spoonful of pepper. Mix all this with pieces of fish and boil for ten minutes.

With a Nice Sauce.

Baked Finnan Haddie.—Wash a finnan haddie and let soak half an hour in cold water, skin side up. Wipe dry and set in an agate baking pan. Pour over it a cupful and a half of the following sauce and let bake about ten minutes. Baste with the sauce twice.

Pepper Sauce.—Take two cupfuls of tomatoes, a green pepper chopped and seeded, half an onion chopped, three branches of parsley and one-fourth teaspoonful of salt. Cook and strain and baste with this sauce. The mixture may be thickened with two tablespoonfuls of flour beaten into two tablespoonfuls of creamed butter.

A Scotch Recipe.

Scotch Haddie.—This is the way the Scotch like finnan haddie prepared: Take one fish, four cupfuls of milk, one-half cupful of butter, one-half cupful of flour and three hard boiled eggs. Soak the fish in lukewarm water. Then free from bones and skin. Pour boiling water on the fish and let stand until cool enough to handle, then pick to pieces. Have three cupfuls of milk in a double boiler. When it boils add the fish and cook ten minutes. Then drop in the flour stirred smooth with the remaining milk and after it boils again cook for five minutes more. Add the butter and the eggs cut in pieces. Serve hot.

WOMEN AS GAMBLERS.

They Are Noted at Monte Carlo For Coolness and Luck.

The women gamblers at Monte Carlo are by no means the excitable, hysterical and unscrupulous players that have been described to us. Many are unscrupulous and dishonest, but they are usually calmer than the men. There are women who will pick up your winnings under your very nose, asserts the London Chronicle, and if you protest the croupier will probably pay the money again rather than have a disturbance. There are other women who will sit beside a man and openly claim a part of his winnings, and if the man is wise he will surrender to the extortion rather than disturb the domestic bliss. But, as a rule, the women gamble with equanimity, and how extraordinarily lucky they are, to be sure!

Women have wonderful luck. While men work out elaborate "systems" and sit frowning over figures, the mysteries of which would take a very Napoleon of finance to elucidate, and then play—and lose, women simply plank money on the number they are "sure is going to win," and they do win!

It is not at all an uncommon thing to see a woman sitting against the wall, her husband by her side, waiting to put pieces on at her command. While he trots to and from the tables, telling her what numbers turned up last, fussing and fuming and worrying what to do next, she calmly surveys the figures she has jotted down, gives him another "piece" at the psychological moment to put on, and her big velvet embroidered bag grows wider in circumference every hour. The five franc "piece" is even heavier and clumsier to carry than our "crown" piece. But she is so thoroughly used to it in quantities that she does not mind at all, but says, "The heavier the better!"

The games at the casino are perfectly fair, says the writer. When there is trouble, and trouble is very rare, it is due to the players and not to the game, "and I am sorry to say that when there is anything wrong it is generally a case of 'cherchez la femme.'"

ANDREW JOHNSON.

He Was Perfect In Figure and Scrupulously Neat In Dress.

Andrew Johnson was one of the neatest men in his dress and person I have ever known. During his three years in Nashville, in particular, he dressed in black broadcloth frock coat and waistcoat and black doeskin trousers and wore a silk hat. This had been his attire for thirty years, and for most of that time, whether as governor of Tennessee, member of congress or United States senator, he had made all of his own clothes. He was so scrupulous about his linen that he invariably changed all of it daily and sometimes oftener.

He was matchlessly perfect in figure, about five feet ten, had handsome broad shoulders, fine forehead, superb face, dark bushy hair and small hands and feet. The most marked feature about him was his eyes, which were small, and, although such eyes are not usually attractive, his were black, sparkling and absolutely beautiful.

He was not a gamester at anything and could play only indifferently at checkers. In 1862 he explained to me that he had never visited a theater because in his youth he lacked the opportunity and always afterward would rather study and work or go to bed than spend his time at a playhouse. He looked on all kinds of gambling as wrong, never knew one card or one domino from another and was never at a horse race. He had been to a few circuses and minstrel shows and liked them.—Recollection of His Secretary, Major Truman, in Century.

Too Many Pianos.

M. de S., art critic, is traveling in Italy. On the train he consults the annual showing various locations in Florence. He reads, "Casanumero—via—1 piano." "Oh, me," he says, "I do not want any piano in the house."

He continues to read. He finds houses of two, three, four pianos. He does not find any that are unprovided with these. He is desperate. He declares the superabundance of these instruments disgusts him with Florence.

Then some one explains to him that the word piano, in Italian, signifies the floor or story of a house.—Cri de Paris.

Had a Complaint.

The angry citizen puffed into the office of the city editor.

"See here, sir," he yelled, "what do you mean by publishing my resignation from my political office in this way?"

"You gave the story out yourself, didn't you?" asked the editor.

"Of course I did," repled the angry citizen. "But your fool paper prints it under the head of Public Improvements."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Like Darning.

If you wish to embroider silk stockings try the following plan instead of using an embroidery hoop: Place your darning ball inside the stocking and hold it as though you were going to darn, save that you should be very careful not to stretch the stocking. Simply hold it smooth over the darner where you are to do the embroidery.

Preparing Cocoanut.

When desiring to use fresh cocoanuts for a cake or dessert of any kind, instead of grating it in the old way, use the meat chopper. This may be done more quickly, and the cocoanut is light and fluffy. This is well worth trying, especially if you are pressed for time. Fingers are often bruised through using the grater.

GOING TO BUILD A HOME?
Building specifications do not provide for fire insurance. Insurance is an important factor, don't overlook it. While building take into consideration:
The smoker's match and the pile of shavings.
The plumber's and electrician's gasoline tank.
The painter's rubbing rags and spontaneous combustion.
The carelessness of the curious public.
WE WILL INSURE YOUR PROPERTY FROM THE TIME THE LUMBER IS ON THE GROUND AT THE SAME RATES AS WHEN COMPLETED.
BETTER BE INSURED THAN SORRY.

BRUNSWICK "BILLS" WILL BE CHAMPIONS

Have Practically Clinched the Title in the Elks Bowling League.

For the second time in the history of the Elks' Bowling League the "Bills" of New Brunswick are again the winners. They clinched the pennant in the race Friday night when they took three straight games from the Newark Elks on the latter's alleys. While the Hoboken Elks are close behind the Brunswick bowlers it is next to impossible for them to pass the pinners of 324 and the latter are already making great preparations to celebrate their victory. The Hudson county pinners have been great rivals of New Brunswick since the league began but New Brunswick has set a pace that has been too fast for Hoboken to pass.

The Brunswick Elks still have six more games to roll while Hoboken is still in second place six games behind. If the team now occupying the top rung should lose all of their games and Hoboken win all theirs, the best the latter team could do is to tie Brunswick. This is considered an impossibility and Captain Burton says that his team will win all of their games instead of dropping them to help Hoboken along.

He annexed one of the Yankees' hits in the game with Dallas Saturday and hit another out shoot on the nose with three men occupying the sacks. Martin's hit was traveling the home run route when "Birdie" Cree leaped into the air and pulled it down, making a wonderful play out of the bingle.

DECIDING INTERSCHOLASTIC BASKETBALL GAME WON BY P. H. S. IN EXTRA SESSION

What Johnny Heron, the diminutive forward of the Plainfield High School basketball team, did not get in hugs and caresses after that final interscholastic match Saturday afternoon, he will receive in pink and blue envelopes during the next few days. It was Heron who caged the goal that gave P. H. S. a 26 to 24 victory in the deciding contest of the interscholastic league series after the teams stood deadlocked at the expiration of forty minutes of gruelling play and an extra playing period was ordered.

When Plainfield High School took the floor at Saengerbund Hall Saturday afternoon, to contest the final and deciding game for the cup and seven medals, the local boys had all the odds against them. Woodhull was playing against the advice of his physician and the court on which the all important affair was to be staged was the home of their deadly rivals. Never before in the history of local basketball has a crowd of such magnitude and lung capacity packed the galleries of a gymnasium to witness a contest of any nature and the respective cohorts kept up a din that never ceased until long after the final whistle was sounded. North Plainfield rooters, as usual, were conspicuous because of their numbers and cheering ability and to them belongs a great deal of the credit for the excellent game put up by the borough representatives. Plainfield was there in yelling, even if it was outnumbered, but the cheering of the P. H. S. supporters was unorganized and they were completely drowned when Chandler, the N. P. H. S. leader, got his many shouters going on one long locomotive or siren.

From the first report of the referee's whistle, in the hands of Carlton, the Trenton High School basketball coach, until Heron made the deciding two point score, the playing was nip and tuck, North Plainfield leading at a majority of the stages. Foul shooting played a prominent part in the initial period which ended with the two teams deadlocked with the score 8-8. In this half every point was a matter of the bitterest contention and little scoring was done by either side. North Plainfield came to life in the last half however, and for a time it looked as though they would sweep the Plainfielders off their feet as they did in the last game on the same court. Unlike its performance in the last game, however, when it tired out in the first part of the second half and allowed the boroughites to register a decisive walloping, Plainfield High School kept plugging away and by some marvelous team work managed to get the ball near enough to the goal to make good on several of the field variety.

North Plainfield kept the local boys from passing them as they did at several other intervals in the contest and when Referee Carlton was notified that time was up the score stood 24 to 24. After a brief interval the captains decided to play until the winning two points were made and a third period of struggling was ushered in, this one shorter than the other two. Woodhull was afforded two opportunities from the foul line in quick succession but wasted both. If he had made two points in this fashion victory would have been assured to P. H. S., but as it was the ball went to North Plainfield's end of the court and after nearly every man on the team had taken a shot, hitting every part of the goal but the right part, the ball went back to P. H. S. territory, where another foul was levied on the boroughites. Brynariski took this chance and once more P. H. S. lost an opportunity to score, but as luck would have it, Brynariski's miss was probably a lucky one as Johnny Heron caught the ball on its return trip and properly sent it back to the net and victory.

Too much credit cannot be given to North Plainfield for the great game that little aggregation put up and if anything the boroughites had it on P. H. S. at a good many parts of the game. They certainly set the scoring pace and P. H. S. seemed contended to lie in the wake for the final spurt. North Plainfield guards were the cause of many of the Plainfielders' shots going for naught and time and again when a P. H. S. man had a free throw he was suddenly surprised by a sudden attack from a rival guard. It would be impossible to hail any individual as a star as every man on the floor fought tooth and nail for everything he could lay his hands on and what he failed to get along the scoring line he amply made up for in the guarding phase of the game. Captain Townley, the little North Plainfield High School guard, put up a wonderful game as guard, at the same time getting in some timely basket caging that helped to spur his teammates on to further efforts. He seemed to be everywhere on the floor and broke up the local team's passing and shooting at numerous times.

Captain Woodhull, of Plainfield, was noticeably handicapped by his injured arm but nevertheless put up an excellent all around game. Peacock, Burner and Brynariski, as guards, covered their men to perfection and their opponents seldom got free opportunities to score. Taylor, who made such a sensational showing in the previous game, was visibly weak, probably from his recent illness, and while he put up one of the best games on the floor his playing was not up to his usual high standard. Godd and Dunning, as pivot men, alternated in getting the ball started on the jumpoff and both were a world of strength in starting the passing and keeping it going.

With the interscholastic league championship goes a cup and seven gold medals and Plainfield High School players can take these trophies with a feeling of having earned them on good clean all-around basketball in a game decided on playing merits alone.

P. H. S. GIRLS LOST TO SOUTH ORANGERS

Local Basketball Players Were Outclassed by Rival High School Maidens.

With a somewhat crippled lineup the Plainfield High School girls' basketball team went to South Orange Saturday afternoon where they were defeated by the High School feminine quintet of that place by a score of 25 to 5. The local girls were outclassed at all stages of the game, never having a chance to win out after the home players got firmly started.

South Orange started off like winners at the first crack of the whistle, scoring four goals before the visitors managed to register a basket. Miss Gates scored this tally and it proved to be one of the two that the Queen City representatives made during the thirty minutes of play, Miss Phillips annexing the other tally. Miss Anita Yereance and Miss Lydia Seager were the individual stars for the South Orange quintet, each getting a half dozen field goals, while Miss Esther Phillips and Miss Gates did all of the P. H. S. team's scoring.

N. P. H. S. SPIRIT A COMMENDABLE ONE

Defeated Boroughites Display Rare Evidences of True Sportmanship.

One of the most generous examples of true sportsmanship ever displayed in an athletic contest between two scholastic rivals and especially between such keen contenders as North Plainfield and Plainfield High Schools, was evidenced on the part of the borough school athletes after their defeat in the third and deciding game of the interscholastic basketball league series at Saengerbund Hall last Saturday afternoon. The spirit of defeat was a most commendable one, they being willing to give their conquerors all the praise that was coming to them and taking the responsibility for their alma mater's downfall on the basketball court on their own individual shoulders.

Not a solitary murmur against the methods employed by P. H. S. in winning the contest was proffered and everyone of the five vanquished players advocated his personal opinion to the effect that the best aggregation had won out in a hard fight. Captain Townley, of North Plainfield, probably felt the defeat as no other individual could, but in face of his great sorrow the little High School leader complimented the winners on the great game they put up. Manager Taylor was heard to remark that the best team had won and North Plainfield players or rooters had no kicks to register. The fact that not a single protest of any magnitude was made by either captain against the official's ruling was in itself a decided triumph, for seldom does such a contest at this one go through without some kind of an argument.

Some consolation can be obtained by the boroughites in the fact that this is but the second interscholastic championship that has fallen to the local High School in the past five years and N. P. H. S. is still in the lead as far as title trophies are concerned. Two teams more evenly matched would be hard to single out and the result hinged on the final basket, which was brought to the local boys by a sudden decree of luck.

After the game Saturday night students of the Plainfield High School paraded through the streets bearing the triumphant players on their shoulders in celebration of the afternoons victory. They invaded the confines of North Plainfield and made merry until a late hour with music savoring of kitchen utensils in a stampede, but this was enough to satisfy their cravings for noise of some sort. The gate receipts taken in Saturday afternoon were larger than any ever collected at a scholastic contest in this city or North Plainfield and both schools will profit considerably by playing the series at Saengerbund Hall instead of at the Y. M. C. A., where they would have to turn over fifty per cent. of the gate receipts to the association.

The cup and seven gold medals emblemic of the championship will be presented to the P. H. S. team at one of the morning assembly exercises in the near future and it is not unlikely that the N. P. H. S. five will be their guests at that time.

ORANGE SCHOOL ATHLETE SIGNED BY WESTERN NINE

Belmont Evans, the much-talked-of athlete of Orange High School, will take up professional baseball. He has signed to play an infield position on the team at Appleton, Wis., and he is to report there the first of next month. The suburban youngster is a clever infielder and hits well. Evans is now attending Orange High School and working hard to finish his course so that he can graduate before he leaves to take up his baseball affairs. This year is an extra one for him at the suburban institution, which makes it possible for him to complete his studies and get credit for them before the term is over.

Evans says that he believes he will like the Wisconsin town which is to be his home during the ball season, for he has heard good reports of the place, and he seems confident that he can fill the bill.

PEACOCK AND BRYNARISKI HAVE TWO MEDALS COMING

Two of the players who competed in the interscholastic match at Saengerbund Hall, Saturday afternoon, have two gold medals coming to them for basketball prowess during the past season, with prospects of still another one of the awards before the season ends. William Peacock and Albert Brynariski, who play on the Plainfield High School team, are also members of the Y. M. C. A. Ajax quintet, and besides their High School title medal, will each receive one of the seven to be awarded to the Ajax for their victory over Hope in the recent three game championship series.

With the organization of the city championship league these two players will have still another opportunity to get into the title class, for gold medals are also on tap for the winners of this title. Peacock and Brynariski will represent the Ajax in this league against the Y. M. C. A. first team, the First Presbyterian team and possibly Hope Chapel. This organization will probably get under way Wednesday night at the Y. M. C. A. gym.

HOPE CHAPEL FIVE WALLOPS DUNELLEN

Score Close at End of First Half But Hope Players Soon Walk Away.

Hope chapel basketball players held fast to their record of not having been defeated on their home court this season Saturday night when they scored a decided triumph over the Dunellen Baraca class quintet by a score of 32 to 13. After the first few minutes of play the Dunellenites were never in the running, the chapelites scoring from every point of the floor almost entirely unmolested. Joe Gavett, the husky former Y. M. C. A. center, played forward for the visitors and he proved to be the better part of the Baraca class aggregation both in passing and shooting. His five field goals and one foul tally represented the sum and substance of the looser's scoring with the exception of one two point score by Rus Runyon, playing guard.

The first halw was by far the most interesting of the two, the visitors keeping on a par with their lighter rivals all the way, the count at the end of this period being 8 to 6 in favor of Hope. Soon after the second half was ushered in, however, the chapelites began a goal bombardment that could not be warded off by the heavy Dunellen guards and the home players soon obtained a lead that made the victory doubly sure for them long before the final whistle sounded.

Tommy Heron lead the Hope team in scoring field goals, getting an even half dozen of the two point variety and two from the foul line, making a total of fourteen scores or more than enough to beat the opposing aggregation single handed. Allen Snyder, playing forward in the place of Johnny Heron, who was resting on his afternoon's laurels, counted for a trio of field goals and eight fouls. Doig was a tower of strength at center for the victors, getting the ball started in fine style at every jumpoff.

The score:

SPLIT UP SPORT TITLES.

England and Her Possessions Take Turns In Defeating One Another.

During the past year England won the cricket championship from Australia.

South Africa captured the Davis cup, emblematic of the world's lawn tennis championship, won the single sculling and eight oared shell races at the Olympic regatta in Stockholm, while Ernest Barry secured the professional crown by beating Richard Arnst of Australia.

COLOR LEAGUE EVENT.

Shot putters will get their innings at the Y. M. C. A. tomorrow night, when the eight-pound shot put event will be contested in connection with the Color League schedule.

HANDICAPS GIVEN JERSEY GOLFERS

Three Plainfielders Limited to Six Strokes by U. S. Golf Association.

It is a great compliment that the United States Golf Association has paid to Jerome D. Travers, of the Upper Montclair Club, in putting him alone at scratch in the annual national handicap list. Considering his whirlwind showing last fall, in winning the amateur title, however, on top of his marked victory in the Metropolitan, it is the only thing that could have been done. In all probability the national amateur will never be won again by any such margin.

Naturally, in making up the second yearly country-wide list, the national event was the dominating factor for all such as competed therein and it must be said that, considering the off-form shown by most of the leading Eastern players, throughout last season, they had been fairly rated. The further down in the listing one goes the more opportunity there is for criticism. It is the great difficulty experienced in getting returns, however, that is mainly responsible for inaccuracies.

Among the six stroke Jersey players are three from the Plainfield Country Club, D. H. Barrows, W. T. Glenney and W. L. Glenney.

MILLER ONCE MORE WINS FOR U. OF P.

Former Plainfield High School Athlete Excells on the Rings in Princeton Meet.

Russell Miller, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dudley S. Miller, of this city, continued his laurel winning for the University of Pennsylvania gym team Saturday afternoon at Princeton University when he took first honors on the rings for the Quaker team. "Rus," as he is commonly known, was a popular athlete in the Plainfield High School a few years ago, taking the Yale Cup for efficiency in scholarship and athletics when he graduated in 1910. In the meet with the navy team at Annapolis, the navy won, but Miller was highly complimented in Philadelphia and other papers for the way in which he upheld the name of the U. of P. He won on the flying rings and one of his teammates took second.

Miller also participated in the meets with rings in which Penn won from Rutgers and from Haverford. Princeton nosed out a victory over the Quakers, Saturday, by slightly more than a point. With defeat facing the Tigers before the last event, Moffat and Hogan offered a tumbling exhibition in which Princeton took the first two honors and eight points. Miller was first on the rings with two Princeton men in the second and third positions. A number of the Plainfield boy's friends in this city witnessed the meet and came back enthusiastic over the manner in which the local boy performed.

LEAL CONTEST OFF.

Although Plainfield High School has one more game to play in the Interscholastic League, this one with Leal, in all probability the game will not be contested as the private school boys have ended the season and are not anxious to meet the Ninth street aggregation. Leal has proved a weak proposition in all of the games it has played this season and it is doubtful if the P. H. S. five would have much trouble in disposing of it even if the game should be played. The contest would be nothing but a formality and entirely unnecessary.

STILL ANOTHER CANCELLED.

The contest to be rolled at Newark tonight between the Plainfield Elks' bowling team and the five of that place has been called off by mutual consent and will be rolled next Monday night instead.

ANOTHER S. S. TEAM WANTS A FRANCHISE

"Doc" Doyle Has Gathered Together What Looks Like the Real Article.

That Plainfield will have another Sunday-school baseball league this year has now become an assured thing and the teams that are springing up around town seem to indicate that the organization will have an eight team circuit this year instead of a six team one as it had last season. The latest church to organize with expectations of joining the Bible school league is St. Mary's. Manager Jack Doyle, of the Holy Cross football team, has taken the situation in hand and will pilot the Catholic aggregation on the diamond. When seen Saturday night Doyle said that the St. Mary's athletes were enthusiastic over the proposition and since he announced the organization of a nine numerous aspiring candidates have signified their intention of trying out for the team. Sunday-school league officials appear to be willing to let another team enter the league, but in the event of one being granted a franchise, an eighth nine will have to be unearthed as the league would not continue with an odd number of contenders. The matter of finding an eighth team would be comparatively easy as a number of Sunday-schools in this section who were not in the league last year have signified their willingness to take out a franchise this season, among the latter being Scotch Plains.

"Doc" Doyle thinks that he can organize a team that will give a good account of themselves in the league race and be a lively contender for championship honors. Among the athletes he has to pick from are Joseph Carty, James Nash, Earl Moran, Harry Moulton, Jack Wilson, William Coyle, James Cullen, Joseph Green, William Harding, the Jaeger brothers and scores of other men who have starred on local diamonds for some time past. The material available seems to warrant the organization of a team whether or not it is entered in the Sunday-school organization and this will probably be done by Doyle anyway.

Y. M. C. A. BOYS TO CONDUCT EXHIBIT

Junior Department Will Appear in Annual Demonstration April 10.

Under the supervision of Boys' Secretary C. William Bingeman and Physical Director E. C. Ostlin, plans are being made for the annual boys' department exhibition at the Y. M. C. A., the proceeds of which are always devoted to the work of the local association's representative in the South American mission fields and the State Boys' Work being done by the Y. M. C. A. The affair will be held on April 10 this year instead of the middle of March as was the case last year, the latter having been found to be too late in the season for this nature of entertainment.

The appearance of the Springfield Training School gym team in this city last spring awakened a wide spreading interest in gymnastics in this city and those who saw the exhibition at that time have been anxiously awaiting a similar bill this year but owing to conflictng dates the appearance of the Y. M. C. A. college team was called off. The boys' exhibition will be a fitting substitute, however, as the youngsters have been drilled thoroughly in every branch of calisthenics and will make a first-class appearance in the demonstration under the leadership of two such capable directors along this line.

HOPE ATHLETES TO HAVE MODERN GYM

New Addition and Improvements to Be Made to the Present Structure.

All the knocks and complaints that Hope chapel athletes have been forced to endure especially during basketball seasons have been allayed by the announcement made public by a committee of Hope chapel and Crescent Avenue churchmen today to the effect that the present Hope chapel-gymnasium will be remodeled into an up-to-date athletic rendezvous properly fitted for every branch of athletic endeavor. In nearly every basketball game played on the Hope chapel court the visiting team has had some kick to register because of the small court on which the games are played, referring to it in the most general terms as a "cheese box," but the Hope chapel athletes have been patient and unnoticing and their zealous efforts to make the committee grant their one big hope by playing fast clean games is now about to become a reality.

When the new court is completed it will probably be the best in the city as there is plenty of ground on each side of the present gym to build a large and spacious athletic floor on. The present court will be lengthened considerably and an adequate gallery will be constructed on the west side. The bowling alleys will undergo improvements in accordance with those made to the gym and when finished will be wider and will afford a longer take off. Athletics have flourished at Hope chapel during the past few years under the able guidance of a select body of men who have given a large portion of their time to fostering good, clean all around sport. Prominent among these workers has been George T. Leighs, Sr., and to his untiring efforts in trying to have the gym rebuilt the present move can probably be attributed.

In speaking to the writer several weeks ago at a basketball game played in the Hope chapel gym Mr. Leighs expressed himself as follows: "I think it is a shame that our boys do not have a larger and more adequate floor on which to entertain visiting teams and I am looking forward to the time when the partition at the farther end of the court will be broken out and the gym lengthened." Mr. Leighs' statements have now come true and the Hope boys will have a court and gym of which they can feel justly proud. Some clean fast games have been played on the chapel court even if it is exceedingly small and these sportsmanlike exhibit-ions have probably gone a long way toward inducing the committee to take its recent move.

A committee, comprised of G. Herbert Condict, John Leals and H. H. McWilliams, was selected to receive estimates and are now open for bids on the new addition.

LOCAL Y. M. C. A. PLAYERS ENCOUNTER ROUGH OPPONENT

Y. M. C. A. first team players are loud in their protests against the treatment accorded them in Montclair Saturday night when they were defeated by Listman's association boys to the tune of 47 to 27. The Plainfielders say they were made targets of for the Montclair players' uppercuts and wrestling holds, and instead of putting a stop to the dirty work the Montclair officials encouraged it.

Soon after the first half started, the home players took the lead on some good passing and sensational shooting, and they never relinquished their hold on the upper end of the score until the final whistle blew. Stine and Coyle starred for the Plainfielders' doing most of the scoring and passing. The game was started about 10:30 in the evening, there being two preliminary contests to run off and the local boys did not reach home until the early hours of Sunday morning, much battered up.

Owing to the absence of Manager Bailey from the city this morning no detailed score of the game could be obtained as he had the score book in his possession and failed to turn it in until after the paper went to press.

FREIGHT OR EXPRESS THEFT PENALTY SEVERE

Washington, D. C., March 10.—Imprisonment for five years and a fine of $5,000 is the maximum penalty imposed by the Carlin Act for the theft of merchandise from freight or express cars containing interstate or foreign shipments. Under this act, which was passed by the last Congress and is now in effect, convictions are possible even for the unlawful breaking of the seal of such a car, while prosecutions may be brought for the interstate transportation of goods known to be thus stolen. The penalties provided by the Federal Act are much more severe than those specified in the laws of various States.

Spring Opening Exposition

To Which Everyone Is Invited

There has never been such a "getting ready" in the Millinery Shop as has been going on this season, and as a result we were never so fortified for a Spring and Summer season as we are for the season just opening.

The management of the department is imbued with high ideals and is seeking inspiration from the best Parisian and American sources, keeping in most intimate touch with the best creators of headwear fashions.

Georgette, Marie Louise, Carlier and J. Evelyne Varon are chief amongst the Parisian modistes who have inspired our work—the best models they have brought out recently in Paris have been described to us quickly and the best creations they have sent to New York have been seen by us, so that we are enabled to present to you the freshest, choicest ideas in millinery available anywhere.

We challenge any metropolitan shop to surpass the hats we are ready to show you in any particular. We particularly challenge them to give you such quality and beauty at such moderate prices as we will ask.

We are striving to give every hat we produce an individuality, a character that will stand it apart from the commonplace, whether it is a hat at $7.50 or one at $50.

A word to describe a few models:

A very striking model—heavy to look at, but light as a feather, because the materials are all imported. Turban shape, close fitting. The band is made of genuine horse hair, used in a decidedly novel manner. The crown is of olive green velvet ribbon (which harmonizes with the peculiar shade of the horse hair braid), finished off in front with a dainty bow of the same ribbon. The trimming consists of two straight ostrich quills of very dark brown, with a light yellow flower. The price is $27.50.

An Imported Shape—Jaunty Tam O'Shanter crown, with close fitting brim; made of Milan straw in taupe color; trimmed with a beautiful single quill, ostrich, with unusually large flues, the whole finished off with three dainty rosebuds in the fuschia shades. The price is $22.50.

A Marvel of Richness and Beauty in All Black—the ever popular Mushroom shape, modified to meet the season's style ideas; covered with black maline, over which is placed a handsome piece of jet all-over, caught in at the brim with a novelty jet band, and trimmed with a full Paradise Bird in black; priced $100.

A simple, but very stylish hat, more on the tailored effect; made of finest quality Italian Hemp, with black velvet insertion on upper side of brim to furnish foundation for a wreath of orange colored fuschia. The trimming is a magnificent piece of imported ostrich twisted into a stickup, in Coq de Roche color. The price is $22.50.

We Reveal on This Occasion a Most Magnificent Collection of Robes, Evening and Afternoon Gowns, Suits, Coats, Waists and Other Apparel for Women and Children

Let Us Tell You of Some of the Beautiful Gowns to Be Seen in the Opening Show

An imported Robe of pale pink Cashmere de Soie with a pale blue chiffon tunic will arrest your attention as it is a most distinctive gown. The tunic is exquisitely beautified with silk rosettes, profuse gold and silver cut beads and lace inserts. It has a straight fichu effect, prettily trimmed with beads, draped with chiffon; finished in front with lace rosettes. It has a girdle and sash of satin, short sleeves of rich lases and is a most superb robe in every detail—expensive, but worth its price.

Here is an Afternoon Gown of Dorothy Blue Canton Crepe with Bulgarian net blouse—most exclusive and distinctive, with flower and hand embroidery in the rich Bulgarian colors. It has a drop front sash of lace like the blouse, of hand embroidery in floral effects and draped deep tunic skirt with rows of many buttons in the back—one of the prettiest gowns imaginable.

Another Evening Gown is of Golden Brocaded Silk Poplin—very rich, indeed, one that will be greatly admired. The skirt is draped in a most unusual way—side effect tunic, self slashed in back, with draped folded panel trimmed with balls; the waist has a wide lace yoke, trimmed with white satin buttons and cording; the girdle is of self-material; sleeves are very novel and daintily lace trimmed; a remarkably pretty creation.

One of the Suits is of Melrose Brocaded Matelasse; the coat is in a short blouse effect that is very smart, indeed; trimmed front and back in a leaf design, made of hand-made satin cords in self-shading and large buttons; the sleeves are generous and with satin cuffs; the skirt is very prettily draped; moderately priced, yet immensely effective.

Here is a Suit of Noisette Brown Crepe with a coat with blouse front and long pointed back; long lapels run to the girdle at the waist. The waist is of heavily silk embroidered chiffon over lace, and is ornamented with fancy effects of self-colored cords and buttons, and has a draped skirt in novel fashion.

Another Suit is of Taupe Charmeuse in a luxurious Mandarin blouse style, exquisitely trimmed with barabou round the neck and sleeves and ornamented with self-covered, hand-made embroidered buttons and cords; very pretty skirts; blouse lined with white messaline.

In the collection are Suits of Bengaline, Matelasse, Charmeuse, Brocade, Silk Poplin, Eponge, Ratine, Whipcord, Shepherd Checks, Serge and Bedford Cord, in Russian, Balkan and English Blouse styles, Blazer effects, Cutaway Tunics, Blouse Cutaways with pointed backs and the plainer Tailored effects, both two and three-piece models; skirts are made with draped sides, inlaid plaits, slot seams and banded effects with collars and sleeves [illegible] in a variety of new and beautiful ways.

The Dresses and Evening Gowns include beautiful models of Canton Crepe, Crepe de Chine, Crepe Voile, Faille, Silk Eponge (plain and striped), Moire, Crepe Meteor, Brocade, Charmeuse, Novelty Silks and Wool Crepe, Messaline, Foulards, imported Stripes, Embroidered Chiffon, Combination Voile and Moire, Imported Spangled Robes and Draped Combinations, Fancy Pique and Cottons, Linen Lingerie and Ratine.

MACHINISTS HEAR OF UNION LABOR

Several I. A. of W. Leaders Tell of Aims and Benefits of the Organization.

BIG CROWD IS PRESENT

Hugh V. Reilly, Samuel Young and George Preston Persuade Many to Join the Ranks of Unionists at Eagle Hall.

The beliefs of organized labor and particularly the fight being waged by the working class against the inhuman conditons existing in some establishments in various parts of the country, were discussed last night by able speakers at an open meeting of Local Lodge, No. 167, International Association of Machinists, in Eagle Hall, before a gathering of machinists. Many of them were non-union men, the majority of whom handed in applications for membership after the meeting.

Hugh V. Reilley, business agent of District No. 47, presided, and he told of the concerted efforts being made to build up the Union in Perth Amboy, Newark and other large manufacturing cities. He said the campaign has not been so active in Paterson because of the strike of the silk workers, but he predicted that within a year, every town or city in New Jersey would father well-organized lodges of the I. A. M. An earnest plea for every non-union man in the assemblage to join their ranks was made by him and he told them too that it would be the union that would in time free them from the 55 hours-week which some of them put in in a local factory.

Samuel Young, of Newark, who travels about the United States preaching the doctrines of organized labor, was the next speaker introduced. He told of the persecution of the working class of people by some of the rich. He reviewed the career of the American workman from time of apprenticeship to the time he has grown bent and grey-haired with age; when his speed and stamina has deserted him and he is replaced with new and younger blood. "It is in these times that the union helps you and becomes your beneficiary," said the speaker, "and it grills me through and through to hear some mechanics say that the union is worthless and is not worth the amount of dues a member has to pay."

Mr. Young claimed that despite statements to the contrary castes exist in this country, although not in such an open way as in some countries of the Far East. He urged every voter to exercise his influence to have the initiative, referendum and the recall, made a realized factor in the government and lawmaking of this country. Mr. Young in conclusion attacked a New York department store for the system of handling help which he said bordered on the "methods of slavery." His closing words were addressed to the non-union men and were regarding joining the ranks of organized labor. He said, "If you don't organize the union in Plainfield, the union men of other cities will make you."

The last speaker of the evening was George Preston, of Washington, D. C., general secretary and treasurer of the I. A. M. He gave some very interesting statistics showing that although the total disbursements of the grand association during the past six months were $250,347, of which $246,090 was paid in by members, $226,597 was paid out as benefits or spent in behalf of the members.

DETECTIVE W. J. BURNS TO ADDRESS FEDERATION

William J. Burns, the famous detective, will speak in this city on Thursday night, April 24, under the auspices of the Federation of Men's Church Clubs. The affair will be in the nature of a banquet to be given by the church oragnizations and will probably be held at the Park Club. The tickets will be limited to 250 and the members of the clubs will have first choice in purchasing them.

Mr. Burns is known from coast to coast through his clever detective work, and only recently in connection with running down the men connected with the Iron Workers' Union, who were found guilty in dynamiting large buildings, railroad bridges, etc., through the West, and who are now serving long prison sentences. It is expected that Mr. Burns will have something to say concerning his work among the crimnal class.

MISSION BENEFIT.

Former Senator Ernest R. Ackerman will deliver a lecture in the Y. M. C. A. Auditorium tonight, the entire proceeds of which will go to the Italian Mission in this city. The lecture will be conducted under the patronage of the First Presbyterian church.

NO PROTESTS MADE AT SEWERS' HEARING

Ordinance Embodying Contract to Be Acted Upon at April Meeting.

Another step in the plan to build a joint trunk sewer was taken at the adjourned meeting of the Common Council last night, when the proposed contract was presented by Councilman F. E. Mygatt and an opportunity was given to anyone to offer objections. The proofs of publication were also offered and filed. There were no objections and the sewer matter was continued until the April meeting.

President Clay stated the proposition to be that Plainfield proposes to join with North Plainfield and Dunellen in the building of a trunk sewer with disposal works on the Darling farm in Piscataway township. Mr. Mygatt, who explained that the proceedings were according to advice of counsel, said that no further action could be taken on the contract at that time, that an ordinance must first be introduced and then the contract. The contract will be a part of the ordinance, however. Councilmen Endress and Reville continued to vote against the sewer proposition. The meeting adjourned to Monday night, March 17, to accommodate Mayor Percy H. Stewart, who communicated with the Council that there were some matters he desired to bring before the body at that time.

ACKERMAN'S RECORD AS GLOBE TROTTER

Senator, Who Speaks Tonight, Has Covered 500,000 Miles.

Former State Senator Ernest R. Ackerman will give his illustrated lecture, "Around the World by the Way of the Panama Canal," at the Y. M. C. A. tonight for the benefit of the Italian Mission. Mr. Ackerman has a large number of valuable pictures taken by himself and the lecture should prove of unusual interest.

During the past twenty-five years, Mr. Ackerman has traveled over a half-million miles, including over fifty voyages. He has made the circuit of the globe going both eastward and westward and has visited Egypt a number of times. He also has crossed the Artic Circle and visited Russia, South America, West Indies, Mexico and the Sandwich Islands, as well as Johore, Macau, Maderia, Malta, Java and the Soudan.

Mr. Ackerman has had the good fortune to be entertained on Emperor William's yacht on Norwegian waters. He has also had the pleasure of receiving special favors at the hands of the Sultan of Turkey. In addition he has been received in special audience by the President of Mexico, the President of Venezuela and the President of Hawaii before those islands became an integral part of the United States. During his last trip around the world he was shown special marks of friendship by the Maharajah of Benaires and the Sultan of Johore.

The steamship on which Mr. Ackerman was travelling the last time he circled the globe, encountered Rojestvensky's entire fleet in the Straits of Malacca and Mr. Ackerman photographed some of the vessels of Nebogatoff's squadron at Batavia. The steamship on which he travelled from Singapore to Hong Kong ran great risks of capture while passing Kamranh Bay, two British steamships having been taken by the Russians the previous day. He passed through the Straits of Tsushima only a few days before the battle of the Sea of Japan, and was at Tokio and Yokohama during the celebration there in honor of Admiral Togo's victory.

Mr. Ackerman has been successful in securing some of the finest photographs of life in these various countries, including some instructive views of the Panama Canal, which he will show and describe in his lecture at the Y. M. C. A. tonight.

PLAN FEDERATION OF CIVIC SOCIETIES

West End Civic and Netherwood Residents Assn. Propose a Union.

Plans for organizing the various civic societies of the city into a federation was discussed at some length at the meeting of the Netherwood Residents' Association, held at Truell Hall last night. Owing to the small attendance on account of the inclement weather, no decision was reached, and the matter will be taken up at a future meeting. This question was introduced at the annual banquet of the association held several months ago and is now being discussed with a view to carrying it out along successful lines.

Thomas C. Vail, president, and Barton Davis, of the West End Civic Association, were present at the meeting and upon invitation they addressed the members on the subject of co-operation. They assured the Netherwood Residents' Association that it would have the support of the West End Association in forming a federation with other civic bodies of Plainfield.

PAID LAST TRIBUTE TO MRS. MARY EATON

John D. Rockfellow Among Those Who Sent Flowers for Woman's Funeral.

The funeral service of Mrs. Mary D. Eaton, mother of Rev. Dr. Charles A. Eaton, pastor of the Madison Avenue Baptist church, New York city, was held at 1:45 o'clock this afternoon at "Sunbright," the home of Dr. Eaton, at Watchung. There was a large gathering of relatives and friends, including many from New York, Brooklyn, and far distant points, who came to pay a last tribute to a noble life and character.

Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church, was in charge of the service, and the address was delivered by Rev. Dr. W. B. Wallace, pastor of the Temple Baptist church, Brooklyn. Rev. F. W. Hagar, assistant pastor of the Madison Avenue Baptist church, New York, also assisted in the service which was beautiful in its character. Dr. Wallace paid a deserving tribute to the departed, recalling her long life which was filled with so many good deeds and of her unceasing love and devotion to her home and those in sorrow, sickness and distress.

Perhaps, in no other way was the love and esteem for Mrs. Eaton shown to such an extent as in the wealth of floral tributes which came from all parts of the country. They comprised large wreaths, pillows, cut flowers in profusion, coming from British Columbia, Vancouver, Cleveland, Boston, New York, Philadelphia and many other points. One of the beautiful wreaths came from John D. Rockefellow, and other tributes came from the various societies and officers connected with the Madison Avenue Baptist church, New York.

During the service, Mrs. Clarice Haight, soprano soloist of the Madison Avenue Baptist church, sang "The Homeland," and then two favorite hymns of Mrs. Eaton, "Beaulah Land," and "Abide With Me," were sung by the company of mourners.

LOVING CUPS FOR TWO POPULAR MEN

Swift and Hetfield, Jr., Are Remembered as They Retire From Office.

BY DETECTIVE BUREAU

Martin O'Connor's Appointment as Assistant to Prosecutor Stein Announced—To Succeed Hetfield on April 1.

Elizabeth, March 11.—Prosecutor C. Addison Swift, whose term of office expired today, being succeeded by Alfred A. Stein, and his assistant, Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., of Plainfield, who has tendered his resignation to take effect at the pleasure of the new prosecutor, were both presented with handsome loving cups yesterday afternoon by the members of the Union County Detective Bureau, comprising John A. Gallatian, Francis V. Lowden and Joseph Buckley.

The presentations were made by Samuel Schleimer, of this city, for the detectives at the Court House, as a token of esteem and appreciation for the courtesy and good will existing between the two branches of the county government. Both Mr. Swift and Mr. Hetfield responded, thanking the men for their substantial expression of appreciation and praised the men for their faithful services. The loving cups stand about twenty-four inches in height. They are suitably engraved with the names of the retiring officials, their terms of office and the names of the donors.

Prosecutor Alfred A. Stein succeeded Mr. Swift today, taking charge of the office. When he reached his office this morning he found a wealth of flowers there, being sent by friends. One large floral piece was presented by the Union County Bar Association. It was announced today that Mr. Stein had selected Martin O'Connor, of this city, as his assistant to succeed Mr. Hetfield.

Mr. O'Connor will begin his new duties on April 1, giving Mr. Hetfield ample time to finish up the cases he now has on hand before turning over the office to his successor.

There was little for Mr. Stein to do today and he spent most of his time at the office receiving callers, who extended congratulations and wished him success in his new position.

CITY NOT LIABLE HE SAYS FOR DAMAGE DONE

Acting Corporation Counsel H. C. Runyon in a communication to the Common Council at its adjourned meeting last night gave an opinion in the matter of the complaint made by the Harberger Estate, through its counsel, William A. Coddington, regarding a surface drain at West Front and Girard avenue. The city is not liable, he says, as the drain has been allowed to exist for twenty years without any previous complaint. Unless it can be shown that the city has changed the grade of the street or has done something to cause the alleged trouble, the city cannot be held responsible, is Mr. Runyon's view.

According to the complaint, surface water is allowed to run over property of the estate, there being no other means of an outlet. Mr. Runyon's opinion was referred to the sewer committee and the matter will probably be taken up with the representative of the estate, Mr. Coddington.

MYRTLE AVENUE DUMP HAS NOT BEEN OPENED

Replying to a communication from the Common Council regarding the proposed opening of the "dump" on Myrtle avenue, against which there was a strong protest from the residents in that vicinity, Miss H. O. Mattison, registrar of vital statistics and acting health officer of the board, informed that body last night that no meeting of the board had been held since receiving the communication, but she said that there had been no dumping on Myrtle avenue and was not likely to be for the present. Miss Mattison's letter was filed.

It is understood that there are at least a dozen "dumps" about the city, any one of which can be used at the present time. Under the circumstances it would not be necessary to use the one on Myrtle avenue. In view of the strong protest it is considered unlikely that the "dump" on Myrtle avenue will be reopened.

Albert J. Leader, of Duer street, who recently fell and sustained a compound fracture of the leg, is improving at Muhlenberg Hospital, although the knitting process is very slow.

WASHINGTON ROCK BILL PASSES SENATE

Measure for Preservation of Historic Site Now Goes to the Assembly.

Trenton, March 11.—The Washington Rock Park bill, which was drafted by the Daughters of the American Revolution through the efforts of Continental Chapter, of this city, and which has the support of the State D. A. R., passed the Senate this morning, carrying an appropriation of $5,000 to be used for the development of the proposed park on the southern slope of the Watchung Mountain back of Dunellen on which is situated Washington Rock. The bill will now go to the Assembly, where it is believed it will be passed without any trouble.

The land proposed to be used for a park was purchased by Charles W. McCutchen, of North Plainfield, and given by him to Continental Chapter, D. A. R. Since then the chapter has erected a handsome suitable monument at the Rock to mark the historic spot. The local chapter took up the matter of providng a State park with the New Jersey D. A. R. and the proposition at once met with the approval of the State organization.

SAMUEL HUMPSTON DIES IN 96TH YEAR

Gangrene of Both Feet Proves Fatal to an Aged Resident.

Samuel Humpston, aged 95 years, died last night after a lingering illness. The cause of his end was gangrene of both feet. About a year ago Mr. Humpston was troubled with gangrene of one foot and by the persistent treatment the traces disappeared for a short time only to reappear in the other foot. It spread and finally both feet became affected.

Mr. Humston was born in Derbyshire, England, Feb. 15, 1818. When he was about eighteen years of age he came to America settling in New York, where he resided until 1854. Then he removed to this city with his family. He was a farmer by occupation but retired twenty years ago. He was married in 1845, in New York city. In 1873 his wife died.

Mr. Humpston is survived by three daughters, Mrs. Mary A. Vail, of Lancaster, Pa., and the Misses Millicent E. Humpton and Grace E. Humpston, and one son, Samuel E. Humpston, all residing in this city. Miss Millicent E. Humpston is the principal of the Washington School.

He attended Grace Episcopal church until recent years when his age confined him to his home. The funeral service will be held at his late home, 547 West Fronst street, Thursday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Rev. William S. McCoy, rector of Holy Cross church, will officiate. Interment will be made in Evergreen cemetery, on Plainfield avenue.

SEWERS EXTENSION HEARING DATE SET

Lines Through Four Avenues to Be Considered on April 7.

An ordinance providing for a further addition to the system of sewers through Woodland, Watson, Hillside and Prospect avenues, was introduced at the adjourned meeting of the Common Council by Mr. Endress. The measure was read for information only and was laid on the table. It was moved that a public hearing be granted on the ordinance at the regular Council meeting, Monday night, April 7.

In response to an inquiry by President Clay, Mr. Endress stated that neither he nor Mr. Reville was prepared to make a report concerning their investigation of the Board of Health. Jacob Sacher and others petitioned to have Pond place macadamized and otherwise improved. This was referred to the street committee.

MEETING POSTPONED.

The annual meeting of the Hope Chapel Home Missionary Society has been postponed indefinitely because of the death of one of its members. The meeting was originally scheduled to be held next Thursday night.

TALK ON TUBERCULOSIS.

Under the auspices of the Tuberculosis League, Dr. Edward S. Kraus addressed the employes of the Ransome Concrete Machinery Co., at noon today.

PARK COMEDY HAS MANY ASSOCIATES

Election Also of Active Membership in Organization to Produce Play.

In view of the large number of applications for membership in the Park Comedy Club, it has been decided to limit the associate membership. The success of this expansion is due to the distribution of seats for the annual spring play of the club. An associate member is required to pay $5 a year and receives for his dues two seats for the club's performance at the Plainfield theatre. These seats are allotted to the members before the public sale of tickets and insure a member not only of two good seats, but from the inconvenience of standing in line at the box office when the window is thrown open.

At the last meeting of the club these associate members were elected:

Alexander Milne, Clifford L. Baker, Archibald Cox, H. M. Fisher, Rutherford H. Towner, H. Bernard Coombe, W. L. Righter, Arthur L. Otterson, Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Lyman, H. D. Hibbard, Miss Brooks, Mrs. E. S. Hooley, Lewis A. Williams, Jr., C. Loomis Dana, Jr., William B. Nash, Mr. and Mrs. Brown Rolston, Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Abbott, Donald A. McGee, C. W. McGee, W. L. Saunders, C. W. McCutchen, Mr. and Mrs. Henry A. McGee, O. T. Waring, Augustus V. Heely, Sherman B. Joost, W. T. Pelletier, George H. Holstein, E. F. Feickert, Dr. and Mrs. F. E. DuBois, Mrs. G. W. DuBois, Miss S. P. DuBois, J. H. Howell, Henry E. Haws, J. L. Watson, A. B. Laing.

These persons have been elected as active members: Charles P Lyman, G. R. Lyman, Donald A. McGee, Charles P. Titsworth, H. M. Fisher and Leslie R. Fort.

Applications for membership may be made to any active member and will then be voted upon at the next regular meeting in April. The club this year will produce "His Lord and Master," a comedy in four acts, at the Plainfield theatre the latter part of April or early in May.

FREE LECTURES AT WASHINGTON SCHOOL

John Collier and Others to Speak at Meeting to Be Held Friday Night.

So much interest has been aroused in the plan of the Board of Education to allow the use of the public schools for educational and social purposes, especially as has been shown at the Washington School, that arrangements have been made to have three widely-known speakers come to Plainfield. The meeting will be held in the auditorium of the High School, Friday night, at 8 o'clock.

The speakers will be John Collier, secretary of the department of Recreation of the People's Institute, New York city, who will talk on "The Opening of School Buildings for School Purposes;" Frank Kiernan, supervisor of Social Centre Work, and Daniel Bergen, president of the Citizens' Committee, of Jersey City, who will tell what is being done in that city. All are invited to attend.

In many cities the people are petitioning the school boards to open the school buildings for such purposes. In this city the Board of Education has taken the initiative by granting the use of the Washington School to the friends and membeds of the night school for lectures and social dances.

Arrangements are being made for the colored people to have a night a week for similar purposes. The meetings have been most successful. Under the management of a committee, music, lectures and supervision have been furnished. Last Saturday night John M. Whiton gave an illustrated lecture on Japan, which was greatly appreciated by the audience, and next Saturday evening, Mrs. George Megrew will provide a musical entertainment which will be followed by social dancing.

FINDS DAUGHTER DEAD IN HER BED

Heart Disease Fatal to Miss Elizabeth Ryan as She Peacefully Slumbers.

FUNERAL ON THURSDAY

Her Mother Summoned Physician Who Said Girl Had Passed Away—Had Been Apparently Well Recently.

Going to the room occupied by her daughter, Elizabeth, shortly before 7 o'clock this morning to awaken her from apparent peaceful slumber, Mrs. Edward Ryan, widow, of 91 Manning avenue, found the girl dead in bed. Unwilling to believe that life was extinct although she could observe no heart motion, the frantic mother hurriedly summoned Dr. J. Hervey Buchanan, of 43 Duer street, who said death had been caused by heart trouble.

Miss Ryan had been ill some time ago but was thought to have recovered. When she did not arise at the usual time, Mrs. Ryan sought to summon her. The mother's grave fear, when no answer came, was confirmed upon the arrival of the physican who said Miss Ryan was beyond all medical aid.

Born in this city, Miss Ryan was educated in the borough public schools and she was graduated from the North Plainfield High School. She was a member of St. Joseph's Roman Catholic church and had many friends. She held a responsible position at the local branch office of the Prudential Insurance Co., and went to business yesterday in apparently good health. Besides Mrs. Ryan, a sister, Miss Edna Ryan, survive.

Funeral services will be held Thursday morning at her late home and then at St. Joseph's church, where at 9 o'clock a high mass of requiem will be celebrated. Interment will be made in St. Mary's cemetery.

MRS. EMMA BUSHBY DIES SUDDENLY OF PNEUMONIA

Mrs. Emma Bushby, wife of James Bushby, of 725 West Third street, died suddenly of pneumonia yesterday afternoon. Although she was well on in her seventies she enjoyed exceptionally good health. Mrs. Bushby was a member of Hope chapel. She was a member of the religious and philanthropic committees of the missionary society and was a member of the visiting committee of the home department of the Sunday-school.

The funeral service will be held at her late home tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock. Rev. Frederick L. Greene will officiate. Interment will be made in Hillside cemetery.

TALK ON PLAYGROUNDS.

Inclement weather caused an adjournment of the West End Civic Association's meeting scheduled to be held in the Washington School auditorium, last night, only fifteen members being in attendance when the meeting was called by President T. C. Vail. Herbert E. Parker gave a short talk to the few members present, outlining the benefits derived by the child at supervised recreation centres.

N. P. TWP. SOCIETY WORK.

Francis Bodin, secretary of the North Plainfield Township Improvement Society, at its meeting last night, gave a lengthy review of what has been accomplished by the organization since its inception three years ago. Following the business meeting, last night, a humorous sketch entitled "In Front of a Clothing Stone," was presented.

MRS. MARIE CARPONE.

Mrs. Marie Carpone, aged 28 years, wife of Dominick Carpone, of St. Mary's avenue, died at Muhlenberg Hospital, last night, following a lingering illness. She was taken to the institution on February 28. The funeral service will be held at her late home tomorrow.

BOX SOCIAL FOR SCOTCH.

How I Saved One Hundred Dollars

We are not well-to-do. My husband is a Foreman in one of the large factories, and it takes all he can earn to keep our family going. I felt though, as every wife feels, that we ought to get something in the bank for a rainy day. But we could not eat less, nor wear less, so what were we to do?

One day a neighbor told me about Larkin Co. and their plan of selling household supplies at factory prices. That if I would buy my soups, teas, spices, and other household supplies from Larkin Co. I could get just twice as much for my money. It was certainly welcome news, for our grocery bills seemed to be the biggest drain upon us.

That very night I wrote to Larkin Co. and asked them about this plan of theirs. The information they sent me was so satisfactory that I mailed my first order to them immediately. The first month of dealing this way I saved over $8, and the next month nearly $12, and I have saved $10 or $12 every month since.

We soon had $100 in the bank, and you can't imagine how relieved it makes us feel.

I wish other women would try this plan because I know how much the saving would mean to them. Why don't you write to Larkin Co., Buffalo, N. Y., for their Catalog, D-24. I know they'll be glad to send you one. Just send a postal.

MAYOR SAYS BLUE LAWS CANNOT BE ENFORCED

Elizabeth, March 11.—In response to a demand made yesterday by three clergymen representing the Elizabeth Branch of the Federated Churches of Union County, that the Sunday closing laws be enforced to the letter, Mayor Mravlag said that such a thing was impossible.

The ministers—Rev. J. B. Ferguson, Rev. Louis B. Crane and Rev. James Allen Pierson—told the Mayor that not only were saloons open, but that practically all the stores in Elizabeth did business on Sunday.

"If you stop a man from selling an orange on Sunday, you should stop a locomotive from running. It's the same thing," said Mr. Mravlag, and said further that if the ministers know of any saloon violations they should refer their complaint to the proper authorities.

BUSH FIRE CAUSES PERIL.

New Providence, March 11.—The local fire department was called out Sunday night to assist in extinguishing a fire that swept over the fields and through the woods, south, from Elkwood avenue. For a time the fire threatened the buildings on the Constantine and Meeker estate and the West Summit station of the Lackawanna. The fire had crawled up to within a few hundred feet of these places, when neighbors in the vicinity tried to fight the fire and then called on the firemen. Most of the fire was on undeveloped property of the Mutual Realty Company. Robert S. Holt, whose outbuildings and dairy were imperiled, discovered in the afternoon that the woods and field along Elkwood avenue had been set afire about every twenty five feet. The firemen extinguished the blaze, the damage being confined to the destruction of a lot of young timber and some line fences.

TRIAL DEFENSE FUND.

Hackensack, March 11.—The Italian Government has been informed that money contributed to the defence of the ten Shady Side coal dock strikers, who were recently tried for the murder of two Erie detectives, did not reach the defendants or their counsel. The Vice Consul from New York has been in Hackensack interviewing Judge Demarest, Prosecutor Wright and lawyers in the case. The Vice Consul expresses himself as satisfied that the defendants received a fair trial. The investigation concerning the missing subscriptions will be continued.

Plainfield, N. J., March 11, 1913.

WHO IS TO DECIDE?

Our esteemed contemporary in discussing the agitation for a commission government election for Plainfield convinces itself, apparently to its own satisfaction, that the plan is not needed for adoption here for the reason, as it explains, "prominent citizens of this city have looked into the commission plan and decided it had not proven a sufficient success to warrant adopting it here." Our contemporary, however, did not go on to show by what right these "prominent citizens" delegated to themselves the right to decide for all the people whether this form of government should or should not be inaugurated in our municipality, nor what binding effect their decision has on the voters who we take it are the only rightfully constituted judges in such matters.

The truth of the matter is that approximately two years ago, former Mayors Gilbert and Randolph, R. Henry Depew, David E. Titsworth and A. E. Force, as a committee appointed by the Chamber of Commerce, investigated the scheme, and finally made a report that in their opinion the time was not ripe for the adoption of the commission form of government in our city for, if we recall correctly, the report stated that it was not deemed that the plan had gotten beyond the experimental stages in the cities where it was in force. This was, in fact, the argument advanced by Mr. Gilbert. Mr. Randolph held to the view that the Walsh act is defective. Mr. Titsworth did not seem to take a decided stand either way. Messrs. Depew and Force were in favor of the scheme. Though they agreed to sign the report of the majority, Mr. Titsworth having later inclined to share the beliefs of Messrs. Randolph and Gilbert, we have it that both Messrs. Depew and Force held to their convictions, but were willing to have the matter rest for the time being.

But the point we make is that no five men, nor no one hundred men, whether they be "prominent citizens" or not, are vested with the right to decide, particularly when they are not delegated to do so by legal authority. The Walsh act expressly provides that the voters themselves, the sovereign people, shall determine whether they desire to adopt this particular form of municipal government and we have not heard it said that the voters delegated this power to a body of five men.

As to our contemporary's statement to the effect that the plan had not been considered a "sufficient success," we would like to know where there is warrant for the assertion. The Short Ballot League has the testimony of a hundred or so cities in all parts of the United States and in each instance it is demonstrated that the commission form has proven a success. Further evidence of this is shown in the fact that in no case in any one of the two hundred or more cities where the plan has been put in force has there been any attempt made to return to the antiquated, red-tape form of administration of the people's affairs.

Concerning the reference to "two ex-mayors" being members of the committee to which attention has been directed, let us say that they were Randolph and Gilbert. Randolph was mayor when Plainfield was in its swaddling clothes and his public utterances in recent years leads to the belief that things should be run much as they were when he was city executive some twenty-five years ago. Gilbert left the mayor's chair some sixteen years ago. Against these two, we put former Mayors Fisk and Moy, both avowed champions of commission government and who were outspoken in their advocacy of the plan during their terms of office. They are our two most recent mayors, Moy having succeeded Fisk and he in turn having been succeeded by the present incumbent of that office. One of the first acts of Moy, when he assumed the office was to communicate with the then Governor, Wodrow Wilson, asking him to come to Plainfield for the purpose of explaining the merits of this type of government to our people. Fisk was equally ardent in furthering the cause. But this is but an incident; what is more important is, shall the people of Plainfield be permitted to express their opinion and make their own report on the commission government idea; in other words shall the question be decided at a special election, and not be considered disposed of for them by a report of five "prominent citizens?"

Recently the Elizabeth Federation of Church Clubs appealed to Mayor Mravalag, of that city, to enforce the Sunday closing laws and the latter has made the silly reply that such a thing is impossible. He is quoted as saying in defense of his stand that "if you stop a man from selling an orange on Sunday, you should stop a locomotive from running. It's the same thing." But it is not the same thing for if the easy-going city executive will look up the law he will find that the statutes expressly permit locmotives to run on Sundays and also expressly forbid the sales of such things as oranges.

Nathan R. Leavitt, of Elizabeth, is raising a fund to purchase a player-piano and a phonograph for Bonnie Burn sanitorium and this paper will be glad to acknowledge and to transmit to him any contributions for that purpose. The inmates at the county's institution would be enabled to pass many a pleasant hour were these musical instruments provided and entertainments thus afforded would have the tendency to make them take their minds from their unfortunate physical condition.

The latest outrage perpetrated by the English women suffragists has been incendiarism, two new railroad stations near London having been fired by them. Isn't it high time that "forbearance ceases to be a virtue" and that these shameful women be dealt with the same as other criminals?

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

The "One Thousand Membership Campaign" of the First Baptist church Bible school is developing in a most satisfactory manner, the influence of the movement being already perceptible not only in increased attendance but in greatly intensified enthusiasm. An entire new class has practically been formed while several classes have received large accessions to their membership. The entire church is becoming deeply interested in the campaign.

The Young People's Society of the First Baptist church will hold a business meeting tonight, followed by a social hour, in the Bible school rooms at 8 o'clock.

The Young People's Society of St. Peter's Lutheran church will meet Thursday evening at the home of the Misses Ruschke, 431 West Sixth street.

FLANDERS PASTOR RESIGNS.

Flanders, March 11.—Rev. Dr. James E. Horn tendered his resignation as pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Flanders Sunday, to take effect May 1. The letter was read by Elder A. H. Bartley, and action on it will be taken at the annual meeting next month. Rev. John H. Brown, moderator of the session, was present and preached. During the time—less than two years—that Dr. Horn has been pastor there have been eighteen additions to the church by certificate and confession, benevolences have been increased and the various societies are active and financially strong. Dr. Horn came to this place from East Orange.

SENATOR GEBHARDT ON WOMAN SUFFRAGE

He and Others Address Local League on Progress of the Movement in N. J.

Reports from the secretary and various committees relative to the suffrage campaign in New Jersey, and the work of the propaganda which the league has still in view for this spring, were received at the meeting of the Equal Suffrage League of Plainfield and North Plainfield, at the home of Mrs. Champlain L. Riley, yesterday afternoon.

Following the business session, brief addresses were made by Miss Gebhardt, Mrs. Reynolds and State Senator William C. Gebhardt. Miss Gebhardt, who was in the Washington parade, gave a vivid picture of that spectacle, claiming for it a significance vaster than that of any other recent event. She urged upon the women of New Jersey, who already favor suffrage, an earnest campaign of conviction on behalf of the women who are yet half-hearted or indifferent to this issue.

"Beside this," Miss Gebhardt said; "we must make the men, the present voters, realize that the women do not wish to wrest from them their powers of government, do not ask to help carry the burden that belongs to the men, but only to light this burden that the men do not and can not carry and that must be neglected unless the women are allowed to help."

Mrs. Reynolds, whose work in "campaign States" has been full of interest and success, spoke in glowing terms of the recent passage of the suffrage bill at Trenton. She had only words of highest praise for the treatment from the Senators and Assemblymen throughout the entire affair; every courtesy was shown, every aid given and every pledge kept. Mrs. Reynolds proceeded to give some points concerning the work now needed in New Jersey as a campaign State. The main object is to wake up suffrage sentiment to be made known to the Senate and Assembly next winter, when the suffrage bill comes up for its second reading.

It was stated that in case of a special Constitutional convention it will be necessary to get a suffrage article into the proposed new Constitution which, if accomplished, will greatly hasten the date of "Votes for Women in New Jersey."

Senator Gebhardt expressed strong approval of the methods and results of the work done by the women this past winter and urged them to continue along the same lines with the assurance that success is sure to come and come soon.

The tone of the meeting was one of courage and good cheer and there was a certain subtle inspiration in seeing and hearing father and daughter side by side, both filled with the same deep conviction of righteousness of the cause. Miss Gebhardt, like her father, is a lawyer, and she has been very successful in the general practice of law.

The street committee was authorized to include these streets in the last ordered improved at the last meeting the $3,000 appropriated at that time being sufficient to cover all. After the confirmation, the Bishop gave the personal charge to the members of the class and he preached the sermon, taking for his text, "How can these things be?"

The prelate took occasion to compliment the rector, Rev. W. E. L. Ward, adding that during the thirty years he had been visiting the parish he had never found it in a more flourishing condition spiritually and financially.

SHOCK OF 2,400 VOLTS MAY NOT PROVE FATAL

Metuchen, March 11.—Although a 2,400-volt current of electricity passed through his body yesterday, John Whittis, of New Brunswick, will live, physicians in St. Peter's Hospital, that city, think.

Whittis, who is thirty-four years old, is employed as a carpenter by the Pennsylvania Railroad. He was working with three others on the railroad bridge at Main street, Metuchen, yesterday, when he touched a feed wire. It took the combined efforts of his companions to liberate him.

The injured man was carried to the office of Dr. Herman Gross, a short distance away, and from there to the hospital in New Brunswick in an ambulance. He has many severe burns and one side of his body is paralyzed.

ALLEGED SAFE DRILLER CAUGHT AT ELIZABETH

Elizabeth, March 11.—Samuel Staunton, forty years old, of Baltimore, is a prisoner in police headquarters here because of an interruption while he was trying to drill a hole, the police say, in the safe of Dennis Flynn's store, 231 Second street, shortly before daylight.

Staunton had a companion when he began the alleged rifling of the store, Patrolman Conboy asserts. Hearing a noise, the officer walked toward the back door of the store. As he approached, he says, a man who had been on the watch fled. The policeman said he captured Staunton at the point of his gun.

The cash drawer of the store had been robbed of $30 before the alleged safe drilling commenced. After the arrest, a kit of yeggman's tools were taken to the police station by policemen, who came in response to the call of Patrolman Conboy.

Staunton will not give a description of the companion, who is alleged to have deserted him. He will be arraigned today before Judge Mahon.

REV. DR. J. T. DICKINSON HAS CALL TO BROOKLYN

Rev. Dr. James Taylor Dickinson, formerly pastor of the North Orange Baptist church, has received a unanimous call to the pastorate of the Sixth Avenue Baptist church, Brooklyn. Dr. Dickinson was pastor of the Orange church for seventeen years, resigning nine years ago to accept a call to the First Baptist church, Rochester.

Resigning from the latter church, Dr. Dickinson spent a year in foreign travel, and has since not been engaged in pastoral work. The Orange and Rochester churches have been Dr. Dickinson's only pastorates.

E. S. WELLS, NEMESIS OF RODENTS, EXPIRES

Trenton, March 11.—E. S. Wells, inventor of a rat poison widely known, is dead at his home at Glenmoore. He was born at Morgantown, W. Va., seventy-two years ago.

When Mr. Wells and the man with whom he then worked had only a single loaf of bread between them and starvation, their last morsel of food was eaten by rats. Wells swore vengeance, and set about discovering a means to rid the world of rats.

After numerous experiments he began the manufacture of his preparation in an old barn in Jersey City. The preparation was first peddled about in the locality, but Wells had bigger ideas. Every dollar he could spare was spent in advertising, and the business grew so rapidly that at the end of four years he had an opportunity to retire with an income of $100,000 a year. He preferred, however, to continue the business himself.

In later years Mr. Wells became an enthusiastic horseman. His farm of 600 acres at Glenmore contained a model stable. Among his horses were Baron Dillon and Red Lake. He bought Baron Dillon for $1,500, and within an hour refused an offer of $5,000.

A "TIMOTHY WOODRUFF" GONE.

Edward Fitzgerald, driver for a local laundry, has reported to the local police that a package containing a white vest was stolen from one of the laundry wagons while it was standing in Park avenue on Saturday night.

"HOW TO LIVE TO BE A THOUSAND."

By Lillian Muscle.

A boy stood on the burning deck,
The star way up in the sky looked like a tiny speck;
Suddenly a roaring sound was heard,
The youth said not a word.

He stood there trembling in the breeze,
And was so cold he thought he'd freeze,
But bravely he stood the noble ship thereon,
He was the son of the great Napoleon.

A maiden wept, a mother's grey head bent in grief,
The sad, sad organ played, "Upon the Coral Reef,"
'Twas there a hero met his fate,
This story is sad to relate.

CHILD WEDDINGS.

Bombay, March 11.—Four hundred weddings were celebrated simultaneously a few days ago at Surat among members of the Lewa Kunbi caste. None of the brides was over twelve years of age, the majority being from one to seven years old, while the bridegrooms varied from three to nine. Most of the contracting parties sat or lay on the laps of their parents during the ceremony, and were given sweets to keep them quiet. The caste only celebrates weddings every ten or twelve years.

PROCTOR'S PROGRAM.

Princess Victoria, the smallest woman on earth, appears at Proctor's popular playhouse the fore part of this week. If you have not already visited this marvel do so at once. With a perfectly normal body this little creature, barely twenty-five inches high, sings, plays the piano and recites in the most approved manner. Her singing of the Irish ballad "Harrigan" in genuine Irish dialect brings down the house. Nor is Princess Victoria the sole drawing card on Proctor's great bill. Gus Williams, the dean of German comedians, who is known the country over for his impersonations and jocular vein, appears in a singing, talking and recitational sketch. His side splitting jokes are unparalleled. "The Rag Time Laundry," presented by a company of twelve is another comedy sketch in which the much ridiculed Chinaman plays a prominent part. The sketch presents a Chinese laundry before and after it has been modernized and unionized. Gene Smith, a clever banjoist, does some stunts on the stringed instrument that are unusually entertaining. Three reels of kinemacolor pictures, the first ever presented in a local playhouse, are being shown in connection with the four act program and the pictures were enthusiastically received as well they might be as they portray the scenes in their natural colors, no matter how bright or how dull.

DOVER'S DEATH RATE LOWER.

Dover, March 11.—The death rate in Dover for the first two months of the present year is fifteen less than in the same period of 1912, according to the records at the office of the registrar of vital statistics. There were six deaths in January, as against eleven a year ago. In February, 1912, there were thirteen, while last month there were but five. There have been no deaths this month, as against fourteen for March a year ago. Of the total of eleven this year, two were not residents of this place and five were less than one month old.

Good Weather For Painting
Is not over yet. There are plenty of fine days, all through the winter when painting can be done as well as in mid-summer; and it will last better, if the painter knows his trade. Twenty years has taught me how and I employ only the best mechanics, who know how to paint in winter as well as in summer.

IN WOMAN'S REALM

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

SOME SUBSTANTIAL SALADS.

WINTER vegetables may be made up into salads as attractive as they are nutritious.

A salad dressing made with cream or olive oil is nourishing. A rich mayonnaise makes the best dressing for a Lenten salad.

Handsome Dishes.

The materials for these salads should, when cut, be neat and symmetrical in shape. The ingredients should not be combined until just before serving.

Golden Salad.—Take two cupfuls of raw carrots put through the meat chopper or grated, one cupful of apples cut small and one cupful of minced celery. Toss and mix with a silver fork and cover with mayonnaise dressing. A few chopped raisins may be added and will improve the salad.

Cauliflower Salad.—Break a boiled cauliflower into flowerets, chill, season with salt, pepper, vinegar and oil, pile in the salad bowl and dress with a light mayonnaise. Garnish the base of the pile with pickled beets and parsley and stick a floweret of cauliflower on top.

Piquant Viands.

Sweet Potato Salad.—Take three large sweet potatoes, boil and cut into half inch squares. Cut up two stalks of celery. Season with salt and pepper. Pour over the vegetables a dressing made as follows: Take three tablespoonfuls of salad oil, two of vinegar, one teaspoonful of onion juice, one saltspoonful each of salt and pepper. Let the salad stand in a cold place for two hours. Garnish with pickles, olives and parsley.

If hothouse tomatoes are available try the following recipes. Slices of cold boiled potatoes may be substituted for them, however:

Mixed Salad.—Take one-fourth cupful French dressing, three medium sized tomatoes, one small green sweet pepper and one head lettuce. Select firm tomatoes, peel and slice. Remove the seeds from a fresh green pepper and slice the pod in very thin strips. Rub a small salad bowl with a bit of onion and line with crisp lettuce leaves. Arrange a layer of sliced tomatoes upon the lettuce and sprinkle with the sliced green peppers, then another layer of the tomatoes and the remainder of the green peppers. Pour the dressing over all.

EVERY KNOCK IS A BOOST, SCOOP

"MAC" SAYS

Baseball will now receive the undivided attention of High School athletes in this city and the borough, now that the interscholastic basketball league title has been decided.

Captain Monroe Good had his P. H. S. candidates out at Parker Field yesterday afternoon for their first open-air tryout. The material is unusually fine and the candidates numerous.

As soon as Frank Dunning, the N. P. H. S. baseball leader, recovers from his illness he will resume outdoor practice. The boroughites have been trying out their arms in the open-air right along so it will be no novelty to them.

Because of the fact that feminine basketball has proven so popular here during the past season, girls' baseball will probably be introduced on a firm basis this year. The N. P. H. S. maidens have already started the organization of a nine and the city High School athletes will likely follow suit.

"Doc" Doyle is scouting around for players to complete what he terms the fastest Sunday-school baseball team in this city. The material at hand certainly looks promising and Doyle will without doubt be near the top of the heap with his crew in the S. S. League in the event that they are granted a franchise.

Hope chapel's new gymnasium is the main topic of conversation among the red and blue supporters just at present. It might be well to postpone that City Championship League until after the Hope gym is completed. (Don't do it though.)

Wonder what excuse some local teams will have for not playing the chapelites when they get their new structure?

Although Hope chapel lost out in the series with the Y. M. C. A. Ajax they cherish a record that no other team, with the exception of the Plainfield High School five has hung up this season. Hope chapel has not been defeated on its home court this year.

Although a set of Y. M. C. A. athletes are dubbing themselves the "first team" they have yet to learn how to take a defeat gracefully. Because they were trimmed good and properly at Montclair Saturday night the local association boys refused to make their box score public. Pretty poor business that.

What has become of that City Basketball Championship idea? Manager E. C. Ostlin says that if Hope chapel does not make itself known pretty soon he will map out a schedule for three teams and play off the series for the title.

NETHERWOOD A. C. MANAGER COMPILING HIS SCHEDULE

One more amateur baseball team in this city is now making preparation for the opening of the 1913 season and as evidenced by the letter published below, Manager Smith will likely get a jump on other local managers in arranging his season's schedule. The Netherwood A. C. has been a particularly strong contender for amateur baseball honors in Plainfield during the past few seasons and the team this year will be no exception. Manager Smith issues the following challenge:

"Manager Smith, of the Netherwood A. C., would like to hear from all other baseball teams wishing to arrange games for the coming season. He expects to have the strongest team that ever sported the name and would like to fill his dates as soon as possible. Address, Charles Smith, 427 Orchard place, Plainfield, N. J."

RAHWAY HIGH'S BIG OPINION OF ITSELF

Claims to Have "Defeated Every Team of Merit in the State."

Having walloped Central High, of Newark, and clinched the city championship, the St. Benedict's "Prep" School basketball team is now laying claim to the scholastic championship of the State. A letter was received by Manager Andrew Brady yesterday from the Rahway High School five, offering to play a series of games for the State title.

It is probable that the first game will be played at Rahway tomorrow, but when the return game will be played has not been determined. The manager of the Newark five wished to play a game in Newark, Friday night, but the Rahwayites have a game scheduled with Battin High School on that date. The lads from Rahway have offered to play at Newark on Monday, March 17, but the St. Benedicts have not accepted this date as yet.

Rahway High claims to have defeated all the High School teams of merit in central and southern New Jersey, while the Newark lads, by virtue of their victory over Central yesterday, believe they have an undisputed claim to the northern New Jersey interscholastic championship. Their victory yesterday marked their fifteenth straight win of the season.

RUNNER WILL LAY BRICKS.

Hannes Kolehmainen has quit the running track for a while and has started work at the trade of bricklayer. The little Finn has done so much indoor work this season that his legs are beginning to feel the effects and he has decided to rest up until the outdoor season opens. When the Kolehmainen brothers arrived in this country Hannes was told through an interpreter that he could go to work at his trade when he was ready. For the first time since leaving Finland the great runner took hold of a trowel yesterday and put in a hard day's work. Kolehmainen has joined the Irish-American A. C., and will represent that club until he leaves for the Berlin Olympics.

LOCAL P. S. C. MEN WON AT MONTCLAIR

Both the First and Second Teams of Bowlers Come Back With Victories.

A party of sixteen bowlers and their friends representing the Public Service Corporation of this city went to Montclair last night in automobiles where the first and second teams of the local corporation bowled a series of contests with the first and second teams of the Montclair P. S. C. The Plainfielders returned home at an early hour this morning declaring that they were treated royally by the Montclair workers.

The local men's joy was further increased because of the fact that both of the local teams came out victoriously on the rival alleys, the first team taking three out of the four contests rolled and the second team managing to take all three. Some particularly high scores were rolled, especially by Captain Frank Evans, of the Plainfield team, and Gardner, of the home quintet. These two players were the mainstays of their team and it was largely due to their individual efforts that their respective teams made the good showing that they did. Evans brought victory to the Queen City bowlers in the very first contest by hitting the wood for a score of 218, the second was also won by Plainfield but Evans went down to his lowest level of the evening getting a mrak of 168, and the third turned out to be a Montclair victory although the local captain got back to his stride and chalked up a mark of 182. The Plainfielders made a fifth game unnecessary when they took the fourth contest with a mark of 892, Evans once more getting into the lime light, polling the highest score of the evening, 225.

The local second team chalked up scores of 723, 659 and 654 against 558, 633 and 630 respectively, scored by the Montclair seconds. No exceptionally high marks were recorded in the minor contest and the pinning was pretty even all the way.

The scores:

MAY MUZZLE BATTERS.

Asserting his players lost the Michigan Intercollegiate Athletic Association baseball championship last year because they "shied" at pitched balls, Mather, coach of Kalamazoo College, last night announced he will install a "shackle" batting cage for practice this spring. The coach says each batter will have his inside foot fastened to a chain, thus forcing him to stand up to the bat and face the pitcher.

SOMERVILLE HIGH HAS TRACK TEAM

Might Make Suitable Opponents for P. H. S.—Defeated by Rutgers Prep.

Now that the Plainfield High School athletic association has announced its intention of fostering track athletics during the coming season, the managers of the P. H. S. track team will no doubt start on the war path in search of suitable opponents. One of the few neighboring High Schools that promote this line of athletic endeavor is Somerville High School and as Plainfield has opened athletic relations with this institution in every other line of sport it might be well for the track team pilots to communicate with the Somervillians. The latter school has one of the best teams of school boy leapers and sprinters in this part of the State and the Queen City representatives will probably have to be of a high calibre in order to come out ahead in the point score.

Somerville High School tackled the strong Rutgers Prep athletes in the Ballantine gymnasium at New Brunswick Saturday afternoon and while everything was Rutgers, the Somervillians made a good showing considering the calibre of opponents they were up against and it being their first contest of the season. The summaries follow:

Standing broad jump—Schomp, first, 9 ft. 11 inches; Landsberg, second, 9 ft. 3 inches; Richter, third, 8 ft. 9inches.

Standing hop-skip-and-jump — Schomp, first, 27 ft. 1 inch; Richter, second, 26 ft. 2 inches; Abrams, third, 24 ft. 4 inches.

One-lap race—Abrams, first, 11 seconds; Roy, second, 11 2-5 seconds; Cook and Norton tied for third, 12 seconds. This event was very close, and Abrams beat Roy by 2-5 of a second, and Cook and Norton broke even on 12 flat.

Running high jump—Schomp, first, 5 ft. 2 inches; Richter, second, 5 ft. 1 inch; Abrams, third, 5 ft.

Two-lap race—Abrams, first, 22 seconds; Roy, second, 22 1-5 seconds; Runyon, third, 23 seconds.

Three-lap relay race—This was very interesting and exciting, and was won by Prep in 2 minutes and 19 seconds. Somerville's time was 2 minutes and 55 seconds. Prep's team consisted of Roy, Richter, Van-Middlesworth and Cook.

Ten-lap race—DuBois, first, 2 minutes, 24 2-5 seconds; Runyon, second, 2 minutes, 24 2-5 seconds; H. Smith, third, 2 minutes, 31 seconds.

Running broad jump—Abrams, first, 17 ft. 7 inches; H. Smith, 15 ft. 11 inches; Landsberg, third, 15 ft. 8 inches.

Y. M. C. A. GYMNASTS WILL PERFORM IN PRELIMINARY

As a preliminary performance to the Y. M. C. A.-Scotch Plains basketball game in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium Saturday night, the local association's gymnastic team will give an exhibition on the various apparatuses. Six members of the combination who have been practicing on the various moves will take part in the demonstration which will be the season's largest in this city. Many cracker jack gymnasts are enrolled at the Y. M. C. A. and the cream of this talent will perform Saturday night.

A number of difficult and hair raising stunts are on the program and the gymnasts will go through some moves never before shown here. The sextet is composed of Riley Hansen, a German turner; Anderson, Henry Brynarski, Henry Kinney, Engler and George McCombe.

KIVIAT RETIRES FROM TRACK.

Abel R. Kiviat, having won all the championships in which he has started this winter, will now hang up his shoes for the balance of the season and take a two months' rest. Within the past year he has won the American and Canadian one-mile titles, the 600 and 1,000 yards indoor championships of America and the 400 and 880 yards military titles. Kiviat's purpose in resting is to fit himself for a hard siege of training in anticipation of a match race with John Paul Jones, of Cornell, holder of the world's mile record.

N. P. H. S. GIRLS' NINE.

Efforts are being made to arouse interest in feminine basketball at the North Plainfield High School. The creditable basketball season has inspired further efforts along the athletic line and it is not unlikely that a cracker-jack feminine aggregation will be formed. If the idea comes true the boroughites will probably challenge the P. H. S. girls who have been followers of the sport for the past two years and have made some rapid advances in the national pastime.

LIDGATE GOES SOUTH.

Eugene Lidgate, the Scotch Plains' ball player, left Saturday night for Baltimore, where he will join the Baltimore Orioles of the International League. "Liddy" has been drafted to do the catching for the leaugers. He is a former captain and catcher for the Plainfield High School nine and goes to the big circuit with the well wishes of a host of admirers especially in Fanwood.

P. H. S. NINE OUTDOORS.

Captain Good, of the Plainfield High School baseball team, had a large squad of candidates working out on Parker Field yesterday afternoon taking advantage of the warm spell. This is the first time the P. H. S. ball tossers have been able to limber up outdoors and considering this fact their work was snappy and encouraging. Owing to the rain Good ordered gym drill today.

SHOT-PUTTERS NIGHT.

Physical Director E. C. Ostlin has announced the eight pound shot-put as the event for competition in the Y. M. C. A. Senior department Color League race tonight. The organization is nearing its close and all of the points that can be annexed by the contesting teams will count heavily in the race for the cup which will be presented at the league banquet a week from next Friday night.

Y. M. C. A. PRACTISE.

Physical Director E. C. Ostlin has announced a practise for the Y. M. C. A. first team tomorrow night in preparation for the opening of the city championship league. All candidates are requested to be on hand as Mr. Ostlin is desirious of polishing off some of the rough spots that were so clearly evidenced in the Montclair game Saturday night.

PRINCETON TO HAVE A UNIVERSITY CLUB

Princeton, March 11.—It was learned from official sources yesterday that Princeton will have a university club on the campus within the next two years. Klauder and Day, architects, of Philadelphia, who have done considerable designing for Princeton in the past, are at work on plans for the building and expect to submit them within two weeks. Then funds will be collected before actual work is started.

President Hibben, in his first annual report, submitted in October to the board of trustees, recommended the erection of such a building and pointed out the need for it in Princeton's social system. Since making this formal proposal he has been actively at work on the plan.

The idea was first suggested to the alumni by Howard N. Winkins, '10, at an alumni gathering in St. Louis. The primary objects of the club are set forth as a means of coordinating the offices of the publications, the dramatic, musical, debating and other organizations, and to furnish a meeting place for faculty, undergraduates and alumni where the room will be open all the time and visitors welcome always.

There will be a big lounging-room for the common use of all the men on the campus connected with the university, a grill with the same accommodations, which will also furnish regular meals the year through as cheaply as possible; billiard and pool parlors, smoking-rooms, bowling alleys, reading-room, etc.

The location of the building has not been selected as yet, but the grounds and buildings committee will take action this spring, after the plans have been submitted and examined closely. The cost of the building is contingent upon the plans submitted, a free hand having been left to the architects in their work, because the need is so great and the institution will fill so important an office. It is understood that money will not be hard to find for the building, when once a formal call is made for funds, because a number of prominent alumni stand ready to contribute largely toward this project in view of the work it will contribute to the welfare of the university.

SOMERSET VS. SOMERVILLE.

The Somerset A. C. basketball team that was defeated by the local Y. M. C. A. here two weeks ago, will play the Somerville A. C. quintet in Germania Hall, Somerville, Friday night. Their series now stands two to one in favor of the Somersets, but the Somervillians think they will be able to even matters up at this meeting.

TOMMY STILL WAITING.

Tommy Mullin, the diminutive local shortstop, is still waiting for orders to join the Petersburg team of the Virginia League by whom he has been drafted. Tommy is getting into condition by long hikes and indoor work in the High School gym and is ready to pack up and report at a moment's notice.

BASEBALL CAPTAIN ILL.

Frank Dunning, captain of the North Plainfield High School baseball team, is confined to his home with a heavy cold. He was taken ill soon after the third interscholastic game Saturday and has not been out since. Baseball practise has been discontinued at N. P. H. S. until the leader returns.

Y. M. C. A. VS. PLAINS.

Scotch Plains athletes representing the Parish House of that place, will play the Y. M. C. A. first team on the association court Saturday night. This is the second meeting of these two teams this season, the first taking place at Scotch Plains when the local boys won by a slim margin.

HELD GYMNASTIC DRILL.

As no athletic event was scheduled for the employed boys' class at the Y. M. C. A. last night, Supervisor Henri Welle led the youngsters in a calisthenic and apparatus drill, in which about thirty took part.

"BILLS" AT PATERSON.

After a series of postponements the Elks Bowling team of this city, will go to Paterson Thursday night, where they are scheduled to roll a trio of contests with the antlered pinners of that place.

Archibald Hacquer, until recently city editor of the Daily Press, who went west for the benefit of his health, arrived in Phoenix, Arizona, yesterday, where he will remain for a time. He spent Sunday at Galveston, Texas, having arrived there on Saturday afternoon, a nine days' trip by water.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur M. Harris, of Central avenue, are spending the week in New York city.

GAS FLAT RATE WAS CONSIDERED

Representatives of Municipalities Express Views on Proposed Uniform Rate.

FOR NINETY-CENT GAS

Newark Puts up Strong Opposition—Mayor Stewart and Councilman Blatz Represented City of Plainfield at Conference.

Mayor Percy H. Stewart and Councilman Francis J. Blatz were among the delegations representing between thirty and forty municipalities appearing before the Board of Public Utility Commissioners at Newark, yesterday, to express their views upon the proposition of fixing a flat rate for gas throughout the entire territory served by the Public Service Gas Company, or fixing zones or district rates based upon the cost of production and amount of consumption in the various municipalities.

The Plainfield representatives took no part in the discussion. It seemed to be the opinion that the whole matter would result in a flat rate of ninety cents for gas throughout the prescribed territory, although some of the larger cities hold that inasmuch as they use gas in such large quantities they should be entitled to some consideration over the smaller municipalities.

Before the hearing had proceeded very far it became apparent that the larger municipalities were opposed to the uniform State rate, while the smaller communities generally favored it, since it would give them the benefit of a lower rate than would otherwise be possible in the event of their being treated as separate units. There were a few exceptions in the case of small municipalities bordering upon large cities, which hoped to obtain the benefit of a low rate which might be fixed for their bigger neighbors.

In speaking against a uniform State rate, City Engineer Morris R. Sherrerd asserted that the city of Newark, for which he appeared, was in a peculiar situation in several respects regarding the gas question. He pointed out that the rights of the gas company has greater privileges in Newark than elsewhere.

MISSIONARY SOCIETY RAISED $2,300 IN YEAR

The election of officers, interesting reports and addresses comprised the features of the annual meeting of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society at the Crescent Avenue church, yesterday afternoon. There was a large attendance. Mrs. E. D. Read, the president, was in charge. The reports showed that about $2,300 was raised during the year for missions. This includes the special contributions for the new China fund.

The subject for consideration was "Korea," and inspiring papers were presented by Mrs. B. VanD. Hedges, Mrs. W. D. Murray, Mrs. Duncan W. Taylor and Mrs. Samuel T. Carter, Sr.

These officers were elected for the year: President, Mrs. E. G. Read; vice presidents, Mrs. John Gray Foster, Mrs. J. S. Zelie, Mrs. I. W. Cochran; treasurer, Mrs. W. E. Hoyt; secretary, Mrs. William H. Murray; secretary of collections, Mrs. A. V. D. Honeyman. After the meeting there was a social hour during which tea was served. Mrs. Orton G. Dale and Mrs. J. H. Brewster, Jr., poured and they were assisted in serving by a number of young women.

MACHINISTS' BALL.

Members of Plainfield Lodge, No. 167, International Association of Machinists, are looking forward to their annual reception and ball, which will take place Friday, April 4, in Sebring's Auditorium. The officers making the arrangements: President Louis Burger, Vice President Oscar Zugbauer, Recording Secretary Jerry Callahan; Financial Secretary C. W. Harrell, and Treasurer R. S. Sowden.

SUFFRAGE CAMPAIGN BEGINS IN UNION CO.

Mrs. Francis de Lacey Hyde Obtains the Co-operation of Mrs. M. J. Reynolds.

Mrs. Francis de Lacey Hyde, who is suffrage chairman for Union county, has brought Mrs. M. J. Reynolds, of Newark, to Union county for a month's campaigning and organizing in the interests of the equal suffrage amendment bill which recently passed the Legislature. Mrs. Reynolds was formerly a voter in Colorado, and participated in the successful suffrage campaign of that State and of Washington.

Mrs. Hyde gave a "suffrage dinner" at which covers were laid for sixteen Monday night. It was followed by a discussion of campaign methods in the library, at which former State Senator Gebhardt, Miss Alice Lakey, of Cranford, and Mrs. Reynolds were the speakers. Mrs. Hyde will give a similar suffrage evening March 25.

25TH ANNIVERSARY OF GREAT BLIZZARD

Forty inches of snow fell in this city twenty-five years ago today. It was the big blizzard of '88. However, there's not much danger that you will have to wade through drifts tonight or tomorrow morning, either, for the temperature at 1 o'clock this afternoon was 55 degrees and the skies were clear.

At noon on March 13, 1888, the blizzard, which set in the night before, was full grown, and the downfall had ceased. In many places about the city snow was piled up to a height of from fifteen to twenty feet and traveling afoot was almost impossible. Few vehicles were seen on the streets and the reports of the suffering and damage in the outside world could not be estimated, as all telegraphic and telephonic connections were cut off. A passenger train carrying a large number of Plainfield commuters, during the storm, was snowed under about 100 yards east of the Fanwood cut and was firmly embedded there in twenty feet of snow for twenty-four hours. The passengers succeeded in reaching the Fanwood station, and a few of them walked back to this city arriving here about 5 o'clock almost exhausted.

One of the Western Union wires was in working order between Flemington and Cranford for a few hours and the following dispatch was received from the former place after the storm had abated:

"Flemington, March 13, 1888.—Train No. 13, the Flemington express, is still stuck at Flagtown; also two engines sent to the rescue. The Lehigh Valley Road is tied up, with four engines snowbound at Flemington Junction."

The following telegram from Bound Brook to the Daily Press will explain the situation there the day after the big storm:

"Bound Brook, March 13, 1888.—In pretty bad shape. Got a number of heavy drifts around us, snow piled up in some places twenty feet high. From Elm Park Hotel to Greenbrook crossing, track is covered with twelve feet of snow, and it will take 100 men several days to shovel it off. A brakeman on the Lehigh Valley road, who was snow-bound here, froze to death last night."

Harry Brokaw, son of the late Assessor Isaac Brokaw, of North Plainfield, and Frank McConaughty, of Somerville, accomplished the seemingly impossible feat of walking from Elizabeth to Plainfield, a distance of about twenty miles which they covered in five hours.

NOT TO RE-OPEN MYRTLE AV. DUMP

Local Board of Health Heeds Protest of Residents in its Neighborhood.

REVIEW MONTH'S WORK

Twenty-five Deaths in City in February One-third of Which Were or Persons Over Seventy Years of Age.

The "dump" formerly maintained on Myrtle avenue, against the reopening of which there has been a strong protest, will not be reopened. This decision was reached at a meeting of the Board of Health held last night, when it was officially announced that the proposition has been abandoned. It was reported that a careful inspection of the properties on which dumping is being done was made during the month and it was found that in the majority of cases the "dumps" were in fair condition.

Owing to the fact, however, that burning of papers brought to the "dumps" had been prohibited, considerable difficulty was experienced in keeping the papers from being blown about the neighborhood. It was suggested that a proper method for taking care of these papers should be provided by the city, and if a municipal system of collection and disposal of household wastes was established by the city this question as well as several others would be solved.

The work of inspecting the yards was continued and 476 properties were visited. The existence of privy vaults, cesspools, stables, chickenyards and nuisances were noted. Nearly 400 permits to keep chickens have been issued this year and there are many applicants yet to be acted upon.

The board reported progress on the fly campaign and as the season advances the work will be continued more vigirously. These inspections were made during the month: Plumbing, 119; milk supply, 91; general work, 860. The registrar of vital statistics reported that 49 certificates had been received, 2 still-births, 16 marriages and 25 deaths. More than one-third of the deaths were persons over 70 years of age.

The following cases of communicable disease were reported during February: Diphtheria, 1; tuberculosis, 3; chicken-pox, 5; whooping-cough, 1; measles, 2. In connection with the above and on request of householders 21 rooms in six houses were disinfected. There were 29 cultures received and examined at the laboratory during the month. Inspection was made of 21 dairies and 2 creameries supplying milk in the city and samples of milk from regular dealers were collected and analyzed as usual. Inspection was made of 24 bakeries and the conditions from a sanitary standpoint were for the most part, very good. Sixty-three properties were visited on which toilets used by the public were located. The majority were fairly clean but many were found to be in a very dirty condition.

DEAD HERMIT'S NIECE IS FOUND AT LAST

Andrew Cullen, the hermit, who was burned to death in a shack at Fanwood on Sunday night, February 28, his body being found early the next morning, it has just been learned, left a niece, Mrs. John O'Conner, of Perth Amboy. She visited Fanwood this week and through inquiries learned the awful fate of her uncle.

In discussing the matter, she said that she had noticed newspaper stories about the death of Cullen, but his name appeared as "Collins" and his age was given as 84 years, and these statements tendered to keep her in ignorance of the true facts. Mrs. O'Connor, although living but a short distance away, had not seen her uncle for several years and had heard nothing about him.

MILLINERY DISPLAYS IN THE LOCAL SHOPS

Catchiest and Very Latest Styles in Great Array Appeal to the Women.

Women who are interested in wearing the proper style hat, and who is not, will be attracted to the spring and summer openings of the millinery shops in the city. Perhaps, never before have the shops presented such an array of millinery from which to make a selection. A woman is able, as one expressed it, to get a hat to fit any face and any purse.

Mme. Tytus has an unusually attractive display of hats and trimmings, which are admited by the large crowds. The hats represent the latest styles of every conceivable shape. The trimmings comprise the bright colos so much in vogue this season, including ostrich plumes, which predominate in the bright spring colors.

J. J. Varley, of The Paris, is showing an up-to-date line of modern millinery, under the direction of Miss Elizabeth Flanagan. The stock includes a large supply of the newest shapes, with all shades for trimmings, of which the cerise and French blue are the most popular.

Rosenbaum Brothers will have their opening Thursday, Friday and Saturday, offering a large stock of the latest shapes and a complete line of fancy feathers of the latest colors, variegated ostrich plumes, Bulgarian colors predominating, flowers, ribbon trimmings, ready-to-wear and made to order hats.

Tepper Brothers are showing an attractive display of the latest millinery, with the brilliant colors predominating, including the popular Bulgarian colored French feathers. Miss Elizabeth Rouble, the milliner, has made a careful selection, and the creations are such as permit an easy selections. The trimmings also offer cerise, King's blue, Beret, the modified Tam 'o Shanters, turbans, roll brim sailors and toques, which seem to prevail, in both the trimmed and untrimmed hats.

A. E. Force, of "The White Store," is outdoing himself this year in millinery. Miss Sallie Curns, who is in charge, has a fine display. The hats this year are smaller, with cerise predominating for color. However, a great latitude is allowed to suit individual tastes. The display of trimmings, fethers and ribbons are especially attractive, and a choice is made very easy.

The Woodhull & Martin Company is in the van when it comes to millinery and the concern is offering stylish dress and knockabout hats in all the newest shades and colorings in feathers and flowers; also a line of smart street hats, of brown, amber and cerise shades. Especially attractive are the trimmings. Miss Carolyn McVey, formerly of the Elite Millinery Company, is now connected with this department.

Daly's attractive millinery shop on East Front street, is having a very successful opening. There is to be found in the large display dress hats in all the shapes and shades, the summer girl hat, outing hats, and the trimmings include all the latest shades in flowers and ribbons; also ostrich feathers and quills. These are all designed at the shop. A feature of the opening is a large genuine French tapestry hat box, lined with white satin.

Bonn's, whose new shop on East Front street, is devoted exclusiveiy to millinery, is an attractive place for the women in search of hats. The display is unusually large. A specialty is being made of hats for young women and children, both dress and for street wear. These hats are designed by Bonn and trimmed to suit the the purchaser, while there are also a large number of trimmed hats in popular shapes and trimmings.

HOLD TEN BOYS; CHARGES SERIOUS

Youths Accused of Attempting to Wreck Trains and of Burglaries.

EVIDENCE IS DAMAGING

Two Confess and Three Admit Placing Iron on Tracks—Foul Language From Cells of the Prisoners—Arraigned Before Court.

Ten boys, ranging in ages from eleven to seventeen years, were arraigned before City Judge De Meza this morning, charged with attempting to wreck a railroad train on Saturday, March 1, and endangering the lives of passengers on the Jersey Central Railroad. The evidence submitted against them is damaging.

The youthful prisoners are members of a gang that has been terrorizing the Jersey Central authorities by their daring lawlessness. They have been accustomed to "hopping" fast moving freights and when wishing to alight, uncouple the cars, apply the brakes to the freighter they were riding on and allow the engine ahead to continue on its way with but part of the long line of cars it was hauling. This has made the danger of accidents very great and the fact that none has taken place is considered almost a miracle by the authorities.

On March 1, the boys are charged with, and they subsequently confessed, placing a large quantity of scrap iron on the locals' track at the Fanwood cut, where the tracks make a sharp curve near the Graceland bridge. The obstruction was seen by the crew of a passing "pusher" engine who removed it and averted a probable accident. Investigations immediately began.

Those arrested are Andrew Grieve, 14 years old, of 752 St. Mary avenue; Gustav Hersh, 17 years old, of West Front street; George Kennedy, 14 years old, of 124 Liberty street; James Mallek, 15 years old, of 38 Harmony street; Lorenzo McCrae, colored, 12 years old, of 643 West Fourth street; Raymond Vail, 13 years old, of 12 Duer street; Walter Holliwell, 16 years old, of 208 Spooner avenue; Leland Todd, 13 years old, 508 Watchung avenue; Louis Rosenthal, 12 years old, of 505 West Third street, and Samuel Fay, 11 years old, of 512 West Third street.

When the taking of testimony was completed, Judge De Meza reserved decision although he mentioned that confinement in the Rahway Reformatory would be the only remedy. Learning that they might be sent to a reform school until twenty-one years of age, some began crying and asked for another chance. Vail laughed and Grieve said, "Oh, I'm fourteen now, and that won't be long." When placed in cells, the boys laughed and swore at one another and threatened dire things for the ones who "squealed."

The arrest of the offenders was made through information furnished by Grieve and Hersh, who were arrested Sunday night and stand indicted on charges of burglary. They confessed having looted the establishment of the Endress Company and Scheuer's grocery store in West Front street, the New Jersey Stamp Vending Company, and other stores and factories in the vicinity.

When brought to headquarters on the breaking and entering charge the two youths also confessed to the offenses as to the railroad and implicated their companions, who were "rounded up" this morning by Detective Sergeant Flynn and Railroad Detective Charles Hans.

Questioned by the court the boys admitted their guilt. Hersh, McCrae and Vail were the ring leaders and placed the iron on the tracks after the former had remarked: "Let's wreck a train and get some money." When the obstruction was discovered Edward Mann, a section foreman, saw several boys run from the vicinity.

POLICE CHIEFS' ACTIVITY.

COTILLION ENJOYED BY A LARGE CROWD

Little People Give Fancy Dances and Favors Are Distributed.

The dancing classes of young people taught by Miss Florance, of Elizabeth, closed the season yesterday afternoon with a cotillon at the Hartridge Auditorium, it being an annual affair. There was a large attendance of the parents and friends of the young people and the attractive program was enthusiastically received. During the afternoon there was presented to Miss Florence a handsome pearl pin in appreciation of her services.

A feature of the afternoon was a fancy costume dance, Hungarian, which was given in a charming manner by the Misses Eva Stewart, Dorothy White, Lillian Claybrook, Marion Frost, Florence Small and Elizabeth Brown. The young people were obliged to respond to an encore. Another pleasing dance was the sailor's hornpipe given in true style by Helen Voorhees, Ruth Evans, Jessie McKenzie and Eva Hillman. This dance also received much applause and an encore was given by the children. All of the other dances were well given showing marked improvement over the work of the previous year.

At the conclusion of the dances favors were distributed by Miss Hartridge, Mrs. E. H. Ladd, Mrs. S. D. Lounsbery and Mrs. Arthur Otterson. Miss Florence received the congratulations of the mothers of the children and friends upon the conclusion of another successful year.

HELD CONFERENCE ON SUNDAY SCHOOLS

Plainfield Supt's Union and Graded Union Hold Joint Institute.

Interesting addresses, together with conferences on Sunday-school work were the features of an institute held in Vincent chapel of the First M. E. church, yesterday afternoon and evening, under the auspices of the Plainfield Superintendents' Union and the Graded Union of Sunday-school Teachers. Both organizations were well represented and the institute proved to be a helpful one.

Mrs. Ralph Armstrong, formerly of the First Baptist church, but now residing in New York, presided at the afternoon session, when Mrs. R. N. Waring, of Newark, gave an enthusiastic address on "Work in the Beginners' Department." Mrs. Waring has had an extensive experience in this work and her suggestions were well received.

Mrs. Armstrong then gave an excellent talk on "Intermediate Work," a subject she is particularly familiar with, having organized the department in many schools. Conferences followed on the subjects presented and at 5 o'clock there was an open parliament in which all present enjoyed a general discussion of Sunday-school work. This was in charge of R. E. Diffendorfer, Sunday-school secretary of the Missionary Educational Movement of the United States. Following the afternoon session, supper was served by the members of the Graded Union.

William C. Hubbard, as president of the Plainfield Superintendents' Union, was in charge of the evening session. After the devotional exercises Miss Frances M. Hedden, of Newark, taught the Intermediate lesson for next Sunday. The address of the evening was given by Mr. Diffendorfer, as the State superintendent of Senior Department work. His remarks pertinent to the work of the senior department were especially helpful and doubtless will be made use of in the various Bible schools of the city and borough.

SEARCH FOR RELATIVES.

A telephone message received by Chief Weiss, of the borough, last night stated that James Woodman, of 705 South Second street, was seriously ill in St. Mary's Hospital, Hoboken, and the local police were requested to notify the man's relatives. Efforts to find a family by this name at the address given have proven fruitless.

TALKS ON CATHEDRALS.

"The Cathedrals of England" was the subject of a talk delivered by Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, minister of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, at Hope chapel last night before a large audience. The lecture was conducted under the auspices of the McWilliams Bible class and a tidy sum will be realized as a result of the affair.

SUPREME COURT OUSTS THE BOARD

Small Body of Freeholders in Union County is no Longer in Office.

A FATAL TECHNICALITY

Wording on Ballot Was Defective According to Opinion Handed Down Today by Justice Swayze—the Old Board in Office.

Trenton, March 12 (Special).—In the Supreme Court today, Justice Swayze handed down an opinion setting aside the small Board of Freeholders in Union county and declaring that the old large Board shall remain in office.

The decision effects Mercer, Morris and Bergen counties as well as Union, but directly concerns Union county.

It was held that the Act of 1908 is constitutional but that the proposition was not properly presented to the voters at the election in Union county. In Union county the paragraph on the ballot referred to the old Strong act of 1902, instead of the language of the amendment, the Act of 1908 being used.

Justice Swayze shows that the question submitted in Union county was "Shall the Act reducing the number of members of the Board of Chosen Freeholders, approved March 26, 1902, be adopted?" He says that "At that time the Act of 1902 was no longer in force and could not be legally adopted." The Act of 1908 expressly provided that it should not apply to second class counties, among which is Union.

It is expected that an appeal will be taken.

RUSSELL MILLER REMAINS UNDEFEATED ON THE RINGS

With the close of the Rutgers College gymnastic team's schedule of meets, those interested in the team have begun to single out individual stars who have made "reps" for themselves on various stunts during the past season. In comparing Gaipa, the Rutgers star on the flying rings with Russell Miller, the Plainfield boy, now a member of the University of Pennsylvania team, one of the New Brunswick papers says:

"Gaipa's best work is done on the flying rings, but he lost the decision to Miller, of Pennsylvania, who is a Plainfield boy, because he fell during the performance. Miller so far has not met a defeat, and has won over those of Yale, Princeton, Haverford, and the Middies."

"Rus" Miller continues to attract attention in every meet in which he takes part. He will be well remembered by those who attended the Y. M. C. A. gym classes two seasons ago, when the U. of P. star was practicing the stunts he now makes a specialty of. Miller is particularly adept at the double and single cut offs and the backward turns.

Ferguson, of Stewartsville, and determine how many more of the thirty-five candidates will be heard before a congregational meeting is called. The pulpit has been vacant since January 26, when Rev. Dr. F. W. Johnson preached his farewell sermons and left shortly afterward to take the pastorate of the Second Presbyterian church of Rahway. There have been more than forty applicants for the vacant pulpit, of whom five have been heard.

A Money-Saving Boiler

Square Pot Boilers operate economically. Their fuel consumption is comparatively small, their heat-delivering power comparatively large. The reason of this superior economic efficiency lies in the firepot. This is square at bottom and round at top—a form that gives greatly increased radiating surface over the ordinary round pot. Here is a sectional view of the economical Square Pot Boilers.

Note the nearness of interior water-holding sections to fire—upward trend of surfaces and capacious feed door and square firepot.

This arrangement gives free steaming and develops high efficiency on little fuel.

A Pronouncement On Spring Clothes

There are only two ways to compare things — by their points of sameness and their points of difference.

There is no superiority in sameness—no advantage in tameness!

Men are strong only as they are "different." And so with clothes!

Rothberg's clothing is pre-eminent not on account of its similarity with what other stores sell, but by reason of its "points of difference."

POOR NEW ENGLAND.

That the six great States of the upper Mississippi valley have no place in the new cabinet has been a subject of some comment since the change in administration, but what seems more surprising, in the minds of the old-timers in the capitol, is the fact that New England is without representation in Mr. Wilson's official family. In leaving New England out in the cold Mr. Wilson has all but established a precedent. Only once before in the history of the nation has New England been without representation in the cabinet. This was during the administration of John Quincy Adams, from 1825 to 1829.

During the administrations of President Washington New England was represented in the cabinet by Timothy Pickering of Massachusetts, Secretary of State; Oliver Wolcott of Connecticut, Secretary of the Treasury, and Samuel Osgood of Massachusetts, Postmaster-general.

Secretaries Pickering and Wolcott continued in office under President Adams and later Samuel Dexter, of Massachusetts, Roger Griswold, of Connecticut, and Theophilus Parsons, of Massachusetts, came into the cabinet.

In Jefferson's cabinet New England's representatives were Henry Dearborn, of Massachusetts, Secretary of War; Jacob Crowninshield, of Massachusetts, Secretary of the Navy; Gideon Granger, of Connecticut, Postmaster-general, and Levi Lincoln, of Massachusetts, Attorney General.

President Madison had William Eustis, of Massachusetts, for Secretary of War; B. W. Crowninshield, of Massachusetts, Secretary of the Navy, and Gideon Granger, of Connecticut, Postmaster General.

John Quincy Adams, of Massachusetts, was Secretary of State under President Monroe and Mr. Crowninshield continued for a short time as Secretary of the Navy.

Levi Woodbury, of New Hampshire, was in the cabinet of President Jackson, serving first as Secretary of the Treasury and later as Secretary of the Navy.

Mr. Woodbury continued as Secretary of the Treasury through the administration of President Van Buren and John H. Niles, of Connecticut, served for a time as postmaster General.

Daniel Webster, of Massachusetts, was appointed Secretary of State by President W. H. Harrison and continued into the administration of Tyler. David Henshaw, of Massachusetts, also sat in the Tyler cabinet as Secretary of the avy.

George Bancroft, of Massachusetts, was Secretary of the Navy in Polk's cabinet and Nathan Clifford, of Maine, and Isaac Touchey, of Connecticut, were Attorney Generals.

Jacob Collamer, of Vermont, was the New England representative in President Taylor's cabinet, serving as Postmaster General.

Daniel Webster returned to the post of Secretary of State under President Fillmore, and Samuel D. Hubbard, of Connecticut, was Postmaster General.

Caleb Cushing, of Massachusetts, was Attorney General under President Pierce.

Isaac Toucey, of Connecticut, was Secretary of the Navy under President Buchanan and Horatio King, of Maine, served for a brief period as Postmaster General.

In the Lincoln cabinet were William P. Fessender, of Maine, secretary of the Treasury, and Gideon Welles, of Connecticut, Secretary of the Navy. Mr. Welles continued in the cabinet of President Johnson.

Grant's cabinet officers included George S. Boutwell and William A. Richardson, of Massachusetts, Secretaries of the Treasury; Ebenezer Hoar, of Massachusetts, Attorney General, and Marshall Jewel, of Connecticut, Postmaster General.

Charles Devens, of Massachusetts, Attorney General, was the New England representative in President Hayes' official family.

James G. Blaine, of Maine, was President Garfield's Secretary of State, and President Arthur had William E. Chandler, of New Hampshire for Secretary of the Navy. William C. Endicott, of Massachusetts, was Secretary of War during the first Cleveland administration.

In the McKinley cabinet John D. Long, of Massachusetts, was Secretary of the Navy. In the Roosevelt cabinet Mr. Long was succeeded by William H. Moody, also of Massachusetts, and George von L. Meyer, also a Massachusetts man, became Postmaster General.

In the Taft cabinet Mr. Meyer became Secertary of the Navy, while Frank H. Hitchcock, also hailing from Massachusetts, succeeded him as Postmaster General.

Within the last twelve years, the taxable valuations in this city have more than tripled and this not only shows how the community has prospered and grown, but also bears evidence as to how greatly has increased the work of some of the officials. Yet few of them are getting more pay for their services than they did in 1900. At that time, the taxable valuations aggregated $8,329,500 and today they are $26,203,786. Then the tax collector took in $204,905.70, and for 1912 his receipts reached $445,972.35. The total number of accounts were then 6,500 and today they aggregate 13,000. This increase over 1900 is 6,500 in accounts and in valuations it is $17,847,286. The increase in collections amounts to $241,966.65. These figures bear testimony as to how the work in the tax department has grown. It is the same in several other departments.

A newspaper man of many years' experience on some of the largest dailies in America will be the contributing editor for next Saturday.

BOGUS COLLECTOR?

Fred Lynn, of 410 Grant avenue, reported to the police that a collector was canvassing the neighborhood representing himself as a representative of the Plainfield public schools, but whom he thought was not an official employe. He described the man as being clean-shaven and a good dresser. Secretary Frank B. Clark, of the Board of Education, said no one has been authorized to make collections for the schools, to his knowledge.

Six countrymen of the departed woman acted as pall-bearers. Interment was made in St. Mary's cemetery.

The funeral of Mrs. Joanna C. Huntington, nee Meeker, who died Sunday, was held at her late home, 33 Pearl street, last night. Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, officiated. The interment was made in Hillside cemetery this morning. Numerous floral tributes from friends of the departed woman were received.

EAST INDIAN ON THE HINDU FAKES

Bombay Editor Tells of Swami Frauds.

HOW AMERICANS ARE DUPED

He Discloses Colossal Practices of False Teachers Who Come to America With Mystic, Weird Religions Which Drive Innocent Followers Insane—Came First to World's Fair.

Startling revelations of the so called Swami teachers of Indian philosophy who prey upon social America with their doctrines were made recently by Rustom Rustomjee, Parsee, of Bombay, India, editor and proprietor of the Oriental Review, the most powerful organ of public opinion in western India. Mr. Rustomjee, who is in this country to study its social, educational and industrial institutions and to set in the right light America's opinion of the Indian peoples, ridiculed society for its feting of the men who come here posing as Swamis, told of the manner in which these men despise American women upon their return to India and presented in sensational form the dangers of the Indian philosophies when preached to the young girls of America.

It was a matter of shame and regret to him, he declared, that it was necessary for him to expose those who were of his country, but he considered it his duty in view of the fact that promulgation of distorted and hideous eastern worships was driving America's womanhood into insane asylums and sanitariums. No true Swami, no true teacher of the true Hindu religion, would come to this country, he asserted, for if he came he would lose caste, and that no true Swami would think of doing.

Invaders Not Real Hindus.

The impostor Swami upon his return to India viewed the American woman as the dancing girl is viewed in his own country. Into the bargain, while here, the philosophies he disseminated included the most immoral forms of sun worship and the most revolting phases of worship of certain gods and goddesses every educated Indian is striving to tear from the minds of the common people of the east.

"The men who come here are not real Hindus," he declared. "The invasion of America began with the Chicago exposition, when an endeavor was made to show Americans what the Indian religions were. After the exposition those who came were so much pampered and feted by silly American women that they gave themselves up to a life of dissipation. One, a noted teacher, died a drunkard's death in India."

Mr. Rustomjee explained that the eastern idea of woman was at decided variance with that of America. "Your women are bosses of the families. They are the social equals of your men," he commented. "In India women are mere chattels. In America a mother is proud to have her daughter sing for friends, dance with them, entertain them. The Indian woman who dances or sings in public or in private is looked down upon. She is never received in society. She is a girl dedicated to the service of Hindu gods, permitted openly and without any disgrace to live a life of shame."

Treachery of a Swami.

Mr. Rustomjee cited the case of a "so called Swami" who at one time was on very friendly terms with a wealthy Chicago family. By the daughters of the house he was looked upon as one of their brother's friends. When he returned to India the teacher received occasional letters from the girls of the house, written innocently and full of affectionate regard for him as a religious teacher. He published these letters in certain Indian papers.

"A true Indian religious teacher," Mr. Rustomjee went on to say, "would never associate with women. He would not eat meat or drink wine. In one word, he has to live the strictly aesthetic life. In America we find the 'so called Swamis' living luxurious lives with rich Americans, eating and drinking, dressing gorgeously, traveling in Pullmans. Only the other day Mrs. Sanborne of Somerville, Mass., writing of an entertainment she had given a 'Swami,' said that he had drunk an entire bottle of brandy at one sitting and eaten two pounds of meat. He weighed 200 pounds and called himself an aesthete. He promised her diamonds, rubies and costly apparel, asked her how old she was and when she told him she was thirty-five called her 'mamma.'

Not True Philosophy.

"These 'Swamis' who come to America do not teach the real philosophy of India, the Vedanta, but they teach a mixture of German philosophy with a little eastern mysticism thrown in. They teach the worship of Christ side by side with the worship of Krishna and Kali, the latter a goddess who delights in the drinking of human blood, according to the Hindu scriptures. She has for her earrings two heads of men she has slaughtered, a necklace of skulls and a waistband of human hands. This is the goddess American women are called upon to worship."

The "Tanta" philosophy Mr. Rustomjee characterized as revolting and gruesome. The Mazda, or sun worship philosophy, he exclaimed, was like Grecian paganism.

The Sesame Club will meet tomorrow with Mrs. Duncan Taylor, of 455 West Seventh street.

OUR WOMEN TO SEE A $1,000,000 DRESS

Incidental to the appearance of Lillian Russell at the Plainfield theatre on Monday night, there will be displayed, for the first time, in this as well as other cities, a gown which, with its adornments, cost an even million dollars. And, lest this statement be construed in the light of press agency, Miss Russell freely admits that all of the jewels she wears so that she may "be draped with a million dollars," are not her own. She borowed some to carry out her idea.

Her aim in donning a dress of such queenly worth is not to present to an audience an enhancement of physical charms, but, rather, to demonstrate that simplicity is the real accompaniment of physical beauty, while over-display of jewelry is to be avoided.

Miss Russell makes dress one of the features of her new and unique entertainment, "How to Live 100 Years," a program which is founded upon the wisdom gained by this wonderful woman of the stage during the years which won her undying fame in light opera and musical comedy.

The "Fair Lillian" demonstrates, by wearing it herself, how a working girl, for an investment of $22, can convert one hat into three and one dress into a gown suitable for morning, afternoon or evening wear. She also shows how a cloak may be made into an evening cloak simply by reversing it, and she sews in the convertible lining herself, by way of demonstration.

As to the million dollar gown, Miss Russell says that conspicuity in the display of jewels is not alone an advertisement of vulgar taste, but ti is unwise, for a woman loaded down with jewels looks twice her age—is, in fact, a dowager.

The "secrets of the stage dressing room" is another feature of Miss Russell's new attraction, which she regards as a mission in life, which naturally follows the career which made her name household throughout the civilized world. By means of kinemacolor pictures, Miss Russell takes her audience with her behind the scenes, showing how the star makes up and dresses for the stage. While the pictures are being shown, Miss Russell personally explains every move.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Park Avenue Baptist church will hold an all-day sewing meeting at the church on Friday.

FOUND NEW CAPITOL OF COMMONWEALTH

Lord Denman, Governor General of Australia, Issues Proclamation.

Sydney, N. S. W., March 12.—Today is a red-letter day in the career of the Commonwealth of Australia. The day has been selected by Lord Denman, the Governor General, as the day on which to make his formal proclamation of the foundation of the capital city of the Commonwealth. At the same time the name selected for the city will be announced to the world.

Although more than twelve years have elapsed since the inauguration of the Commonwealth it was only recently that the plans for the building of a Federal capital were perfected. The Austtralian federation bill, which led to the foundation of the Commonwealth, made provision for the capital city. It provided that the federal capital should be, like Washington, federal territory, the existing capitals of the several States being excluded. It was further stipulated that the city should be established in New South Wales, but at least 100 miles from Sydney, the colonial capital.

After long deliberation a site for the city was finally selected in the district of Yass Canberra, New South Wales, about 70 miles distant from the eastern coast-line. Here will be built a city which will be the permanent seat of government of the Commonwealth of Australia, where the Federal offices will be located and where the Federal parliament will meet.

The plans for the city embody houses of parliament, so placed as to become a dominating feature of the city, residences for the Governor General and the prime minister, and also public offices comprising departments of the prime minister, external affairs, attorney general, home affairs, treasury, trade and customs, defence, and postmaster general. The plans also call for the construction of courts of justice, places of worship, mint, national art gallery, and library, state house, printing office government factories, university technical colleges, city hall, general postoffice, national museum, central railway station and yards, military barracks, criminal and police courts jail, hospitals, national theatre, central power station, gasworks, public markets, stadium, and parks and gardens.

In addition areas are to be laid out within the city for commercial, residential and industrial purposes. Provision is to be made for street railways, an adequate supply of pure water and a sewerage system. In drawing up the plans it has been assumed that the population of the city from the date of its completion will be about 25,000.

Granite is said to be available in large quantities in the territory selected for the capital, but sandstone is not obtainable except at a distance of about 100 miles. Railway transportation, however, will be provided. It is anticipated that bricks of good quality can be made locally, and there is an ample supply of material for road construction. The building of the city will afford employment for thousands of artisans and unskilled workers, which will have the good effect, it is anticipated, of relieving the present congested condition of the labor market in Sydney, Melbourne and other of the principal cities of Australia.

There is much speculation as to the name that will be given the capital. For a long time it was taken for granted that the city would be called Canberra, after the district in which it is to be located. But this seems to have been a mistake. For some time the Commonwealth Government has been receiving suggestions on the subject from many quarters. Cooktown, after Captain Cook, and Parkes, after Sir Parks, one of the founders of the Commonwealth, has been suggested. Sir George Reid, the Australian High Commissioner in London, has suggested the name Pacifica. Another suggestion is that the city be called Fisher, in honor of the present Commonwealth prime minister.

But from an apparently authoritative source it is now learned that all of these suggestions are to be disregarded in favor of a native word. Myola, a Queensland native name for a meeting place, seems to be the favorite.

Some disaffection is felt that the Government has kept the choice of a name in its own hands and not left it to the vote of the people, who might have liked to have had a voice in the selection.

FRIEDMANN'S ADDRESS.

Ottawa, Ont., March 12.—Dr. Friedmann, famous as the discoverer of a possible cure for tuberculosis, has accepted an invitation to deliver an address before the Canadian Association for the Prevention of Tuberculosis, which began its annual convention in this city today. The Duke of Connaught is also to address the convention, which will be in session two days. Hon. Adam Beck is presiding.

SHORE HOTEL IS SOLD.

Asbury Park, March 12.—The Grand Avenue Hotel, one of the oldest in the resort, was sold yesterday by John Hubbard, the owner, to Thomas A. Pullen, a local real estate speculator, for about $65,000.

FAMOUS GRAMMAR SCHOOL TWO HUNDRED YEARS OLD

Boston, Mass., March 12.—The Eliot grammar school of Boston yesterday held exercises in celebration of the rounding out of the second century of its existence. The school was founded on March 11, 1712, when the sturdy fathers of colonial Boston voted to establish a school at the north end of the town to accommodate the growing population in that section. One year later the little edifice was completed and its doors thrown open to the first scholars. The school is the oldest elementary school in the city and the second oldest free school of any kind.

The original building lasted through the period of the Revolution and was not torn down until 1792. The second building lasted until 1837 and the third persisted until 1860, when the present edifice was erected. All have occupied the same site, which is within a stone's throw of Christ's church, where Paul Revere's lanterns were hung.

Many famous men received their elementary education at the old Eliot school, among them Edward Everett, the famous statesman and orator, and Rev. Samuel S. Smith, author of "America." The past quarter of a century has seen great changes in the section of the city where the school is located, and today ninety per cent. of the pupils are the children of Italian and Jewish immigrants.

The missionary committee of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church Epworth League is arranging to hold a missionary exhibit with stereopticon lectures in the church on Thursday and Friday nights, April 10 and 11. Miss Anna Matthews is the chairman.

SCOOP THOUGHT HE HAD AN AWFUL DRAG

"MAC" SAYS

Soccerites in this city are at present planning for the opening of the season for Scotland's National Pastime. Some good games were played here last summer and a resume will be welcome to all followers of the game.

Soccer's two great controling bodies in this country have gone to war again, with the idea of winning recognition from the International Federation, which will meet at Copenhagen during the summer, as the national body in this country.

Jack Martin did not work at short for the New York Yankees in their first real game yesterday against the Jersey City International Leaguers. Young was Chance' choice for the shortfield berth.

Some more local scholastic baseball will probably be started this afternoon. The Plainfield schoolboys are holding tryouts on Parker Field when the weather permits.

Those interested in the game of basketball in this city predict that the popular indoor game will have the longest season of its history this year. Officials at the Y. M. C. A. are planning a league for the city championship which promises to be a mid-summer affair. If the league is a good one, however, interest will not lag.

Jim Thorpe, the versatile Indian, playing first base for the New York Giants, let fly with a home run at Marlin yesterday while batting against Mathewson that McGraw cried out was the longest hit in the world. The Indian is certainly solving the pitching staff even if he is not fielding in top notch style. Looks like a sure choice for pinch hitting laurels.

Appendicitis might be called a spring training disease among baseball players. There is scarcely a year that some player does not either die or approach death as a result of an attack of the dread malady. Pitcher Hanley, of the Giants, was the most recent victim. He was buried yesterday afternoon.

When you see a half column dissertation on the merits of a proposed bush league it is a sign that news is scarce.

Bowlers seem to be doing wonderous things never before heard of in that National Tourney in the West. This is another glad pastime among some sport enthusiasts, reading about bowling tournaments hundreds of miles away. We have always contended that a bowling tournament gets more interesting the farther it gets away.

Being manager of a baseball team is like being president of Mexico. It does not last long and it is a mighty tough job while it lasts. If you don't believe this ask Ernie Dorflinger or Bob Bogardus.

A sore arm heals quicker than a sore head and does less damage to a ball team. A few Plainfield ball tossers might do well to bear this fact in mind.

Hope Chapel basketball players can't seem to get the new gym idea off their minds. It will be quite a contrast to the box now in use. When the season opens next year the loyal Hope follower will marvel at the immensity of the atrium in which the basket caging fests will be conducted.

The Y. M. C. A. first team will hold its regular weekly limbering up session in the association gym tonight. All candidates are requested to be on hand ready for a stiff drill.

THREE VERY PROMISING YOUNGSTERS IN THE GIANTS' FOLD.

Although "Big Bill" Jacobson, the Giants' recruit outfielder, will be unable to play again for some days because of a sprained tendon in his heel, he, together with Demaree, the pitcher, and "Bill" Torrey, the pitcher-outfielder, has made an impression upon McGraw. Jacobson and Demaree were turned over to the Giants from Mobile. Both made good records in the Southern Association last season. "Bill" Torrey was with the Giants in 1910 as a pitcher. At that time he lacked weight and was taken ill with typhoid fever. After two years' rest he has decided to try for the big leagues again. When he first reported to the Giants at Marlin he announced that he had elected the outfield as the goal of his ambitions, but he has done so well in the box that he is now undecided and has requested McGraw to determine which place he thinks Torrey is better fitted to play.

EZRA WENZ TO RUN FOR NEW YORK A. C.

Elizabeth Schoolboy, Well Known in This City, Will Break into Fast Company.

Ezra Wenz, the well known little Elizabeth Y. M. C. A. runner, who appeared here in the Y. M. C. A. dual run held on the Mountain avenue course last spring, and who has been the opponent of Plainfield High School long distance men in the meets in which the local boys have been entered, will don the trunks of the New York Athletic Club when he graduates from Roselle High School next June. Wenz is a product of the coaching of Alvah L. Conant, formerly of this city, who was at one time captain of the Elizabeth Y. M. C. A. track team, he having been the one to start Wenz on the road to his many victories.

At the same time his old rival, Joe Myer, of the Central High School, will represent the Irish-American A. C., thus perpetuating, as it were, the friendly rivalry existing between the two runners.

Wenz was signed to run for the New Yorkers by Bernie J. Wefers, one of the best 120 yards men in his day. Bernie had been after Ezra for some time, but the schoolboy held off as he had several offers from college athletic associations. However, Wefers was persistent and he finally got the Roselle wonder to affix his name to the New York membership list.

Ezra is well thought of by the New York Athletic officials. James E. Sullivan, chairman of the A. A. U., is one of the best admirers Wenz has. He watches closely his actions and he saw to it that the High School champion's name ws inserted in the records as being the two-mile interscholastic champion.

Wenz attracted attention during his recent races in New York. The fans were pleased with his running and at one of the meets Wefers acted as referee. He studied the boy's stride and saw that, besides having wonderful running ability, he used his gray matter. This impressed Wefers so much that he took a trip to Roselle one day and urged Ezra to be a New York A. C. man. The result was not very encouraging, but Bernie was bent upon securing him and his membership, beginning next June, is the result.

"RUBE" MARQUARD WILL SIGN A LIFE CONTRACT

Rube Marquard, the New York pitcher, and Miss Blossom Seeley, who have been playing an engagement in vaudeville at a San Francisco theatre, today took out a marriage license. It is rumored that this will be Marquard's final week in vaudeville, and that he will leave in a few days for Marlin to join the other New York players.

Marquard and Miss Seeley have been partners in vaudeville since a few weeks after the close of the 1912 season. Their sketch is entitled "Nineteen Straight," referring to the record run of victories which Marquard made last season before suffering his first defeat. At the time the vaudeville tour was started, Miss Seeley was the wife of Joseph Cahan, who has since obtained a divorce from the actress, who declined to contest the suit. An escapade at Atlantic City, which brought the vaudeville partners considerable undesirable notoriety was the basis for the separation. Cahan named Marquard as co-respondent, and the pitcher is now being sued for damages. Shortly after the divorce was granted, Marquard announced his intention of marrying Miss Seeley.

Marquard has refused to make any definite assertion about his intention of joining the Giants, although he was quoted during the Winter months as making many pointed remarks about Manager McGraw and threats to retire from the game. During the last few days he has repudiated most of these interviews, but he is evidently waiting to learn what sort of a welcome is in store for him at Marlin before he decides to report. Reports from the New York training camp are that Rube will start for there early next week.

BRUNSWICK ELKS IN LINE FOR TROPHIES

With the end of the schedule in the Elks Bowling League less than two weeks off, the last scheduled games being on March 21, it looks as if the New Brunswick Elks will capture all of the leading honors. It seems almost certain that they will capture the first prize which carries with it the beautiful Perlmutter trophy, now held by Hoboken. It is almost an impossibility for them to lose the honor of having the highest team average, with which goes the Edward H. Radel Cup. In addition, Captain Walter Burton seems almost sure of capturing first prize in the individual average race, while Coyne stands an excellent chance of winning third prize.

The Brunswick Elks have but six more games to roll. The first three will be rolled against Rutherford on Thursday night. If New Brunswick gets but one game, they cannot be headed for the championship. On the other hand, Hoboken must win all their nine remaining games. They are scheduled to roll at Queensboro on Wednesday night.

Monday night the New York quintea secured two from Paterson, and Charley Starr picked up some in his strenuous race to overtake the leading Burton, but not much. He had scores of 220, 179 and 246.

Exclusive of Monday night's games, Burton was leading for 54 games, with an average of 193.28, and Starr was second with 191.31.

ANGERBAUER IS THE FLEETEST INDIAN

Godfrey Clay Wins 18 Potatoe Race in High School League.

Twenty-six warriors of the Y. M. C. A. junior department Indian League contested the eighteen potato race event in connection with that organization's activities in the association gym yesterday afternoon. Angerbauer hung up the best time, negotiating the distance in two minutes and four seconds.

The summaries:

Angerbauer, Iroquois	2.04
Leek, Sioux	2.07
